Parley Today May Form Anti-Crime Council Here

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Formation of a Washington council on law enforcement is expected to result today from a Capitol Hill meeting arranged by the House District crime investigating committee.

Committee Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.) scheduled the meeting for 4 p. m. today in the House District Committee room in the Capitol.

It is the first step, since the public crime hearings ended nearly a month ago, to work out the recommendations the Davis committee was told by the House to prepare.

Top Officials Called

Top officials of the Federal and District law enforcement agencies operating here have been called to the meeting.

Davis disclosed that a previous meeting of a similar group had been held early this year.

The group called to the meeting today may emerge as a continuing council on law enforcement with one major aim fixed as improved coordination and better liaison among the law enforcement agencies.

Another major aim of the meeting is to let the subcommittee and the law enforcement officials of the Washington community trade ideas about how best to solve problems raised by the committee's public hearings.

Seek Better Liaison

Improved liaison between two of the key law enforcement agencies, police and prosecutors was reported to be one object of a conference yesterday between U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay, head of the Federal prosecutors' staff for the District, and Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of Metropolitan police.

Both Fay and Barrett are to attend today's meeting.

Others listed by Davis as scheduled to attend the meeting are a judge of District Court, Chief Judge George P. Barse of Municipal Court and Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West.

Others slated to attend include James M. McInerney, assistant to the United States Attorney General and in charge of the Justice Department criminal division; Daniel B. Maher, special assistant corporation counsel and liaison man from the District Commissioners to the Davis committee.

Also called to the meeting are United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, Harry M. Hull, clerk of District Court and Walter F. Bramhall, clerk of Municipal Court; United States Marshal W. Bruce Matthews; Hugh F. Rivers.

There'll Be Cherry Blossoms

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post.

TREE PUT IN AS SUB—Washington's phenomenal cherry blossom trees, which were budding and threatening to burst into bloom in January, are confounding prognosticators as usual and won't be in blossom for the three-day festival starting today. But festival officials would not be outdone. They called into play two blossoming trees from a nursery hothouse. And doesn't Muriel Kirby, 19, of 7835 Old Georgetown rd., look pretty under this one? First Returns Heavily Favor Daylight Saving Time Here

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

First returns yesterday in Washington's vote on whether to have daylight saving time this summer showed an estimated 300 votes in favor.

The votes were part of the 200,000 ballots prepared by the District Commissioners to sound out the opinion of the city's usually voteless residents. The city heads directed the police to enlist block captains who would distribute and collect the ballots for later return and tabulation by police precincts.

The men in blue ran into trouble yesterday in carrying out their part.

The people, unused to voting on anything—even a preference—indicated strong reluctance to assuming the arduous tasks of democracy—the doorbell ringing and the ballot-passing.

In two precincts the man on the beat found it easier to do the canvassing himself than to enlist a block captain. Their efforts have resulted in the first returns, which indicate DST will be on top, as public hearings have shown in the past.

Reports of difficulty in finding volunteer vote-takers were received at the District Building. Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young, said some precincts had reported difficulty, but they were told to keep trying and if unsuccessful, to do the job with policemen.

In Precinct 14, Pvt. Zeno R. Wright started out bright and early to carry out Mission Vote. His area lay between Alabama ave. and the District Line, H st. to Ridge rd. se. In one block he tried every house—all 12—and could find no servant of democracy willing to feel the pulse of the neighborhood on DST.

According to Sergt. Theodore E. Namey, who is supervising the project at 14, Wright got sore after getting replies like: "I don't work for the District. I'm not getting paid to pass out these papers."

He "began to feel self-conscious about begging people to do something they should want to do, and rather than be humiliated, he started checking himself," Sergeant Namey reported.

In all he handed out and collected 121 ballots, which came out 96 for DST and 25 against.

Namey said the six best men reported thusly: Two found a "good reception"; two got "poor reception" and had difficulty finding block captains and the remaining

Trigg Sets Off Rumor of Veto Of Cotton Bill

An Administration warning against Congress voting exceptions to acreage allotments and marketing quotas for price-supported crops yesterday started a rumor that President Truman was about to veto the recently passed cotton-peanut bill.

The measure, which permits additional plantings of both price-supported cotton and peanuts, is expected soon to be followed with a bill increasing wheat acreage.

As a result of the rumors, supporters and opponents of the measure, which some farm experts predict will add 100 to 150 million dollars to this year's price support costs, bombarded the summer White House at Key West with telephone calls and telegrams.

The warning against softening restrictions was sounded by Ralph S. Trigg, head of the Commodity Credit Corporation, which operates the price-protecting scheme.

"The whole program will be jeopardized," Trigg told the House Agriculture Committee, "if too many exceptions are made—if the adjustment line is bent back too often."

Almost immediately after Trigg's testimony, Committee Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.), shot a message to President Truman.

"Your failure to sign the bill will be tragic," he said, "and will be an effective weapon in the hands of the enemies of your administration."

Cooley assured Mr. Truman there were no objections to the cotton section of the bill, which would increase cotton plantings by 1,200,000 acres. He added that the peanut section was so written as to avoid additional costs to the Government.

In Key West, Fla., where Mr. Truman is vacationing, a source close to the President told a reporter it still is "a close question" whether the legislation will be vetoed.

Navy Ship, Planes Hunt Unidentified Sub Off California

San Francisco, March 30 (U.P.).—Sighting of an unidentified submarine in California-Oregon coastal waters was announced today by the Navy, which for the first time since the war dispatched a warship to investigate such a report.

A Navy patrol plane reported seeing an "unidentified periscope" 40 miles off the northern California coast yesterday and within a few hours a fishing craft reported an unidentified undersea craft close inshore in the same general area, the Navy disclosed.

The periscope sighting was the eighth report of unidentified undersea boats in the same area in the past three months. For the first time it came from an armed forces unit—the Navy patrol plane. None of the earlier reports was ever officially verified.

The destroyer Colahan, armed with depth charges, was sent from San Francisco Bay on the 400-mile voyage north to join naval aircraft maintaining a continued alert over the area.

2 Teachers Fired for Refusal To Sign Ober Loyalty Pledges

Baltimore, March 30 (AP).—Two Baltimore school teachers who refused to sign the loyalty affidavit required of all public employes by the Ober law were dismissed from their jobs today.

They are Mrs. Helen E. Baker and Miss Vera Shank.

Under the Ober antisubversive law, each public employe of the state or its subdivisions must sign the loyalty affidavit.

Two state employes and one other Baltimore city worker—all Quakers—previously had refused to sign and had been fired.

Miss Shank also is a Quaker. She said she considered the Ober law an infringement on thought and conscience.

She said she had discussed the loyality oath last summer with German teachers while she was abroad and they told her:

"That sounds like the pledge we had to sign when Hitler came into power."

Mrs. Baker, said:

"In our present situation, any criticism of the status quo is interpreted as subversive. As a member of a minority group, I have many criticisms of the status quo, so that to sign an oath such as the Ober Pledge would in effect gag myself."

Her husband is a professor at Morgan State College for Negroes.

Professor Baker couldn't be reached, but officials at the college said tonight they have 100 percent compliance there in loyalty affida

Truman Sees Defenses at Safe Level

Key West, Fla., March 30 (AP).—President Truman said today he did not have even the slightest belief that United States defenses have fallen below the safety point.

He said, however, that there were no fundamental differences between his thinking and that of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower who raised such a question in a recent New York speech.

He said he had read Eisenhower's testimony before a Congressional committee yesterday and that he was fundamentally in agreement with Administration policy.

Told that Eisenhower had said that this country is "taking chances" by not putting more money into defenses, the President replied that was the natural feeling of any military man. He did not blame them, he said, for wanting perfection, but he had to think of the over-all economy.

Vinson to Propose Buying 607 Planes

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Procurement of 607 additional warplanes and the modernization of 299 existing aircraft will be proposed next week to keep American air power modern, Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) said yesterday.

Vinson, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, disclosed that amendments to the omnibus appropriations bill will be submitted to increase the present two-billion-dollar plane procurement fund for 1951 by $583,289,221.

The move is aimed to carry out Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's recommendation that an increase in the military budget is necessary to keep our air power up to date, said the Georgian.

In his testimony before the Senate Appropriations Committee Wednesday, Ike specifically mentioned only keeping the Air Force's 48 groups modern, declaring the present budget would not do this. He did, however, back additional funds for Navy anti-submarine forces—which include airplanes—as well as strengthening Army garrisons at airfields in Alaska.

Bulk of Funds for Navy

Vinson's amendment would give the bulk of the additional plane money to Naval aviation. It would provide an additional 200 million dollars for the Air Force, and $383,289,221—under revised estimates he gave out last night—for Navy planes.

The appropriation bill now carries $1,350,000,000 for buying 1383 new Air Force planes, and $650,000,000 for 817 new Navy aircraft. His amendment would provide for 77 more Air Force planes including medium jet bombers, fighters, helicopters and medium and heavy transports.

In addition, 71 B-29 bombers would be converted into flying tankers and 228 existing craft of various types would be converted into trainers.

The Navy funds would provide 530 more Navy planes—379 fight-

Lattimore Is Accused In Senate

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) yesterday told the Senate that Owen J. Lattimore "is a Soviet agent and also that he either is, or at least has been, a member of the Communist Party."

McCarthy went on, in a four-hour speech, to outline the contents of affidavits and the statements of prospective witnesses he had discovered in support of his charges. He said he would hand over the documents and names to the FBI.

In addition, McCarthy renewed his allegations of pro-communism with respect to State Department officer John S. Service, and Ambassador-at-large Philip C. Jessup.

And a great portion of his speech was devoted to vehement attacks on the State Department on its China policy, and its formulators. That policy and those men, he said, went straight down the Communist Party line and fulfilled its explicit objectives.

Lattimore, a Johns Hopkins University professor and authority on the Far East, yesterday said McCarthy's earlier charges—given last week in closed session to the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee and presumably much the same as he openly uttered yesterday—were "hogwash" and "an unmitigated lie."

He was interviewed briefly by the press in London, en route back to the United States from a United Nations mission in Afghanistan.

In Washington, Mrs. Lattimore, through her lawyers, dubbed the new accusations as "base, vicious, and completely without foundation."

Here is a summary of the principal evidence McCarthy talked about. It was not clear from what he said whether all or part of it was new. At one point, he said he "assumed" the FBI had it, but at other points listeners inferred he had developed hitherto unknown material.

1. A new witness, used by the Justice Department in another matter, will testify that he had been high up in Communist circles and in a position to know party members. This witness will testify that Lattimore "was known to him to be a member of the Communist Party" and subject to its strict party discipline.

Guesses were that the witness might be Louis Budenz, former editor of the Communist Daily Worker who has renounced Communism.

2. "Another document," from a source not described by McCarthy, relating that the writer met Lattimore in Moscow in the Spring of 1936 when he was "very obviously receiving instructions from the Soviet Government concerning the line which the Institute of Pacific Relations ought to follow."

Lattimore has been a prominent

House Leaders Stuck in Bog Over Irish Clause in ECA Bill

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

House leaders were stuck in a bog yesterday over the "Irish amendment" to the foreign aid bill, and they weren't sure how they could get themselves out.

They didn't know just how this election-conscious House could reverse its 99-to-66 vote of Wednesday, cutting off all Marshall Plan funds from Britain until the end of partition of Ireland.

On other foreign aid issues the Administration forces were back in full control after Wednesday's leaderless spree. They shouted down or voted down half a dozen amendments that would have hurt the Marshall Plan, including one to slash another 150 million dollars from the third-year funds.

But the "Irish amendment" wasn't such a simple matter, and the problem of disposing of it furrowed leaders' brows.

Normally a roll call in the full House is the way to knock out an amendment approved in Committee of the Whole, as the "Irish amendment" was. But in an election year not many members with Irish constituents—and there are several hundred such members—would answer to a roll call on the British side of the Anglo-Irish partition squabble.

One Democratic leader thought yesterday that there might be an agreement with the "Irish bloc" and their big-city supporters to reverse the decision on a standing vote instead of by roll call. In this way members wouldn't have to go on record one way or the other.

But the more exuberant Irish in the House may insist on a roll call. For this reason, this Democratic leader thought the bill might have to go to the Senate with the "Irish amendment" in it, thus leaving the amendment to be knocked out in the eventual Senate-House conference.

Speaker Sam Rayburn was more confident. Describing the amendment as "terribly unfortunate," the Speaker predicted that the

Symington Made Chief Of Resources

Key West, Fla., March 30. (AP).—President Truman today disclosed he is appointing Secretary of the Air Force Symington as chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

The President also announced he was naming Budget Director Frank Pace, jr., immediately as Secretary of the Army to succeed Gordon Gray.

Gray was designated to serve, until he becomes president of the University of North Carolina, as special assistant to the President to mobilize Government agencies in an effort to reduce the disparity between exports and imports.

Frederick J. Lawton, now an assistant, is succeeding Pace as Budget Director, and Elmer Statts is moving from special assistant to assistant director.

The President said he was "drafting" Symington to serve as NSRB chairman. The post has been vacant for many months.

The Senate Armed Services Committee tabled the nomination of Mon C. Wallgren, former governor of Washington state and a close pal of Mr. Truman, for that post, but the Senate later confirmed Wallgren as a member of the Federal Power Commission.

Plans are understood to be under way to strengthen the NSRB to make it one of the most important agencies of Government.

The President said Symington

'Sabotage' By Wherry And Bridges Is Charged

President Praises Some Republicans; Says He Seeks One To Succeed Jessup

Key West, Fla., March 30 (AP).—President Truman today bitterly denounced Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) and Senate Republicans associated with him for trying to "sabotage the bi-partisan foreign policy of the United States."

He described McCarthy, instigator of an investigation of alleged communism in the State Department, as the Kremlin's greatest asset in this country.

Then, he told the newsmen they could quote these words:

"The greatest asset that the Kremlin has is the partisan attempt in the Senate to sabotage the bipartisan foreign policy of the United States."

His denunciation came in a press conference on the lawn of the "winter White House" here where he served newsmen hot dogs and hamburgers.

Lauds Some of GOP

He praised the bipartisan foreign policy cooperation of Senators Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Saltonstal (R., Mass.) as well as Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of War, another Republican.

He is seeking their advice with the view to appointing an outstanding Republican as ambassador-at-large to succeed Philip C. Jessup as ace "trouble shooter" for the State Department, the President said.

A reporter wanted to know if Mr. Truman thought McCarthy was "getting anywhere" with his charges that Communists and spies infest the State Department.

The President looked grave and stern.

He said he thinks the greatest asset the Kremlin has is Senator McCarthy.

Did he care to elaborate?

"I don't think it needs any elaboration," he replied.

International Discussion

Then, for about 10 minutes, he went on with a discussion on the postwar international situation.

The United States kept all its agreements, he said, the Russians broke nearly all of them.

As the months passed, he said, the Russians instituted the cold war and made it evident the Kremlin's aim is to control the world. He referred to the blockade of Berlin as one of the cold war maneuvers.

All these things, he said, caused people to fear those who might have had some sympathy with communism. Actually, he said, the Russian government is as totali-

Federal Worker Gets Six Months On Morals Count

A 33-year-old Federal Government employe yesterday appealed a six-month sentence handed down by Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie in Hyattsville Police Court on an indecent exposure charge.

He is William Clayton Fogg, of 203 Garland ave., Takoma Park, Md., a radio technician at the National Bureau of Standards.

Fogg was arrested by two Prince Georges County detectives Wednesday on complaints from girls 7 to 10 years old who said they had been offered candy by him. The girls live in the Green Meadows area.

His attorney, Robert W. Mc lough, appealed the sentence a Judge Bowie set bond at $500.

Census takers must carry this card and show it on demand

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

The way the census-taking went yesterday is best told in Mrs. Earline Efird's graphic description of her graphic enumeration stop:

"I was so scared, my knees were knocking. I was just praying. Then to make it worse I interrupted while she was cooking dinner for out-of-town guests. . . .

"But she was so nice. She invited me right into the kitchen and I spread the forms out on the table. She had the best roast beef cooking. I practically stayed for dinner. We got along famously."

Mrs. Efird, who is 31 and lives at 701 Quincy st. ne., is an uncommonly lovely creature and it is difficult to imagine anyone slamming a door in her face.

But from the city as a whole, too, District census chiefs preliminarily reported themselves "very satisfied"—and no complaints received—with the polling of 10,000 Washingtonians by 400 enumerators yesterday.

The enumerators will meet today to discuss kinks which need working out on the basis of yesday's practice run.

The rest of the 792 enumerators, meantime, will hit the field this morning to census-take about 10,000 more citizens. They will meet this afternoon to talk about results.

The official census begins Saturday, running to April 15. But those enumerated yesterday and today will not have their noses counted again for a decade.

Bladensburg's Ex-Police Head Fired For Neglect of Duty

Policeman Henry J. Nebel was found guilty of a charge of "failing to stay on duty during official tours of duty." Council's decision, reached at 1:25 a. m., ordered him dismissed from the force effective March 31.

The Bladensburg Town Council went into closed session shortly before midnight last night to decide on malfeasance and misconduct charges brought against the town's demoted police chief, Henry J. Nebel.

In a three-hour open hearing, called at the Volunteer Fire Department, Nebel was accused of taking bribes to protect a Bladensburg resident who admitted before the council that he sold liquor illegally at his home.

He also was accused of threatening to charge the witness, 24-year-old Robert M. Brooks, with bribery if Brooks did not deny a statement he paid "protection" for selling liquor.

The third specific charge against Nebel was that he failed to implement Maryland liquor laws during the period that Brooks claims he paid "protection."

These three charges Nebel categorically denied, plus a fourth that he "failed to stay on duty during official tours of duty."

His attorney, Walter L. Green, forced Brooks under cross-examination to admit "we only have what you say of the charges."

Nebel was police chief of the Maryland community until earlier this month, when he was demoted to the rank of policeman under a council "reorganization" of the police force.

Then last week the council "temporarily" suspended Nebel, but made neither the demotion nor the suspension public.

Life Threatened, Patterson Flies From Guatemala

By the United Press

A reliable source said last night that United States Ambassador to Guatemala Richard C. Patterson, has received threats against his life in Guatemala City and plans to ask that a Marine guard be sent to the embassy there.

This was revealed as Patterson arrived here alone from Guatemala by commercial airliner and told reporters at the airport: "All I can say is that I came home for medical treatment."

Price Support Outlay Exceeds $4 Billion

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Uncle Sam has more than four billion dollars invested in farm price supports.

Ralph S. Trigg, head of the Commodity Credit Corporation that runs the price program, told Congress yesterday that on February 28, the total was $4,036,175,453.

Trigg's figure explained the recent anxiety of Agriculture Department officials for an early vote by Congress on Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan's request for another two billion dollars for the price program.

Trigg's evidence revealed that only 714 million dollars was left of the 4750 million given CCC for the farm price operation. From New Year's Day to February 28, the amount invested in the price program increased about 400 million dollars, or from 3645 million to 2036 million. This is at the rate of about 10 million dollars for every business day.

If that rate continues CCC will run out of money in a little more than three months, or in late May or early June.

Losses Not Included

These figures do not include losses—which run into the millions in potatoes alone—that the program has incurred. They include only the amount the Government has loaned on commodities in storage, or which CCC has taken over in default of loans.

Of the total, $2,229,810,015 reprensts loans advanced to farmers with storable commodities as security. The remainder, $1,806,365,438, represents the cost of commodities to which CCC has taken title.

Three commodities represent more than three-fourths of the total figure. Cotton, corn and wheat amount to about a billion dollars apiece.

All types of cotton—upland, American Egyptian (long staple) and cottonseed, total $998,348,402. Corn represents $1,024,285,125 or about 145 million increase in one month. Wheat totals $1,003,078,359.

Totals In Other Crops

The totals involved in other crops are: Flaxseed and linseed oil, $244,467,671; grain sorghums, $100,632,187; tobacco, $14,833,335; beans $92,279,619; barley, $65,856,952; peanuts, $23,320,562; soybeans, $27,227,421; oats, $29,757,538; rosin, $29,335,695.

Potatoes (not yet destroyed on February 28) $7,829,373; rice, $6,585,914; dried eggs, $101,361,973; butter, $57,670,108; dried milk, $37,532,538; wool, $27,688,394; cheese, $8,396,935; prunes, $3593,150.

Raisins, $937,061; turkeys, $1,366,923; peas, $2,208,535; turpentine, $1,225,187; lespedeza seed, $144,089; "minor items" $3,923,038.

The amount involved in the CCC program does not include hundreds of millions of dollars worth of farm commodities purchased from CCC stocks by other Government agencies. Many of these represent additional Government expenditures, such as for use of armed services in feeding the civilian populations in occupied areas, and for the Economic Cooperation Administration.

Trigg's disclosures were made in urging the House Agriculture Committee to go slow about adopting new giveaway programs to dispose of farm surpluses.

Such programs, he said, should be safeguarded "to see that they are used 'in addition to' and not 'in place of' commodities that would normally be purchased by the recipients," he said.

Otherwise, Trigg said, "(1) normal channels of trade are disrupted, with the Government taking their place in the distribution system, (2) you get no net removal of the surplus commodity from the market, and the Government will have to buy an equivalent quantity all over again."

1950 U. S. Output Rate Is Close To '48 Boom Peak, Sawyer Says

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 30 (AP).—Secretary of Commerce Sawyer said today the national output in the first three months of 1950 was close to that at the 1948 boom peak.

Furthermore, he said, "the value of total production—not only production in the industrial sector but also in distribution, agriculture, services and Government—is again moving upward."

Sawyer's comments were in a speech prepared for the American Cotton Manufacturers Institute convention.

Although he held that "the new year has begun on a note of firmness and optimism for American business," Sawyer took note of "two segments of the economy where current trends are not so favorable": declining investment for business expansion and unemployment.

He announced a Government survey just completed indicates a "continued decline of 11 percent" in business plans for plant and equipment expenditures in 1950 as compared with 1949.

"However," he said, "this decline is in line with expectations as backlog requirements are worked off, and it is insufficient to exert more than a mild influence offsetting expansionary tendencies elsewhere in the economy."

Sawyer attributed the rising trend in unemployment, which reached 4,500,000 in February, to three factors:

1. "Growth in the labor force at a somewhat more than normal rate."

2. "Rising labor productivity, which means fewer people are required to produce the same output."

3. "Failure of production as yet to expand beyond the previous peak."

He said it "remains to be seen whether the current favorable business developments result in a better-than-seasonal increase in employment and a reduction in unemployment." But he added:

"The present position of the economy may be summarized by noting that in the first quarter of 1950 the total dollar value of production was 4 to 5 percent below the peak reached in the fourth quarter of 1948.

"Since prices were lower—the consumers' price index fell 3 per cent over this period—the reduction in the physical volume of production was slight . . .

"Total production . . . is moving upward. The fact that new business received by manufacturers has been running ahead of sales thus far in 1950, together with the more fundamental factors I have touched upon, give some reason for expecting this upward movement to continue."

Slump in Outlay for New Plants Proves Less Than Expected

One of the most important of all indicators for economic forecasting, the expenditures of business concerns for plant and equipment, will not take quite so much of a downturn this year as was previously expected.

The Securities and Exchange Commission and the Commerce Department, which together make the surveys, forecast that industrial outlays of this sort in 1950 would be about 11 percent less than in 1949 and 16 percent less than in the peak year of 1948.

Earlier figures suggested that the drop would be greater—about 15 percent below 1949 and 21 percent below 1948.

The new figures, based on revised estimates from business on planned expenditures, "may indicate an increased confidence in the business situation," the SEC-Commerce report said.

Nevertheless, the prospective drop is still substantial. What is worse, it appears to be accelerating.

For the report points out that while the expected drop in business outlays for plant and equipment in the first half of this year will be only about 8 per cent below the first half of 1949, those expenditures in the last half of the year may be 14 percent below those of the last half of 1949.

This would mean that at the end of this year, the annual rate of expenditures may be 20 percent below the 1948 peak.

Conceivably, however, the drop may be somewhat less, "since there is a tendency for companies to underestimate their plant and equipment expenditures over the longer term."

In their annual report to the President and Congress last January, the Council of Economic Advisers dwelt at length on the factor of business investment as an important element in the economic picture.

In fact, the underlying worry of that report, in discussing long-term prospects, had to do with the threat of falling business investment and the serious repercussions that would then ensue.

Lehman Calls On Dairymen To Buck Oleo

Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.) caled upon the Northeastern Dairy Conference here last night to make an all-out effort to meet the threat of tax-free oleomargarine.

"Let's not blind ourselves to the facts," he told 250 dairymen from the 13 northeastern states. "Oleo is here to stay and will be taking a greater and greater share of what used to be the butter market—unless we do something about it."

The former New York Governor offered two suggestions. "Perhaps the cost of production of butter can be reduced—without reducing the income of the farmer," he said. And "perhaps some new process can be developed for the utilization of surplus milk."

Lehman urged the Department of Agriculture to give these possibilities its "fullest attention."

The price of milk has dropped 22 percent within the last two years, he pointed out, while the price of products the farmer must buy has dropped only 4 percent. "We must continue to exert every effort to halt and reverse that trend," he said.

The Northeast Dairy Association is meeting at the Hotel Statler, with the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association serving as the host organization.

This morning Senator George D. Aiken will address the conference at a panel discussion on "Expanding the Market for Milk and Dairy Products."

Senators Skeptical On Point Four Fund

Secretary Acheson gave a skeptical Senate Foreign Relations Committee its first official look yesterday at the 45 million dollar Point Four program of technical help for backward areas.

He described it as a "security measure" for Americans and as an "essentially constructive" step to show others how to improve their living standards.

With one eye on the House, where the program faces a close vote today, he warned that any whittling of the amount would have "most unfortunate results." He said the peoples of free Asia, the Middle East and other underdeveloped areas would interpret a cut in funds "as indicating a lack of interest in a program upon which they have been putting very great hopes."

The bill he submitted to the Senate committee was the same one which the House expects to vote on today as part of the combined foreign aid bill. In the House it has stiff opposition; Representative Lawrence Smith (R., Wisc.) will seek to kill it altogether, and Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.), a member of the Rules Committee, wants to cut it to 25 million dollars.

The Senate committee members were friendly to its purposes, but objected to the form of the bill that Acheson put before them. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.) was scornful of what he called the "big global phrases" in the House bill.

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), coauthor of the existing Smith-Mundt Act for the exchange of students and teachers, and Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark), author of the scholarship plan that bears his name, saw no reason why a new bill and a new organization were needed to send American technical experts aboard.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) was the most skeptical of the lot, saying that he foresaw immensely greater requests for funds under this program in future years.

"I can feel the pressure already coming through the window for vast new projects as time goes on," Connally said.

Never Big Money Program

Acheson assured him that Point Four could never become a "big money program."

"It is cooperative, which means that a considerable part of the expense should be borne by the countries with which we work," the Secretary said. "It involves salaries and expenses of people—not vast purchase of machinery and raw materials.

"Its objective is to show other people how to meet their own needs, not to attempt to meet those needs ourselves. For this reason the cost of technical cooperation will always be modest, compared with the cost of other types of foreign aid programs."

Another objection by Connally was that some of the American money would be contributed to the United Nations, together with amounts from other countries, to be spent on United Nations work in backward countries.

Acheson's answer to this was that the United Nations, and especially some of its specialized agencies, "are set up to do certain things we cannot do."

No Monopoly on Skills

"They can, for example mobilize the resources of many countries, some of which have skills that we don't have," the Secretary said. "We certainly do not claim to have a monopoly on skills. Nor do we flatter ourselves that we are superior in all fields . . .

"Moreover, some of the members of the United Nations are closer to the problems of the underdeveloped peoples than we are." And he said the United States need have no fear in contributing to U. N. programs of this kind, since the United States is amply represented in the U. N. and can help "in keeping watch over the programs."

Acheson told the committee that Point Four must be "a long-term business," although some results would not be long in coming. After all, he said, the fight for freedom and democracy was 2000 years old and would not be won in a decade.

"The question that concerns us," he declared, "is whether it will be going our way 10 years from now. And part of the answer, I am convinced, lies in the energy, the skill and the faith we put into this Point Four program."

will take over his new duties as soon as he names a successor. He couldn't answer today when asked if he had Thomas F. Finletter, former ECA chief in London, in mind.

The President said he hoped Gray could work as special assistant until about August 1 to develop a bipartisan policy aimed at reducing the dollar gap.

A White House statement said: "Mr. Gordon Gray has been designated special assistant to the President to assist the President in mobilizing and coordinating staff work within the various agencies of the Government looking toward a careful analysis of the various factors bearing on the present disparity between exports and imports.

"The President hopes that, out of the issues they reveal, there will be developed along bipartisan principles, the policies and programs which seem most likely to offer solutions to this problem.

'Mo' Captain Pleads Guilt in Neglect of Duty

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

"I . . . AM RESPONSIBLE"—Capt. William D. Brown (left), skipper of the Battleship Missouri when she ran aground January 17, faces a Navy court-martial board yesterday in Norfolk, Va. He pleaded guilty to charges of negligence and threw himself on the mercy of the court. Members of the board are (seated, from left) Capt. Leon J. Manees, Rear Admiral Albert K. Morehouse, Rear Admiral Maurice E. Curtis and Rear Admiral Stuart S. Murray

Norfolk, Va., March 30 (AP).—The former commanding officer of the battleship Missouri pleaded guilty to neglect of duty in the grounding of the vessel in an ordeal of self-accusation before a Navy general court-martial today.

"My orders put the ship aground," said Capt. William D. Brown, brushing aside the technicalities of a full defense.

Then, in measured tones, the handsome graying 47-year-old officer read to the court a statement of the anguish that was his lot after the ship truck a shoal in Chesapeake Bay January 17.

The statement was a reversal of Brown's earlier attitude—that he felt alone and deserted by his team of officers while the ship ran aground. But he shouldered full blame at the court of inquiry which recommended a court-martial and particularized on his change of view at the brief court-martial session.

Brown said he hoped his position would be an example to captains of ships and those who aspire to command everywhere.

Aside from his statement his defense rested on the testimony of four admirals under whom he once served and a plea by his Annapolis classmate and chief counsel, Capt. Chester C. Wood, that his ordeal since the grounding should be punishment enough. The flag officers called him an "outstanding" naval man.

The trial was over in 90 minutes. The court of four admirals and three captains deliberated 3 hours to reach their verdict. It will go first to Rear Admiral Allen E. Smith, commander cruisers, Atlantic fleet, who ordered courts-martial for Brown and two other top officers, on the Missouri; to the Navy judge advocate general, and finally to the Secretary of the Navy. Any of them may reduce the recommendations of the court, but none may increase any punishment the verdict calls for.

Normally the result would be announced in Washington after review by various links in the chain of command.

But Admiral Smith said late today the court's findings would be in his hands by Saturday and that they would not be announced until after the completion of the court-martial trials for two other officers on the Missouri at the time of her grounding.

Brown's wife, Betty, was in the courtroom as the officer made the statement that probably will block any further advancement in his career.

Two of Brown's subordinates aboard the Missouri also are to be judged by courts-martial. The trial of Lieut. Comdr. Frank C. Morris, navigator, is now under way. The trial of Comdr. John R. Millett, former operations officer, is to begin Friday after several postponements.

ers, 123 attack planes, 19 patrol bombers and 9 transports or other craft.

Vinson said the emphasis on Naval Aviation in his program was because the "Air Force is in relatively better shape than the Navy." Heavier increases in Air Force procurement will be needed in subsequent years, but now any further enlargement of orders for that service would require expansion of plants making USAF craft, he stated. The situation as to the Navy is different, Vinson added.

"Naval aviation on the other hand is in terrible shape," said the committee chairman, "It is withering on the vine."

To keep naval aviation modern, 2576 more combat planes must be provided now for delivery by July, 1952, said Vinson. Less than half of this number are provided for in the budget and even with his amendment the Navy will be short 521 first line combat planes by then, he declared.

The chairman of the Senate and House military appropriations subcommittees, Senators Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) and Representative George Mahon (D., Texas) have opposed the boosts proposed by Eisenhower. However, other Congressmen predicted the additional 200 million dollars for the Air Force will be voted. The Navy funds are more doubtful.

Vinson said he also was considering asking for an additional 36 million dollars for completing present authorizations for a radar fence around the United States. He said his committee was behind him on his amendments and predicted Congress would approve them.

Eisenhower Urges Aid to Universities

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower last night appealed for public support of the Nation's universities as "institutions admirably fitted to work out the problems of our times."

He spoke at a dinner of the Columbia University Alumni and Alumnae Clubs of Washington held at the Statler, and while his call for moral and financial backing was particularly aimed at Columbia graduates, it was addressed to everyone and all American universities.

The American people, said Columbia's president, get most of their advice on controversial problems from partisan politicians, who tell them that proposed solutions are either "socialism" or "reaction." In the universities, he added these questions can be carefully studied and more objective answers supplied.

Ike made only one oblique reference to his recent Congressional testimony calling for moderate enlargement of the defense budget—a hearing called so he could explain an earlier statement that we had disarmed too much.

Evidently referring to President Truman's comment on his congressional testimony, Eisenhower declared there was nothing "sancrosanct" in what he said, but that he believed it sincerely.

Attlee Vows To Carry On Despite Defeat

London, March 30 (AP).—Prime Minister Attlee today complimented the Opposition in Commons for its tactical skill in defeating his Labor Government on a minor motion last night, but emphasized "the Government proposes to carry on."

Both Laborites and Winston Churchill's Conservatives treated the Government's defeat, 283 to 257, in a light vein.

The Government received its first defeat tonight in the House of Lords, 29 to 14, but the Lords' decisions do not affect its life. The opposition voted down an amendment by a Laborite peer to give midwives exclusive rights to wear a national uniform when employed by a local government.

The Commons vote last night approved a motion to adjourn. It was obvious neither the Government nor the Opposition could regard it as a confidence test, on which the wobbly Labor Cabinet would be obliged to resign.

But Churchill, with a straight face today, asked whether Attlee had any statement.

"Last night was obviously not a major occasion," Attlee replied. "It was a vote on the adjournment and, under those conditions, certainly I do not intend to regard that as a vote of censure."

Obviously chagrined at the absence of 53 Laborite MPS which caused the Government's first defeat in the new Parliament, Attlee praised the efficiency of the opposition in rounding up maximum support.

With an over-all majority of only four in the House, the Government whips now undoubtedly will be called on to tighten discipline among Labor members.

Snow in Atlanta

Atlanta, March 30 (AP).—A few wayward flakes of snow fell here last night and nearly today. The snow melted as soon as it touched the ground.

House in a Bog Over 'Irish Amendment' to Foreign Aid Bill; Roll Call Vote Is Feared

House would not stick to it on a roll-call vote.

Has "Done Us Great Harm"

"It has probably done us great harm in the world situation," the Speaker told reporters. "I think we have all we can do without messing in the private or national affairs of other countries."

Rayburn also described as "very hurtful" the Burleson amendment compelling the use of a billion dollars of Marshall Plan funds for American farm products. This amendment by Representative Omar Burleson (D., Tex.), passed on Wednesday by 119 to 107, has the firm support of the farm bloc and may be hard to dislodge from the bill.

The House finished committee action yesterday on (1) the Marshall Plan, (2) further aid to the Far East and (3) relief for Arab refugees. The only section of the bill left for committee amendments today was the Point Four program for technical help to backward areas.

If this section is finished today, in a session scheduled to start at 11 o'clock, the House itself may vote on the entire $3,375,000,000 foreign-aid bill before adjournment tonight.

One Amendment Added

The House tentatively added only one amendment to the bill yesterday, and with Administration blessings. This one, proposed by Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.), would allow Chinese students to get jobs in this country while they are stranded away from their Communist-controlled homeland.

The bill earmarks six million dollars of unexpected China-Formosa funds for the maintenance of these students here. Under existing immigration laws, foreign students are not allowed to get employment in this country.

But Walter argued that the United States might save money if some of these students could support themselves instead of having to rely on taxpayers' grants. He assured the House that this would not change their status as student visitors, and he had the warm support of Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) and other members of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

Arab Fund Has Close Call

Representatve Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.) tried but failed to tack onto the will the proposal of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) for a nonpartisan commission to survey Europe's economic problems after 1952, when the Marshall Plan ends.

The House voted this one down by 80 to 21, after Representative John M. Vorys (R., Ohio) argued that it had no place in a Marshall Plan bill.

The $27,500,000 fund for the relief of Arab refugees had a close call. Representative Ralph Harvey (R., Ind.) proposed that this American contribution be reduced proportionately if other countries failed to pay their pledged contributions. But, by a teller vote of 75 to 64, the House kept the fund intact.

Truman Gets Plan to Ship U. S. Surplus to Chinese

Hongkong, March 30 (U.P.).—An American editor today cabled President Truman a suggestion that American farmers send their surplus to China to alleviate the worst famine in 75 years.

John Strohm, past president of the American Agricultural Editors Association, said reports reaching Hongkong indicated 10 million Chinese were in the "final throes" of starvation and that an additional 40 million were facing starvation in the next few months.

At the same time, a group of missionaries representing 25 Chinese and foreign organizations cabled the Communist Government in Peiping for advice on how they could help alleviate effects of the famine.

A spokesman for the Anglican Bishop of Hongkong, the Right Rev. Ronald Hall, said a message was sent to Communist Vice Premier Tung Pi-wu offering services to help distribute and administer food and relief.

"This action is based solely on Humanitarian grounds," the message said. "We are all nonpolitical and our neutrality cannot be doubted by any nation."

Frederick Bieri of the International Red Cross said his organization did not take part in the message, but thought the Red Cross would be interested in the outcome and might partake if Peiping replies favorably.

Strohm urged President Truman to approach Chinese Communist leaders and offer to "help the people of China in this great tragedy." He said the Communist leaders should give assurance the food would be distributed by "competent American observers . . . in order to ensure it gets to the hungry people."

Czechs Ask Return Of Fliers for Trial

Prague, March 30. (AP).—Czechoslovakia demanded today that United States authorities in Western Germany hand over eight Czechs involved in the air escape of 26 anti-Communists last week.

Two protest notes said the eight, including crewmen of the three escape aircraft, were wanted for trial on charges of kidnaping and endangering the lives of 56 others who were flown unwillingly to the American air base at Erding, Germany, last Friday. The 56 have returned here.

The controlled radio last night broadcast interviews with returned passengers accusing United States authorities in Germany of "Nazi-Gestapo methods" in their interrogations of passengers.

[In Frankfurt, American officials laughed at charges they used "Nazi-Gestapo" methods.

("No such thing occurred," said Col. Park Holland, commander of the United States Air Force depot at Erding. "Those who wanted to go back were visited by the Czech consul. "No one was in confinement at any time.")

Czechs Renew Permits For 3 Western Newsmen

Prague, March 30 (AP).—Three Western news correspondents received today a three-month renewal of their permits to work in Czechoslovakia.

The Communist government extended until June 30 the accreditations of Dana Adams Schmidt of the New York Times, Robert Bigio of Reuters and Gaston Fournier of the French Press Agency.

The government yesterday ordered the Associated Press' lone American representative in Czechoslovakia, Correspondent Nathan Polowetzky, expelled on charges of "unobjective reporting."

The three men reaccredited said they were told by Bedrich Runge, the Foreign Ministry's deputy press chief, the government is not hostile toward Western newsmen.

"We don't expect you to write propaganda," Runge was quoted. "That is not your job. We admit that Czechoslovakia is not a paradise. We expect you to be critical and analytical. But Polowetzky never ceased to attack the government."

Rio Grande Valley Fears Polio Epidemic

Edinburgh, Tex., March 30 (U.P.). An early outbreak of polio in the Rio Grande Valley has killed 10 persons so far this year and may foreshadow a record epidemic in the area, doctors said today.

The cases, now totaling 50, have appeared about two months earlier than uusual, possibly because of an extremely mild winter. Doctors said the early start may presage an epidemic worse than the 1948 scourge which struck 29 persons and killed 26.

Bonn, Saar Asked to Join Europe Body

Strasbourg, March 30 (NYHT). Formal invitations to the west German Republic and the Saarland to join the European Assembly as associate members were agreed on today by the European Council of Ministers.

Germany's suggestion, however, that she be granted some sort of "observer" membership on the Ministerial Council itself was not even discussed. It now is up to Bonn to decide action on an invitation which, from the German standpoint, will fall short of expectations.

The Ministers decided, moreover, to send duplicate letters of invitation to the two countries. Since much German opposition to joining stems from the fact that the Saarland was gaining similar recognition, the whole situation is threatened if the invitation is brought before the West German Bundestag.

As an associate member, Germany is expected to be invited to send 18 delegates to the session of the Assembly in mid-July. The Saarland would have three delegates.

Plan to Fly U. N.'s Flag Is Rejected

Geneva, March 30 (AP).—The United Nations Trusteeship Council—with the Soviet Union absent due to a walkout on the Chinese dispute—defeated a proposal to hoist the United Nations flag over trust territories in two tie votes today.

The measure, bitterly contested by all powers administering trust territories except the United States, had been approved by the U. N. General Assembly last November by 48 to 5, with 4 abstentions. It had been sent to the Trusteeship Council for final action.

Proponents of the measure tried unsuccessfully to have the second vote put over to the next session of the Council.

The United States was the only administering power to vote for the measure. Voting with the United States were Iraq, China, Dominican Republic and the Philippines. Opposed were Australia, Belgium, France, New Zealand and the United Kingdom.

Administering authorities, excepting the United States, said local conditions made the flying of the United Nations flag impracticable.

[The United Press reported that the Trusteeship Council will take a final vote Monday on a statute to put Jerusalem under international control.]

Hague Court Rules Against 3 Satellites

The Hague, the Netherlands, March 30 (AP).—The International Court of Justice, in its first test of peace treaty provisions of World War II, ruled today that Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria must follow those provisions in settling disputes with western nations.

The court gave an advisory opinion requested by the United Nations Assembly. The United States and Britain charged the three Communist countries had ignored human rights guarantees in the treaties.

The charges were based on prosecutions of the type revealed in the trial of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty in Hungary and similar cases involving prominent churchmen and other persons in Bulgaria and Romania.

The court gave an 11-to-3 decision, the Russian, Polish and Yugoslav judges dissenting. The court—a basic organ of the United Nations—ruled:

1. That diplomatic exchanges between these three states and "certain allied and associated powers" disclosed disputes subject to the provisions for settlement contained in the treaties.

2. That Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria are obligated to carry out the provisions of the articles in the peace treaties for the settlement of disputes, including the appointment of representatives to the treaty commissions.

The court did not rule on whether the allied and associated powers can take action if the three governments refuse to cooperate. It will consider this matter only if the appointments of representatives to an investigating commission have not been effected by the three countries within one month from today.

Sawyer Backed Lee, Senate Probe Told

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer as recently as last month decided that "no security restrictions" were needed against Michael J. Lee, a department official, Senate loyalty investigators were told yesterday.

Undersecretary Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney gave this testimony to a Senate Commerce subcommittee looking into charges by Senator Malone (R., Nev.) that Lee should be fired as a bad security risk.

Assistant Commerce Secretary Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., told the senators Tuesday the Lee case had been reopened on the basis of additional information furnished by the Civil Service Commission. He said hearings started by the department's loyalty board on March 9 are not yet completed.

Lee heads the Far Eastern division of the department's Office of International Trade. Malone claims Lee is Russian-born and was rejected three times for American citizenship.

Whitney, who has submitted his resignation to President Truman in order to return to his private affairs, appeared as acting head of the department. Sawyer is out of the city.

At one point, when asked whether he would hire such a man as Lee, Whitney replied on the strength of what he had read about him and what Malone had said, assuming it was correct, "I'd personally not put Lee in a position where he might gossip."

He added, however, that he had little to do with the loyalty program. He said lots of people can't keep secrets, but this is no "particular aspersion" on them or damaging to their character.

Sometimes, he went on, "when we talk about a person being a poor security risk, we are just saying that he is a fellow who can't keep a secret."

Senator Bricker (R., Ohio) said he did not feel it was "just a question of gossip" in Lee's case. The record showed, he added, that Lee had been turned down for citizenship three times and the chief reason given was that he was "not attached to the principles of the Constitution."

Matthew Hale, department solicitor, rejoined that when Lee was granted citizenship, on a fourth application in 1941, the court made a "final finding" that he was of good moral character and was attached to the principles of the Constitution. He said "that is more of a certificate of good character than most Americans have."

Whitney said Secretary Sawyer gave Lee a clean bill twice—once last year when he passed on a loyalty board recommendation that a careful study be given to Lee's fitness to hold a position with access to confidential material, and again last February.

Whitney and Hale told Malone they did not know what reasons the board gave for requesting the careful study. Hale said even if he did he could not disclose them without violating President Truman's order requiring loyalty files be kept confidential.

Malone said that Lee had been given a job that permitted him to determine when and how exports to China should be made, despite that a "security block" had been put against him when employed by the wartime Foreign Economic Administration.

Personal
To Women With Nagging Backache

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Friends, AVC Cite Danger in Anti-Red Bill

The Society of Friends and the American Veterans Committee said yesterday legislation aimed at curbing Communists might hit them, too.

They said on some issues, like championing civil rights and liberties, they take about the same stand as Communists. As a result, they said they might be charged with violations if the anti-Red bill became law.

Spokesmen for the organizations at a hearing by the House Un-American Activities Committee were Michael Straight, national chairman, and Leonard Nikoloric, an attorney, for AVC; and Harrop A. Freeman, a Cornell University professor, representing the Friends committee on national legislation.

All three questioned the constitutionality of the Mundt-Ferguson-Nixon bill, which among other things would require members of the Communist Party and Communist fronts to register.

"The thing that is basically objectionable," Freeman said, "is the extent to which it departs from the whole philosophy of our Government, . . . the concept that you cannot coerce people in their beliefs."

Nikoloric said the bill would provide an "illusion of security, favorable to Joe Stalin."

Straight said AVC has made a successful fight against Communist infiltration, but the anti-Communist bill would have been of no help.

"We think the Communist Party is on the run in this country," he said. "We think it can be kept on the run by constant pressure and prosperity."

State Mental Officer To Take Oath Monday

Baltimore, March 30 (AP).—Maryland's new commissioner of mental hygiene, Dr. Clifton T. Perkins, will take office Monday.

The department of mental hygiene said today arrangements are being made for the former Massachusetts mental health commissioner to be sworn in at the Baltimore County courthouse at Towson.

Dr. Perkins has called a meeting of the superintendents of State mental institutions for 2 p. m. Monday at Rosewood State Training School.

McCarthy Is Aiding Kremlin, With Sabotage, Truman Says

tarian as Hitler's Germany and Franco's Spain.

They're all the same, he said; they are police state governments.

The government of Russia isn't communism, he reiterated, it is totalitarianism.

He said he instituted a loyalty program in 1947 and only about 205 of nearly 2,200,000 employes left the Government.

Mr. Truman said the real reason for McCarthy's attacks, and he associated Senators Bridges (R., N. H.) and Wherry (R., Nebr.) with them, is political, that the Republican policy committee is backing them, and that they are trying to find an issue on which they can win control of Congress this year.

"They are trying to ride a dead horse, called isolationism," he said, after failing with such issues as "statism" in New York and "the welfare state."

They are perfectly willing to sabotage the bipartisan foreign policy of this country, said Mr. Truman.

He described the attempt as a fiasco.

He said he was fed up with what's going on.

Sharply, he added that the Republican Policy Committee of the Senate had indorsed McCarthy's antics, but without the support of level-headed Republicans like Senators Vandenberg and Saltonstall and Stimson and others.

This is a dangerous situation, Mr. Truman said. The Republicans could find another issue on the domestic scene. He said he was going to meet them on any issue and that he will see that the people get all the facts.

Dean Archeson, Mr. Truman said solemnly, will go down in history as one of the greatest Secretaries of State.

Philip Jessup, just promoted to special assistant and adviser to Acheson, is able and distinguished.

The President said McCarthy's charge that Owen Lattimore, former State Department associate, is a top Russian agent, is silly on the face of it.

Mr. Truman said the Republican he will have named to succeed Jessup will do the same type of work as Jessup on a world policy program and on a foreign policy team.

He said Senator Vandenberg's suggestion for the appointment of a Republican to hold a key place in the State Department had been under consideration and discussion, and that a decision will be made shortly.

Several men are under consideration, he added. It would be nothing unusual. The assignment would not be to assist on Asiatic or European policy covering the whole globe. The idea is to get all peoples to agree without shooting each other.

McCarthy Calls Lattimore 'Soviet Agent, Communist'

3. An affidavit from presumably still another person relating that the night before six persons on the editorial staff of the magazine Amerasia were arrested for unlawful possession of some 60 Government documents, many of them of high secrecy classification, two of the persons were at Lattimore's house in Baltimore.

The affiant says he was there, and met Service and Lieut. Andrew Roth with Lattimore. He states that the three of them "spent a great deal of time by themselves, discussing certain papers or manuscript" and that "their actions seemed strange at the time."

Service was never indicted in the Amerasia case, which took place in 1945. The case against Roth was later dropped.

4. Another statement, presumably from a different affiant, setting forth substantially the same facts. When the writer "later asked Lattimore for an explanation, Lattimore stated that they had been declassifying secret documents in favor of some friends; that Lattimore stated this was a common Washington practice; that Lattimore further stated that Roth and Service were arrested because of a feud they had with some people in Washington."

Photostat of Letter

5. A photostat of a letter written by Lattimore in 1943, when he was with the Office of War Information, to his superior, and marked "secret."

"It directs the recipient to get rid of all the Chinese in OWI who were loyal to either the Nationalist government or Wang Ching-wei," McCarthy said. Wang Ching-wei was the Japanese puppet ruler of China.

In the letter, Lattimore then issued instructions to recruit personnel for OWI from the "shareholders of the New China Daily News," McCarthy said. He called this a Chinese Communist newspaper in New York, and implied it had connections with other Communist Chinese papers of the same name in the Orient.

In the letter, McCarthy alleged, Lattimore said that one Dr. Chi should be retained because Chi was loyal to him, Lattimore. McCarthy said that Dr. Chi's son is CH'ao-ting Chi, who now awaiits passage to this country as the United Nations representative of the present Chinese Comunist government.

Former Red General

6. An affidavit from "a former general in the Red Army" who will testify that in conversations in Moscow in 1935 or 1936, a top Russian intelligence officer told him he was having excellent success in getting good intelligence information through the Institute of Pacific Relations.

The Russian intelligence officer also told the general, according to McCarthy's version of the affidavit, that Communists had taken over the IPR and, "in connection with this, he particularly mentioned Owen Lattimore" and another man not now in the Government but who spent some time with Lattimore in OWI.

7. Another affidavit of a man who was an editor of two papers in China, stating that Lattimore was the leader "in several pro-Russian student uprisings in China."

About one-third of the Senate was in attendance when McCarthy began to speak. Within an hour, several more Senators were at their desks, particularly on the Republican side. But the four-hour grind was wearing and at the end only a few legislators were on the floor.

The galleries were packed for the speech, however, and stayed that way for an hour or more. But they too thinned out markedly after that.

Three or four times, McCarthy was engaged in spirited exchanges. The first was when Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) asked why he would not put the full 1943 letter from Lattimore into the record. Why read only part of it, he asked.

It is "highly inconsistent" to read only those parts specially selected that might possibly be "out of context," Tobey said.

Other persons whom McCarthy has accused have in their rebuttals demonstrated that McCarthy had done precisely that—taken statements out of context, or given only part of the story.

Senator Lehman (D., N. Y.), took up the charge. McCarthy said the document was secret and he did not want to expose it.

Why was he so "delicate" about that, Lehman retorted, when he was engaged in "damaging and blackening" the reputation of a man in public.

Ugly Personal Habits

McCarthy replied that some of the documents — although apparently not the letter under discussion—revealed ugly personal habits on the part of some of the people involved. "Would the Senator care to step over and see them?" McCarthy asked.

Lehman hesitated and the galleries, clearly pro-McCarthy, laughed and applauded.

Lehman smiled and then walked over to stand in front of McCarthy's desk, his hand outstretched. McCarthy's refused to give him the papers, and stuffed them back into a brief case.

Another, and angrier bit of repartee came when Senator McMahon (D., Conn.) asked whether McCarthy would say that four other persons he previously accused—Judge Dorothy Kenyon, Mrs. Esther Brunauer, Haldore Hanson and Jessup—were "traitorous individuals."

McCarthy parried for a bit. Then he said McMahon congratulated Jessup when he had finished rebuttal testimony last week before the Senate investigating committee. Had the House Un-American Activities Committee done that when Alger Hiss finished his rebuttal testimony last year, Hiss would now be framing American foreign policy, McCarthy jibed.

Question on FBI Attitude

McCarthy was challenged heatedly by Senators Chavez (D., N. Mex.) and Humphrey (D., Minn.) why the FBI had not started the Lattimore case off to court if it had, as McCarthy said he assumed, all of this evidence.

McCarthy responded that FBI director Hoover could reason from his experience in the Amerasia case, where a Federal Attorney allegedly told a jury there was no evidence of espionage, that there wasn't any use in trying to get action against Lattimore.

Did that answer, Chavez and Humphrey shouted, mean that McCarthy thought Hoover was in a conspiracy with the State Department and White House to obstruct justice? Would not Hoover resign rather than submit to suppression where the security of the United States was at sake?

McCarthy insisted Hoover had only one job, to compile evidence, and that it was up to someone else to porsecute the cases.

Navy Cough Syrup

From time to time McCarthy took a swig from a small brown medicine bottle. He laughingly assured his colleagues that it was cough syrup—"a Navy preparation, by the way." McCarthy was a Marine during the war.

In space, McCarthy devoted only about one-half of his speech to the Lattimore case.

For the rest, in searing attacks on Jesaup and Secretary of State Acheson, McCarthy argued that at best they were dupes of Lattimore.

He spent much of his time asserting the argument that the State Department China policy followed a line advocated by Lattimore which coincided with the Communist Party line.

The decision not to support Chiang Kai-shek and to accept the coming to power of the Communist forces was just what Russia wanted and planned, he repeated.

Acheson's Press Club Speech

At the end, he took Acheson's Press Club speech earlier this year and asserted that it paralleled in ideology Lattimore's "Communist line" writings in his recent books about the Far East.

After his speech, McCarthy said he would give all his evidence to the FBI today. He said he would not give it to the Senate Subcommittee, set up to look into his charges, as long as it kept "investigating me" instead of his accusations.

Whatever evidence McCarthy has on Lattimore will, it appears, quickly get to the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board, charged earlier this week by President Truman to look into McCarthy's accusations. For the President has ordered that all material on the cases be turned over to the Review Board by the State Department and FBI.

Economic Survey Of Europe Slated By Herbert Feis

The State Department disclosed yesterday that Secretary of State Dean Acheson has ordered a new independent survey of the European economic situation with a view to determining its effect on American foreign policy.

Acheson has assigned Herbert Feis, well known economist, to the task. Feis was appointed a member of the department's policy planning staff on March 20.

A department announcement said that Feis is "going to Great Britain and to other countries of western Europe to study independently the situation there and its bearing on American foreign policy."

Feis was adviser on international economic affairs in the State Department from 1931 to 1943. From 1944 to 1947 he served periodically as special consultant to the secretary of the army. Prior to his new appointment he was a member of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton University.

U. S. Judge Rifkind Resigns Because Pay Is Insufficient

New York, March 30 (AP).—A Federal judge quit his job today. He said he couldn't get along on the $15,000-a-year salary.

Simon H. Rifkind, 48, is the jurist. After nine years on the bench of the United States District Court here, Rifkind said he has had to draw on his savings to maintain "a reasonable standard of living" and can't do it any longer.

The judge, his wife and two children live in an apartment house on Central Park, west.

Rifkind, who had been appointed to the lifetime post by President Roosevelt, will become a partner in a New York law firm.

If you wish, you can add an extra-special trimming by topping each slice of Ice Cream and Cake Roll with chocolate sauce, a dash of whipped cream and a maraschino cherry! It's as easy as it sounds, and you'll be amazed how everoyne will say it's the best treat they have ever tasted.

You can get Ice Cream and Cake Roll, ready to slice and serve, wh[illegible] good ice cream is sold.

Rayburn Helps To Speed Kerr Bill to House

House Speaker Sam Rayburn stepped in personally yesterday to speed final congressional action on the hotly-contested Kerr natural gas bill.

He got it a green light from the House Rules Committee after opponents temporarily blocked floor approval of the bill which the Senate passed Wednesday.

As a result, it can come up for a final vote in the House today. After House approval, it will go to President Truman. Critics, who contend the bill means a rate boost for consumers, hope the President will veto it.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D., Okla.), would exempt independent producers of natural gas from regulation by the Federal Power Commission. It was prompted by a Supreme Court ruling a few years ago that the FPC may have such powers, although it never has used them, under the 1938 natural gas law.

Rayburn stepped in after an attempt by Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark) to speed the Senate-approved bill through the House under unanimous consent was stopped by a chorus of objections.

The speaker quickly arranged for a special session of the rules committee to clear the way for floor consideration.

Representative Ray J. Madden (D., Ind.), a committee member who is against the bill, objected to Rayburn's action. He protested that the meeting was called by Representative Eugene E. Cox (D., Ga.) "under cover of secrecy" in the absence of Committee Chairman Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.).

Rayburn appeared before the committee to urge a green light for the bill.

"I asked that the offices of the members be called," he said. "This is simply a matter of procedure, and the House should certainly be allowed to consider the bill. This session of the committee was called legitimately and I take full responsibility."

Highway Aid Bill Approved By House Unit

The House Public Works Committee yesterday approved a bill carrying 570 million dollars annually for Federal aid to highways in fiscal year 1952 and 1953. The fiscal year starts on July 1.

The bill sets aid for primary and secondary systems at 500 million dollars and provides an extra 70 million dollars for improvements on the interstate highway system.

The bill also would authorize for each of the fiscal years, 20 million dollars for forest highways; $17,000,000 for forest development roads and trails, 23 million dollars for national parks and parkways, and 6 million dollars for Indian reservations.

The committee wrote into the bill an amendment to support the President's Safety Council in promoting safety.

The bill also is aimed at decreasing toll loads by permitting States to borrow funds for interstate system improvements through bonds and to retire the principal of the bonds from future Federal aid payments.

Another feature would allow States to put up as little as 25 percent toward interstate system projects, with the Federal government putting up as much as 75 percent. The 75-25 matching proposal is a departure from the historical 50-50 matching of Federal aid funds.

Wickard Hits Power Plant Loan Critics

By The Associated Press

Administrator Claude Wickard of the Rural Electrification Administration yesterday said private power interests are trying anew to restrict Government extension of electrical service to rural areas.

This opposition is being pressed in Congress, he said, at a time when the Nation needs more power than private concerns are willing to provide.

In a talk before the American Public Power Association at the Shoreham Hotel, Wickard said that the renewed opposition has developed as a result of REA loans to farmer cooperatives for installing steam generating plants to supplement power developed by Government hydroelectric projects. Some REA critics contend it should confine itself to loans for power distribution lines.

The REA chief said private power interests are hampering the economic well-being of New England and New York State by holding power costs in those areas at the highest level in the Nation.

Wickard said the urban centers of the Northeast are suffering from the "ill effects of this situatio just as are the REA cooperatives."

"It surely would be in the interest of everybody" if the United States and Canada "could proceed with the St. Lawrence seaway development and make positive that the benefits are passed on to the people," Wickard said.

Hill Unit Ponders Federal 'Lobbying'

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The General Accounting Office yesterday told a congressional committee it is "obviously hard, if not impossible" to enforce the law against the expenditure of public funds for lobbying by a member of the Executive Branch.

And Assistant Budget Bureau Director Roger W. Jones said that officials of the Executive Branch have a perfect right to make speeches and indulge in other activities in favor of a program advocated by the President.

The views of the GAO and of the Budget Bureau were given to the House Select Committee to Investigate Lobbying Activities.

The spokesman for the GAO was Frank H. Weitzel, assistant to the Comptroller General in charge of legislative activity.

Speeches Questioned

Representative Charles A. Hallock (R., Ind.) raised the issue of the activities of Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing in favor of a national health bill, and of Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan in favor of the Brannan plan.

He asked why it was that since the American Medical Association is required to register as a lobbying organization and give its financial statement for opposing the plan. Ewing should not likewise be compelled to register as in favor of the plan, and account for the expenses, out of taxpayers' funds, of his trip to England and in this country to advocate a national health plan.

He asked also why Brannan did not have to register in connection with his speeches for the farm plan.

Jones said that in a sense every Government official is registered for what he is, since he is listed in the Congressional Directory.

Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio) also tried to pin Jones down in the activities of reserve officers in putting pressure on Congress in connection with universal military training. He wanted to know if such activities did not violate the criminal statute making the offender subject to a fine of $500 or imprisonment of not more than one year. Jones pleaded ignorance of any such activities.

Enforcement Difficult

Weitzel said in his prepared statement that he was sure the committee would recognize the difficulty of enforcement of provisions of the act against lobbying by Federal employes.

"In many cases, "Weitzel said, "it is obviously hard, if not impossible, to recognize the unlawful use of Federal funds for lobbying activities from documents submitted with the accounts to the General Accounting Office, except possibly from the context of telegrams included therein.

"For example, a trip of a Government official to Washington might in fact have been intended and directed because of the official's capacity to enlist the aid of a certain member or members of Congress in legislation of interest to the department. The vouchers for the reimbursement of travel expenses covering such a trip will very seldom reveal the true purpose of the trip, which is usually ascribed as being "for official business."

The hearings adjourned until April 19 when the first case study, the housing lobby, will be taken up.

Korean Assembly Okays Mutual Defense Pact

Seoul, Korea, March 30 (U.P.).—The Korean National Assembly today approved a mutual defense and assistance pact with the United States, making Korea eligible for part of 27 million dollars in United States military aid earmarked for the Philippines, Iran and Korea.

The agreement was signed by representatives of the two countries in Seoul January 26.

At Westinghouse
NLRB Sets Electrical Unions Vote

Second round in the battle between the anti-Communist International Union of Electrical Workers (IUE) and the leftwing United Electrical Workers (UE) for leadership of the workers in the mass production electrical industry will be fought within the next 30 days at Westinghouse.

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ordered 51 elections in plants of 32 cities to determine which unions should represent the 55,000 Westinghouse employes.

The IUE, affiliated with the CIO, won the first round at General Motors—when 29,500 employes voted overwhelmingly for IUE as their bargaining agent. Third and most important round will be fought over 100,000 employes of General Electric.

Five other unions will try to pick up a few more members at Westinghouse, even though the big fight will be between the two bitter rivals, IUE and UE. IUE was created out of UE locals which stuck by the CIO after UE was ousted from the CIO last year on charges of following the Communist Party line.

These five are the AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL Pattern Makers League, International Association of Machinists, Meter Division Engineers Association, and Federation of Westinghouse Independent Salaried Unions.

In this area, elections will be held in Westinghouse plants in Baltimore, and in Huntington and Fairmount, W. Va. Largest single group of employes participating in the representation election will be in the company's three plants at East Pittsburgh, Pa.

Negro Firemen Upheld in Rail Union Fight

Birmingham, Ala., March 30 (AP). A ruling in favor of Negro firemen suing the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen to end alleged discrimination was being drafted by United States District Judge Clarence Mullins today.

Judge Mullins said from the bench yesterday he would find for the plaintiffs in the Federal court suit.

He said he would enjoin enforcement of a contract between the union and the Gulf, Mobile & Ohio Railroad on the ground that the brotherhood did not represent the Negroes properly in contract negotiations.

Mullins took under advisement a charge that the railroad conspired with the union to deny the Negroes seniority rights.

In their suit, the Negro firemen charged they were denied seniority rights, listed as "unpromotable," and refused the right of preferred runs.

Hoover Group Backs Changes in Labor Dept.

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Another presidential reorganization came under fire in Congress yesterday, and this time the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report rushed to Mr. Truman's defense.

A spokesman for the Hoover Report group gave unqualified indorsement to Plan No. 6, which would transfer to the Secretary of Labor all functions of his bureau chiefs.

Robert L. I. McCormick, research director of the Hoover Report group, told the House Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments that Plan No. 6 is one of the 130 reorganization steps recommended by the Hoover Commission.

Chief effect of the plan would be to transfer from the Wage-Hour Administrator to the Secretary of Labor certain powers involving the administration of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Like 20 other reorganization plans sent to Congress recently by the President, Plan No 6 takes effect May 13 unless either house specifically rejects it by a constitutional majority. Opposition stems from Republicans and anti-Administration Democrats who refused to transfer the wage-hour administration powers to Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin last year, when Congress amended the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Congressional opposition to Plan No. 12, which would abolish the independent office of general counsel to the National Labor Relations Board and transfer his powers to the board itself, arises from the same two groups. The Executive Expenditures Committee approved Plan No. 12 last week, but on a strict party vote. A House vote is expected early in April.

The NLRB reorganization is so deeply involved in the long and emotional controversy over the Taft-Hartley Act that the Hoover Commission deliberately passed up the opportunity of making a specific suggestion on the subject.

In sending Plan No. 12 to Congress, President Truman said it conformed with the general principles of the Hoover Commission report. Opponents of the plan denied this was so, and quoted other sections of the report to uphold their point of view. Both majority and minority committee reports seek support for their stands in the Hoover Report.

The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report, created by civic leaders when the Congress-supported Hoover Commission expired, was not invited to testify on Plan No. 12, and was only too happy not to be brought into the dog fight.

However, when asked to speak on Plan No. 6, the Hoover group said the plan would make for better, more efficient, most responsive Government.

Roland Jones, jr., representing the American Retail Federation—made up of 55 State and national organizations—urged the House to reject Plan 6. He declared that administration of the Wage-Hour Act called for an "impartial," independent bureau chief, and not one who was responsible to the Secretary of Labor. Jones contended the Secretary of Labor represented the wage-earners and therefore could not be "impartial" in cases involving employers.

How To Carve a Whole Ham
1. Put shank end of ham at carver's right. If a right ham the bulged side will be toward carver: if left, away from him.
2. Cut two or three slices parallel to the length of ham, from this side. This will form a base on which to stand ham.
3. Turn ham up, so it rests on cut surface, keeping shank end at right. Hold ham firmly, cut small wedge-shaped piece from shank end.
4. Cut thin slices down to leg bone, at right angles to bone. Cut as many slices as desired.
5. With fork in place, release slices from leg bone by running knife along bone under slices.
6. If more servings are needed, turn ham back to original flat position and carve slices at right angles to bone.

Perjury Called Due To Evasion of Taxes

By The Associated Press

A Government prosecutor told a Federal court jury yesterday former Mayor William W. Voisine of Ecorse, Mich., lied to a House subcommittee because he wanted to avoid paying income tax on $325,000.

The defense, which also began its final arguments in the perjury trial, contended the jurors should have at least a reasonable doubt whether a quorum of the subcommittee was present when Voisine testified in 1948.

Federal Judge Alexander Holtzoff announced the arguments will be completed this afternoon and the case will go to the jury Monday morning.

The one-time mayor is charged with lying in his denials to the House group, investigating alleged black market deals in steel, that he took over-payments for scarce steel after the war. He testified in his own defense at the trial, repeating the denials he made to the subcommittee.

The Government introduced four witnesses who said they made a total of $325,000 in excess payments for steel to Voisine or another official of the former mayor's steel company.

Defense Attorney Leo Rover said that former Representative Muhlenberg (R., Pa.), a member of the House Investigating subcommittee, once signed a letter in which he said he was not present when Voisine appeared.

Muhlenberg later changed his mind.

However, Rover said that even in his trial testimony the former Congressman said he could not be sure he was there.

The Government contends that three Congressmen, a quorum, were on hand, and that Muhlenberg was one of them.

In concluding its case, the prosecution presented to the jurors a cigar box in which it contends Voisine once hid $48,000 in cash.

Kimball Drops Plan to Back Boddy in Race

Dan A. Kimball, Undersecretary of the Navy, abruptly backed down last night on his announced plan to "speak politically" in California, especially in behalf of Manchester Boddy, candidate for Senator.

Earlier in the day, he had announced he planned to spend the first ten days of May in California and that he would make a couple of speeches in Boddy's race.

In cancelling his speaking plans, Kimball said he did so because:

"It is the rule and practice of the national administration not to intervene in state or local primary conests. In order to avoid possible misunderstandings, I am cancelling all plans to speak politically in California."

Boddy got into the Democratic primary this week after Senator Downey (D.) withdrew because of illness. The Senator indorsed Boddy, who is running against Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas.

"In expressing my preference for the candidacy of Manchester Boddy for the United States senatorial nomination in California," Kimball said in a statement, "I spoke as a voter, a life-long Democrat, and a long-time resident of the State of California."

Railroad Labor League Supports Rep. Douglas

Railroad Labor's Political League announced yesterday that it will support Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.), in her California primary race for the Senate.

The announcement was made by C. T. A. Anderson, secretary-treasurer of the league. He said the league's executive board voted to support Mrs. Douglas "all the way."

Voting Favors Fast Time

two found "half-hearted interest," but were able to enlist some citizen cooperation.

In Precinct 10 two policemen brought in about 400 ballots, Capt. Basil F. McAllister reported. He riffled through the pile and found them "overwhelmingly for daylight saving time."

The men found it easier to collect the votes themselves, than to get others to do it, the captain said. One No. 10 Precinct man described the moaning at the end of the 8 a.m. shift as the result of "wending their weary way with their fallen arches."

At Precinct 9, Capt. William J. Murphy said the assignment "amounts to a selling job. People are afraid of it; they're uneasy about it. We're running into difficulty, but we expected it."

Continue Efforts

In No. 4 the situation was similar. Capt. Irvin Umbaugh said many residents, "don't want to fool with it. They don't want to take the trouble." But the police will be back around today on another prowl for vote-getters.

At Precinct 3, the ballot distribution was postponed to the evening when "more people will be at home," Capt. Charles J. Sullivan, head of Commissioner John Russell Young's precinct, said.

In general, police reported good cooperation from apartment house developments, where switchboard operators and resident managers took over the ballot distribution. At the Greenway Apartments in Southeast officials offered to include a ballot with each rent bill.

At the District Building inquiries were received from Maryland and Virginia residents on whether they could vote. The matter will be laid before the city fathers, but indications were they will not be extended the franchise since Congress usually asks what D. C. alone thinks.

'Friend' of Reds, Disillusioned, Flees to West

Berlin, March 30 (AP).—Dr. Ulrich Noack, a leading West German advocate of compromise with Russia, fled to West Berlin from East German territory today after being accused by the Communists of delivering an off-base lecture.

Noack, a history professor, said he was utterly disillusioned by his visit with East German Communists at their invitation.

He accused the Communists in Soviet-occupied Germany of fomenting a "civil war psychosis" and said they told him of plans for Red uprisings in West Germany to be linked with a military invasion by the East police-army.

They asserted "Russian help won't be necessary" for carrying out their tactic of force, he said.

In his lecture, Noack opposed the Communist decision to convert the East German election into a one-shot vote for the "National Front." Instead, he urged that East Germans be allowed to vote on whether they wanted a single list or independent lists by all parties.

Oyster Roast Scheduled

The Royal Rangers of Capitol Forest, No. 104, Tall Cedars of Lebanon, will sponsor an oyster roast Sunday in the Kenneth Nash Post, American Legion, 3d and D sts. se., from 1 to 6 p. m., Capt. C. L. Edmondson announced yesterday.

MR. CITIZEN REPLIES—Census taker Mrs. Truman Keesey didn't get to question the Truman family in the Blair House, but Edmond W. Solt, 736 Jackson pl. nw., in the same neighborhood, gladly answered questions. Four hundred District enumerators yesterday worked on a sample poll of 10,000 Washingtonians. "Very satisfied"—was the verdict of District census chiefs obeyed the Census Bureau's "good appearance" dictum to the last letter: Mrs. Efird, for example, wore Sunday best of blue navy wool suit, pfflearl coat, ankle-strap suede shoes, blue beret, roses, and Southern accent working at its prrring nest.

This may have helped in their reception by householders.

"It was very pleasant," said Mrs. Harold Bean, up whose steps at 735 Butternut st. nw. Mrs. Efird went trembling, "I can't understand why there should be any hard feeling about these things."

Similarly, Mrs. Esther Johnson, 27, of Kent Village, Hyattsville, wife of an NLRB attorney, and her first "customer," Mrs. Paul de Lawter, manager of an apartment house at 7611 Georgia ave. nw., impressed each other favorably.

Interviewed separately after the enumeration:

"She was wonderful," said Mrs. Johnson of Mrs. de Lawter. "She said if I had any trouble in any apartments to come back and see her."

"A very nice lady, very efficient," said Mrs. de Lawter of Mrs. Johnson. "We sat in the living room just like she was calling. The whole interview took only 15 minutes."

From her early experience, Mrs. Johnson said the main kink was on the income questions:

"It's hard for some wives to figure out exactly how much their husbands make."

Edmund W. Solt of 736 Jackson pl. nw., was interviewed by Mrs. Truman Keesey of 23 Boston ave., Takoma Park, Md.

To the "Who is head of the household?" question, Mr. Solt disclosed to a reporter that he answered:

"I am today—my wife's gone."

As E-day Saturday neared, District Supervisor Norman Russell disclosed that special arrangements have been made for enumerating institutions.

At St. Elizabeth's a crew of 15 clerks who work there regularly will do the job.

At District Jail, Russell said, the job will be done by jail officials or policemen.

At Providence Hospital nuns will do the census-taking. At other hospitals the enumeration will be by hospital employes where this can be arranged, otherwise by census people.

Transients, said Russell, will be covered on two big nights: April 11 for big hotels, April 13 for small hotels.

Matthews to Address NROTC Session Today

Annapolis, Md., March 30 (AP).—Officials from 52 institutions convene here Friday for the 1950 meeting of the Association of NROTC Colleges.

Navy Secretary Mattews will address the educators at the start of the two-day session.

The Naval Academy will be host to presidents, deans and professors of naval science representing the Association of Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps Colleges and Universities.

Chapman Cites GM, GE Data To Refute 'Socialism' Charge

Everett, Wash., March 29 (AP).—Secretary of the Interior Chapman tonight declared two large American corporations are examples of what he termed the falseness of charges the United States is drifting to socialism.

He singled out an unnamed vice president of the General Electric Co. in discussing the "socialism" issue in an address prepared for delivery at a Jefferson-Jackson banquet here.

His other example was the General Motors Corp.

"The newspapers have reported," he said, "that a vice president of the General Electric Co. has announced the determination of his company to take a strong stand against what he calls socialism. This socially secured gentleman represents a company whose president received in 1949 a salary of $125,000 with added bonus grants amounting to $76,000.

"General Electric, during 1949, reported profits greater than in 1948, and declared dividends of $2.50 a share in 1949 compared to $1.80 in 1948.

"Is this the socialism that the gentleman fears?

He said the motor company announced a net of 656 million dollars in 1949 on sales of over $5.5 billion, an increase of 49 percent over the previous year.

"In the face of this story of business prosperity," he said, "it ill becomes corporations representing the investment of American citizens to talk of the dangers of a welfare state, . . ."

New Cleanup Man Cleans Dress Shop Safe of $380

Mrs. Eleanor Schumaker, proprietor of the Elizabeth Shepherd Dress Shop, 3306 Reservoir rd. nw., became the victim of a vanishing janitor yesterday.

She told police he appeared about 9 a. m., announcing he was the "new cleanup man." She said he went to work for a time, and she became busy. Next, he announced he was going out "to get a bucket." He never returned. Later, she discovered $380 missing from an open safe in the store's basement.

The man was described as a medium brown-skinned Negro, about 25, 5 feet 8 inches tall, stocky, wearing a dark felt hat, dark coat and a goatee.

Second Abortion Bared in Va. Death

Roanoke, Va., March 30 (AP).—A 42-year-old divorcee, charged by Bedford authorities with murder in the abortion death of Alice Marie Taylor, today faced an additional charge in Roanoke of committing an abortion.

Roanoke police filed the charge last night against Mrs. Dartha Louise Fulton, former Bedford taxi driver, and Detective Capt. Frank H. Webb said the woman admitted performing the illegal operation here several weeks ago.

Webb said that Doris Milton of Roanoke also has been ordered held for grand jury action on a charge of aiding and abetting in the alleged abortion at a Roanoke residence.

The latest charge against Mrs. Fulton was lodged after questioning by police here late yesterday. Before that, she was taken to the roadside on Brush Mountain near Blacksburg where the body of the 24-year-old Roanoke Government file clerk was found last Friday.

Also taken to the Montgomery County site was Woodson Tuck, 20, of Bedford, held as an accessory in the death of Miss Taylor. Mrs. Christine Jones, 28, of Bedford, has been released on bond as a material witness in the death of the attractive blonde girl.

A police investigator said yesterday in Bedford that Mrs. Fulton had signed a statement admitting that Miss Taylor came to her home in Bedford and died in the middle of an illegal operation. The officer quoted Mrs. Fulton as saying the girl "went into a spasm" and died.

Authorities said Mrs. Fulton in the statement told how she persuaded Tuck to help her take the body to the point on Brush Mountain 65 miles away. They said she admitted going to Washington, spending the weekend and then returning to a tourist camp near Natural Bridge early Tuesday.

Mrs. Fulton was arrested at the tourist camp Tuesday morning and taken to Bedford, where officers said she made the statement. Tuck and Mrs. Jones were picked up in Bedford the same day.

In Ill Health

Man, 69, Dies In Leap From Park Bridge

A man identified as David C. Barnes, 69, of 32 Q st. nw., jumped to his death from the Calvert st. bridge about 11:50 a. m. yesterday, police said.

Identification was made by the victim's son, James M. Barnes, also of 32 Q st. nw., about 9 p. m. Barnes said his father had been in ill health about a year.

A motorist, Alexander Graves, 24, of 630 Morton st. ne., saw the man leap and notified police. Pvt. A. D. Beye, of the Park Police, recovered the body from the creek.

Barnes had no money and no identification on his person.

Utah Wilson Turman Wilson
Accused of slaying

Vancouver, Wash., March 30 (AP). Utah E. and Turman G. Wilson, Vancouver brothers, charged with kidnaping and murder in the abduction death of Joann Dewey, 18, March 19 were arrested tonight in Sacramento, Calif., the FBI announced.

Prosecuting Attorney De Witt Jones signed the warrants, charging first-degree kidnaping and first-decree murder, on information presented by Police Chief Harry Diamond.

Diamond said both had been sought for some days. Both have long police records. One has served a term for rape. Utah is 20 and his brother 24.

Joann's nude body was found in Wind River, 50 miles east of here a week after she had been abducted from a local street.

Police Charge Yoke 'Victim' With Larceny

A 25-year-old messenger who told police Tuesday he was yoked and robbed, was held yesterday on a charge of larceny after trust. He also forfeited $25 collateral on a charge of making a false report. Police recovered $305 he said had been taken from him.

The defendant is Harold McDearman, 25, of 1477 Newton st. nw., who told police he is a graduate of Howard University. For the past four years, he has been employed by Simpson's Modern Pharmacy, 701 Rhode Island ave. nw.

Tuesday, he told police, he was enroute to the Hamilton National Bank branch at 7th an N sts. nw., when in the 1300 block of 7th st. nw., he was yoked by two men and robbed of the $311, shortly before 11 a. m.

Detectives John T. Bailey and L. E. Hayes and Pvt. V. M. Reynolds of the Second Precinct were puzzled because they could find no witnesses in the busy district. Wednesday night, McDearman, after long questioning, gave them permission to search his room. They said they found $305 of the $311 in a suitbox.

Early yesterday, the detectives said, McDearman confessed, saying he was in financial difficulties and "perpetually broke." They placed the false report and larceny charges against him.

Before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, McDearman waived preliminary hearing on the larceny after trust charge, and was held for grand jury action under $1000 bond.

Police said this was the second false robbery report this week.

Arsonist Says He Set Hospital Fire Killing 9

Philadelphia, March 30 (U.P.)—A convicted arsonist, who "tried to be a hero" by starting fires and then sounding the alarm, today confessed he started the fire that killed nine men at the Belle Vista private sanatorium, State police said.

"I got a sick feeling and had to do something," Nicholas Verna, 26, an Army veteran, told Sergt. Charles Taylor.

Taylor said Verna admitted setting fire to a towel before midnight last night in the basement of the Chestnut Hill sanatorium, which had been denounced repeatedly by the State for its "medieval" practices of using mechanical restraints and shackling patients to concrete slabs.

"He (Verna) said he felt a nervous tension building up in him and that he had to do something," Taylor said.

Verna, an Upper Darby, Pa., resident with a long arson record, was committed to the sanatorium by authorities a year ago for observation and treatment. He was permitted free movement, with the privilege of going home weekends.

Taylor said Verna made his admission at Valley Forge General Hospital, where he was taken after the fire at the frequently criticized private hospital.

The State said its criticism of the hospital began in 1937, and that as late as September it had directed the hospital to remove metal rings from the slabs.

Firemen said at least five of the nine who suffocated were shackled to their beds.

Three of the 60 persons overcome or made ill by smoke were in critical condition today.

The dead included Dr. John Siggins, 75, former chief oculist for the Pennsylvania Railroad, who was admitted to the hospital for the senile and mentally ill last January.

Siggins, who did extensive research on color blindness, originated combining amber lights with red and green lights on railroad block signals to avoid color confusion.

Heroism on the part of attendants who braved smoke-filled corridors to release patients from barred, cell-like rooms was credited with cutting down the death toll.

Several rescuers were overcome by smoke from the fire, which was started in a rubbish pile in the cellar and spread to fuel lines of the heating plant.

Attendants and firemen fought to where patients cringed in terror on their beds and then led or carried more than 60 to the lawn.

Day Attendant George Lewis, 51, said he removed five patients who were shackled to their beds.

Firemen praised Mrs. Theresa Shaw, 38, New York, who crawled on her stomach through the thick smoke to point out rooms where patients were trapped.

She led firemen to the rooms and then pointed the way to exits.

"Some of the patients stared at us, and some struggled. Others just smiled as firemen carried them to ladders," Mrs. Shaw said.

She was overcome and treated for smoke inhalation.

Police Figure Denies Charge

after the suspension was decided on, Nebel raided a home owned by Town Councilman Josias A. Cobb on a gaming warrant.

Cobb was booked on a gaming charge and two occupants of the house was arrested.

Excused Himself

Although Cobb was in the room during the hearing, he had excused himself from the council.

Besides Nebel and Brooks, the main witnesses at the hearing was another Bladensburg policeman, Clifford T. Bartley.

Bartley said that together with other policemen, he "raided" Brooks home on March 4. Brooks gave the address as 4903 49th st., Bladensburg.

Bartley said he did not arrest Brooks, but took him—voluntarily—to the Hyattsville police station.

There, said Bartley, Brooks signed—before witnesses—a confession.

As given by Brooks, the confession was this:

That for two weeks of December, 1949, he had paid Nebel $25 a week.

That in January and February of this year, he paid $15 a week for the "privilege of selling" liquor Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights at his home.

That after the "raid" he ceased paying Nebel.

Brooks said he is employed at a liquor store in Bladensburg.

This statement, according to testimony, was brought before members of the town council on March 5.

Interrupted by Lawyer

In the middle of Brooks' testimony, a spectator, Attorney Robert W. McCullough, interrupted the proceedings. Calling the hearing a "travesty" on justice, he declared Brooks was not fully advised of his legal rights. He offered—and council accepted it—to serve as Brooks' attorney.

Nebel not only denied he accepted any sort of bribe from Brooks, but said that on the night of March 1 he parked outside Brooks' home to investigate reports that illegal whisky was being transported into Bladensburg.

Nebel's attorney brought out the fact that no one had ever seen Brooks at Nebel's home, or Nebel at Brooks' home, and that there were no receipts of the "transactions" Brooks had sworn to.

Bartley said he staged the raid March 4 after receiving a complaint from an alleged patron of Brooks' home.

Bartley refused to answer when Green asked him if he and Nebel, his former superior," had had a little trouble."

He admitted under questioning that Nebel had once prepared charges before the council on the basis that Bartley had once falsified an "application;" that on another occasion, Nebel had complained that Bartley had not "shown up" on the job.

Bartley also admitted he had been convicted of a crime, and that the "crime" was assault.

Army Ordered To Fight Huks In Philippines

Manila, March 30 (AP).—President Elpidio Quirino today ordered the Philippines army to take over the fight against the night-raiding Hukbalahap guerillas.

The Communist-led antigovernment Huks have harassed central Luzon intermittently since the end of the Japanese war. They have struck 15 villages in the past two nights. At least 35 persons have been slain, 60 wounded and two towns set afire with property loss estimated at $1,500,000. Some raids have been within 15 miles of Manila.

The plan for the army to take over from the constabulary has been in the works for several weeks but has been awaiting congressional approval.

executive Secretary of the Parole Board; and Donald Clemmer, head of the District Corrections Department.

Other police officials slated to attend are Inspector Walter Storm and Capt. Robert Murray, of the Metropolitan Police, and Inspector Mark Raspberry of the United States Park Police.

In announcing today's meeting, Chairman Davis said that the crime inquiry to date has shown that a number of improvements may be made in law enforcement here.

He said that the improvements may involve both amendments to existing laws, and changes in present administrative procedures.

Davis said that a "considerable contribution" to improving law enforcement here could very likely be made by a permanent council composed of officials of the agencies directly concerned with law enforcement.

He said these thoughts had led to today's meeting. He said the committee wants to give the officials its ideas, and receive theirs for improving law enforcement.

Fay, Barrett Confer On 'Mutual Problems'

Police Supt. Robert J. Barrett and United States Attorney George Morris Fay spent two hours in conference in Fay's office yesterday morning.

Both officials declined to give any details of what had been discussed.

"It was just a get-together to talk over a lot of problems of mutual interest, with the hope we might be able to solve some of them," was their only comment.

The problem of liaison between the police department and the courts was one of the subjects, it was believed.

Also present at the conference were Assistant United States Attorneys John Fihelly and William Hitz; Inspector Walter Storm, Assistant Supt. of Police; Capt. Robert V. Murray, second in command of the Detective Bureau, and Lieut. Lewis Peters, Barrett's secretary.

Co-Ed's Death Accidental, Youth Insists

Iowa City, Iowa, March 30 (U.P.). Robert Bednasek, cross-examined on his "truth serum" story of how his campus sweetheart died, maintained today that she suffered fatal throat injuries in a fall against a chair while they were dancing.

The husky, 24-year-old University of Iowa senior admitted he put his hands around the throat of Margaret (Gee Gee) Jackson, 20, last December 11, but denied strangling her. He said he was playfully showing her how to choke a person when a "strange" look came over her face.

Then later—he said he couldn't remember whether it was a second or an hour—she staggered from his dancing embrace and fell against the chair. She moaned, clutched her throat and gasped for air.

This was Bednasek's story of how the girl received throat injuries which caused her to strangle—a story he said was released from his numbed brain later by truth serum injections.

He sobbed as he related his story on direct examination. But he sobered and answered calmly as he gave an even more-detailed account under the searching State cross-examination. The prosecution contends he slew the girl in a fit of jealous passion when he felt he was losing her.

The defense was scheduled to rest after the testimony of one more witness Friday and it appeared the first-degree murder case would reach the jury Saturday.

The State used diaries and a date calendar to show he was interested in many other girls during the time he knew Gee Gee.

He contends he loved Gee Gee so deeply he never could have killed her when the two held a romantic rendezvous in his rooming house.

Tractors Replace Camel-Drawn Plows

American tractors are replacing camel-drawn plows which Moroccans have used since Mohammed's day, the Economic Cooperation Administration announced today.

More than $5,081,000 worth of farm machinery, financed by the Marshall Plan, has been shipped to the French North African protectorate.

3 Tax Evasion Cases in Md. Continued

Indefinite continuances were granted yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court in the cases of three Government workers charged with evasion of Maryland income tax.

Walter W. Dawson, state's attorney, asked for and obtained the continuances without explanation or comment. From other sources, it was learned that the three men indicted have paid the taxes in question, and that Dawson's office is considering dropping the charges.

The three were indicted last Thursday by a grand jury. The indictments alleged they did not file returns.

Charles B. Bayly, 8512 Hazelwood dr., Bethesda, formerly of the Federal Trade Commission, now with Veterans Administration, allegedly failed to return earnings of $6988 in 1947 and $8318 in 1948.

John L. York, 8353 Colesville rd., Silver Spring, also with the Federal Trade Commission, was charged with failing to file on $6890 earnings in 1947. And Vincent F. Mullican, 104 Brook ave., Gaithersburg, with United States Public Health Service, allegedly did not file on $3597 earnings in 1947.

Officer Cites 12 Violations By Tavern

The Friendly Tavern, 643 D st. nw., was far too friendly with patrons three evenings last month, the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board was told yesterday.

Pvt. Jack E. Lockhart of the police vice squad testified at a board hearing of visiting the restaurant February 17, 22 and 23 and observing 12 violations of ABC regulations.

He said the excessively friendly acts included selling alcoholic beverages to drunks, allowing drunks to remain on the premises, permitting a guitar player to sing obscene songs and allowing a customer to use loud and profane language.

The guitar player, identified by Lockhart as "Dusty Holmes," was at the hearing with his guitar. But the proceedings were recessed until April 12 at 10 a. m. before he or other defense witnesses could answer Lockhart's testimony. The tavern, through Attorney David Hart, pleaded innocent on all counts.

Lockhart obtained his evidence at close range, according to his testimony. On the 22d he said, all booths in the dining room were occupied. So he sat down with a sailor, who he testified was drunk.

A short time later two unescorted women sat down at the same table, Lockhart said. Then, he testified, "Dusty Holmes" sauntered by and serenaded them with unprintable songs.

Man Sentenced In Drug Store Housebreaking

Herbert Brockwell, jr., 32, of Richmond, Va., received a two-year sentence on a plea of guilty to a housebreaking charge in Montgomery County Circuit Court yesterday.

Another Richmond man, John W. Rainey, 31, was freed of similar charges for lack of evidence.

Brockwell was found January 11 in the Falkland Pharmacy, 1401 East-West hgwy., Silver Spring.

Rainey was arrested later in Richmond.

Brockwell told Judge Charles W. Woodward he was forced to implicate Rainey because of a beating by Montgomery County Police. He pointed out Detective Charles C. Pearson, in court, as the man who beat him. Detective Pearson and Detective Sergt. Carroll V. Miller then took the stand and swore Brockwell was not beaten or mistreated.

Gunmen Stick Up Union, Take $1000

Two young gunmen, posing first as jobseekers, held up the financial secretary of Local 102 of the Sheet Metal Workers Union in the local's office, 1017 K st. nw., just before 4 p. m. yesterday and made off with about $1000 in union dues.

The union official, Howard Cash, 42, of 2264 13th st. nw., was alone in the office at the time of the holdup. He was unable immediately to fix the exact amount of the loot.

Cash said the two thugs first asked him about the possibility of learning sheet metal work through apprenticeship training.

The three talked together about five minutes when Jack O'Brien, the local's business agent, walked out of the office, leaving Cash alone. The financial secretary was behind a partition extending across the office.

Cash told the pair—strangers to him, though he said both knew his name—that there were no apprentice openings.

Then they pulled their guns on him.

Cash described one as tall and about 18 years old. The second one was shorter, curly-haired, and about 22. Both were white.

Cash said the pair had automatics, with the shorter youth pointing two guns, one of which looked "foreign or odd."

They made Cash unlock the partition door and took the money from a cashbox in the office safe.

"You'd better not move," the shorter one warned Cash, "until my partner gets outside." He then stood guard over Cash until his accomplice fled down the narrow, circular stairs with the money.

The money represented dues collected from members within the last two days. The local has a membership of 515.

High Court Hears Real Estate Case Arguments Today

The Supreme Court today will hear arguments in the Government's antitrust case against the Washington and National Real Estate Boards and several individual members.

The Government lost a criminal suit in District Court in 1948 and thereupon brought a civil action. In this action, now before the Supreme Court, the District Court ruled the realtors had not violated the antitrust laws.

The Government's contention is that realtors illegally fix brokerage fees in the sale of real estate. The realtors contend the rates are fees for personal services.

Gunshot Kills Smithsonian Founder's Kin

A second-generation native Washingtonian, a distant relative of James Smithson, who endowed the Smithsonian Institution, was found shot to death yesterday morning in the kitchen of his home here.

He was Harry C. Smithson, 60, 1241 G st. se. For 33 years before his retirement, he was chief upholsterer here for the Pullman Co.

The body was found by a son-in-law, Charles R. Stedman, 4017 E st. se. There was one bullet wound in the head, and a .22-caliber rifle lay close by on the floor.

A son, Clyde E. Smithson, 2655 41st st. nw., who was wounded and decorated in the last World War, said that his father "has not been the same" since another son, Harry A. Smithson, was killed in the same war while fighting in Germany.

Recently, Mrs. Smithson became ill, and is in Providence Hospital. This, the son said, made his father further depressed.

Besides the wife and son, Mr. Smithson is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Stedman, and Miss Zula M. Smithson. Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Monday, in the Chambers chapel, 517 11th st. se. Burial will be at Arlington National Cemetery.

Thompson Trophy Race Dropped From Air Show

Cleveland, March 30 (AP).—The dangerous, high-speed Thompson Trophy race was dropped out of the National Air Races today in a drastic overhaul of future programs.

This was the closed-course dash for daredevil pilots of souped-up warplanes with conventional engines which last year brought death to global flier Bill Odom and two others.

Today's decision covered far more than the Thompson. All old-type surplus military airplanes were banned from the 1950 program.

This meant the propellor-driven plane division of the Los Angeles-to-Cleveland dash — the Bendix race—is out, too.

Races henceforth will consist of long-range, straightaway jet competitions and closed-course racing around the grandstand for midget planes.

Wrong-Way Driver Beats Stop Sign Case

Faced with a problem of whether two traffic wrongs "cancel" each other, police and the Corporation Counsel's office decided not to press charges against a young Marine for ignoring eight stop signs in a chase through Washington streets early yesterday.

The question before the experts was whether Marine Pvt. Stanley V. Baranauskas, 19, of Quantico, Va., could have ignored the stop signs, effective when driving in one direction, since he was traveling the wrong way.

In Traffic Court before Judge Nadine Gallagher, police had enough on Baranauskas without bothering about stop signs. They charged him with going 80 miles an hour in a 25-mile zone; driving the wrong way on a one-way street, and driving on the wrong side of the street.

The Marine pleaded guilty to the first two charges and was found guilty on the last. Judge Gallagher imposed a $25 or 25-day sentence to cover all three, and gave Baranauskas until April 6 to pay up.

The Marine started the chase at New Jersey ave. and L st. nw., when a Second Precinct patrol car pulled up behind his convertible.

The chase ended along Q st. when Pvt. L. V. Denny, in the patrol car, fired one shot at the auto.

Bing Crosby Here Today

Bing Crosby will stop over in Washington today on his way to Front Royal, Va., where the whole town and thousands of outsiders will honor him Saturday.

The star of screen and radio will arrive at Union Station from Chicago at 8:55 p. m. to join a motorcade to the Virginia valley town, escorted by State police and a friend of many years, State Senator Raymond Guest, of Bayard.

Guest is general chairman of the festivities and will be host to Crosby and other celebrities on hand for the dedication of Bing Crosby Stadium and the premier of the singer's latest motion picture, "Riding High."

Among those who have accepted invitations are Vice President and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, it was announced yesterday by James A. Payne, coordinator of events.

Crosby will make the first of half a dozen public appearances Saturday at Front Royal in a parade at 11 a. m.

House Unit Passes Bill to Aid Schools

Legislation to give an estimated 23 million dollars a year in aid to public schools in so-called "Federal impact" areas was approved yesterday by a House Labor subcommittee.

The funds would be spent solely on maintenance and operation. The subcommittee will consider a related proposal Monday to make available to these areas funds for school construction.

About 1000 communities have been classed as "Federal impact" areas, because of school overcrowding due to location of military bases, defense plants, and other Federal installations.

Supporters of yesterday's bill pointed out that these Federal installations not only add to the local school load but at the same time cut school revenues by reducing taxable property.

Pending proposals to help out the impact areas with construction funds call for Federal aid of approximately 100 million dollars yearly.

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. Cleveland M. Bailey (D., W. Va.) took no formal vote on yesterday's bill but authorized Bailey to drop it in the House hopper as a subcommittee print. It goes next to the full committee.

Arlington Head Defends Tax Base Estimate

Arlington Revenue Commissioner Harry K. Green yesterday stuck by his estimate that the county's 1951 assessed valuation for tax purposes will be about 148 million dollars.

The Arlington Civic Federation, at a meeting last week, indorsed statements that Green had underestimated the county's tax base by about six million dollars—thus underestimating tax revenues due in the 1950-51 fiscal year.

Proposed 1951 budgets for school and county needs recommend a total 20-cent increase in the current $3.45 tax rate. The county board has advertised a 30-cent tax rate increase, but has not acted on the matter yet.

In a letter to County Manager A. T. Lundberg, released yesterday, Green said that the total value of taxable personal property in this fiscal year was $4,521,935 higher than estimated in this year's budget.

However, he said he was worried about revenue from this source next year, because of the heavy slump in automobile values shown in the Used Car Market Report, which his office uses as a guide in assessing automobiles.

Speech Habits Of Alexandria Pupils Studied

A two-day survey of speech deficiencies among Alexandria school pupils was launched yesterday by a staff of experts from the University of Virginia's Hearing and Speech Clinic.

The staff is headed by Dr. James Mullendore, head of the university clinic. Although it was requested by the Alexandria board of education, Mullendore said, the survey is financed by the Virginia Society for Crippled Children.

Mullendore and his staff of seven conferred yesterday with teachers in five city schools and will visit seven more today. During the survey, they will observe speech habits of an estimated 1800 pupils in the lower grades.

Findings of the survey staff will be submitted to the local board of education, and will be the basis for determining if speech correction classes are necessary, School Supt. T. C. Williams said yesterday.

125 Shade Trees To Be Planted

Trees—125 of them—will be planted in College Park Saturday as the first part of a long range program to replace shade foliage lost either because of street paving or because of old age.

The trees will be planted by the District 2 Citizens Association of College Park, which is financing the program. In addition, members of University of Maryland fraternities will participate in the job.

Hearings on Street Name Changes to Be Held

District Commissioners have agreed to hold a public hearing in May on a proposal to rename B sts. ne. and se., as Constitution and Independence aves., respectively.

Geoffrey M. Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners, said the date will be set later.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young suggested last week that the "dignified" names of the avenues be extended eastward to Anacostia Park because the streets would border the proposed east Mall.

'Clean-Up Week' Set Latter Part of April

The District's annual "Clean-Up Week" has been set tentatively for the latter part of April, it was announced yesterday.

The Commissioners' committee on cleanliness and sanitation discussed the annual affair at a meeting yesterday, according to Secretary William F. Roeder, and will make a definite recommendation to the Commissioners shortly.

Virginia Allots $1.5 Million For Area School Construction

Nearby Virginia school systems will get more than $1,500,000 in State funds to help finance their school construction programs under allocations announced yesterday by the State Department of Education in Richmond.

With total enrollment as of December 1, 1949, of 34,914 in the four nearby systems, here is how the money is to be distributed just across the Potomac:

Arlington, with 13,910 pupils, will get $645,410.09; Fairfax, with 12,945 pupils, will get $600,635.06; Alexandria, with 7239 pupils, will get $335,882.36; and Falls Church, with 820 pupils, will get $38,047.18.

$45 Million Grant

In all, the Virginia General Assembly approved a 45 million dollar school construction grant for the State systems. The local earmarking is part of a total of 27 million dollars anounced by the State Department of Education. It represents 90 percent of the 30 million dollars which the Assembly set aside for localities if they can prove eligibility.

The other 10 percent, plus the remaining 15 million dollars will become available after July 1, 1951, as an equilization fund for aiding needy localities.

City, County Breakdown

Here is how cities and counties may qualify for slices of the 27-million-dollar pie:

They must have a well planned school building program through June 30, 1954; their construction plans must not involve excessive expenditures; each area must be financially able to, and promise to complete construction work if the State grant is inadequate.

If an area has already met its school construction needs, it may use the money to pay off indebtedness, or hold it in trust against future needs.

School officials in nearby areas, informed yesterday of the education department's allocations, were unanimous in stating they had as yet reached no decision as to what specific projects would be financed by the State funds.

Here are grants announced for other Northern Virginia areas:

Aranha Wants U. N. To Admit China Reds

Rio de Janerio, Brazil, March 30 (U.P.).—Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, president of the first U. N. General Assembly and former ambassador to the United States, today said Communist China should be admitted to the United Nations.

"I am not in favor of Communist China. I am in favor of peace. We cannot ignore that the present government in China is that of Mao Tse-tung or that Chiang Kai-shek is just in an island and does not represent the government of the Chinese people," Aranha said.

Hospital Cut Fought By Psychiatric Body

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Preliminary success in relieving hemophilia, the inherited bleeding disease, with a relatively new plant food drug was reported here yesterday.

The new use of the drug, rutin, was reported at the fifteenth annual Chemurgic Council, at the Statler Hotel, by Dr. James F. Couch of Philadelphia, an analytical chemist with the United States Department of Agriculture.

Rutin, which can be extracted from buckwheat, is already used widely by older persons to fortify themselves against "capillary fragility," or the tendency of the tiny bloodways to break down. The condition is frequently found in patients suffering from diabetes or high blood pressure.

Other Advances Reported

Other chemurgists, the scientists who seek new uses for agricultural crops, told of developing a tough, varnish-like furniture coating from potato starches; of fattening livestock from the waste products of distilleries, and of making the hen a better egg factory.

Dr. Couch said that the first inkling that rutin might prove effective against hemophilia came in 1945 with a request for some of the drug from a California physician, Dr. Couch's laboratory, where the drug possibilities were being investigated, filled the order with the notation that there was no reason to believe it would do good, he said yesterday.

16 Children Helped

The patient, a prominent California businessman, was relieved of much of his suffering, Dr. Couch said. Since then, he added, some 16 hemophiliac children have been given rutin therapy, daily oral doses of the non-toxic drug. These children, he said, have received varying degrees of relief.

He emphasized that the drug, which he termed "really a food," does not cure the condition but relieves many of pain and apparently staves off many of the irregular sieges of suffering in hemophilia. Victims suffer severe hemorrhages, often from the slightest injury.

Coating Resists Scratches

Dr. Frank L. Teuton of this city, a member of Agriculture Department's bureau of chemistry, told of the development of "allyl starch," a coating material that has proved highly resistant to heat, scratching and "glass rings," the markings on furntiure from beverage glasses.

The coating, which is painted on like varnish, can be made from many starch and sugar materials such as potatoes, corn and sugar.

Dr. Philip J. Schaible, of Cincinnati, Ohio, executive director of the Distillers Feed Research Council, told of the livestock food use of whisky mash residue.

When the grain is processed only the starches are removed, he explained.

Superior Cattle Feed

The rest, enriched in the distilling processes with yeast, becomes a feed superior to the original grain, he said. Used in combination with natural grain and roughage for livestock and poultry feeds, the distiller feeds produce heavier animals in quicker time, he said.

Dr. H. J. Prebluda, of New York, a nutritionist with the United States Industrial Chemicals, Inc., traced the productivity of the hen back from horse-and-buggy days. Today's model, he pointed out, lays about twice as many eggs for each pound of feed as the 1900 hen.

Much of the increase, he said, can be attributed to the scientifically developed new feeds which provide concentrated egg-building substances.

The three-day meeting is scheduled to end at a banquet tonight, with Charles F. Brannan, Secretary of Agriculture, the principal speaker.

The Veterans Administration was warned yesterday that its plan to wipe out about 4700 medical jobs by April 10 would seriously hamper the care and treatment of veterans, particularly nervous and mental cases.

The complaints were made by the American Psychiatric Association and the American Legion.

Legion Commander George N. Craig sent President Truman a telegram of protest and asked him to take "emergency measures" to keep the medical staff at its present strength "until the full needs of the Veterans Administration are determined and a more orderly process of adjustment effected."

APA President Dr. George S. Stevenson of New York said reports from VA hospitals and clinics in the past two weeks made it "all too clear" that "the VA's 50,000-odd psychiatric veteran patients would be the ones to suffer from the lowering of standards and services necessitated by the personnel cut."

He cited specific hospitals where treatment of mental patients would have to be curtailed, and said a reduction in training programs for nurses and aides made it "inevitable that incidents of abuse and nervous and mentally disabled patients will increase."

"Moreover, it will be necessary to increase the use of physical and chemical restraints for violent cases, since lack of supervisory personnel makes it impossible to do otherwise," he said.

Dr. Stevenson expressed hope that a widespread public protest would cause Congress to provide more money for the VA and put a last-minute stop to the proposed cutback.

VA Administrator Paul R. Gray, jr., has announced that he wll lop off 7800 VA jobs by April 10. VA officials said about 4700 of these would be in the medical program, but not all would be doctors and nurses.

They said the cut was necessary because the agency found it was going to be "in the red" about 30 million dollars on April 1 largely because Congress voted pay raises last year but didn't provide extra money to pay them.

A VA spokesman said it would be impossible to tell until the job cut went through what the effect would be. He pointed out that the reduction will be in jobs, not actual employes. And he noted that some hospitals had not hired all the staff they were entitled to so in some cases there might be no firings at all.

New Auto Tags Must Be on By Midnight

Today is the deadline for (1) buying new District auto tags, and (2) making second half or third quarter payment on District real estate and personal property taxes.

Traffic officials warned it will be illegal to drive vehicles bearing 1949 tags after midnight tonight. Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson announced that persons whose taxes are not paid or in the mails by midnight will be charged interest at the rate of 1 percent a month.

Yesterday's sale of 5156 tags was 200 less than the number sold Thursday. But each tag sold yesterday and today sets a new record for March registration, traffic officials said.

Has Home Task

Archivist Retires After 13 Years

After 13 years as an archivist for the National Archives, Miss Ellen D. Fawcett of 517 Prince st., Alexandria, will retire today to do some private archival work.

Miss Fawcett

The project Miss Fawcett has in mind is to sort out letters and papers in the attic of her home, "Fawcett House," which is occasionally opened to the public on house tours. The papers cover seven generations of the Fawcett and allied families.

One treasure was located in the house in the early part of the century. It was a rare Blue Boy stamp, one of the few issued in Alexandria before the general sale of postage stamps there. It brought $3000 from a collector.

Before entering Government service, Miss Fawcett was executive secretary of the Dictionary of American Biographies, a project sponsored by the American Council of Learned Societies.

A native of Alexandria, Miss Fawcett attended private schools there. Her hobbies include traveling and art.

Lieutenant of the Guard Retires at Library

In 13 years as a lieutenant of the guard for the Library of Congress, William G. Huntley never made an arrest.

"If people did anything wrong," Huntley explained, "we preferred just to give them a bawling out. Often they'd come back later and thank us."

Lieut. Huntley

Huntley, 68, of 1200 44th pl. se., retired Wednesday from the guard force and received a wallet and other gifts from his coworkers.

Born in Wales, England, he came to the United States as an infant. He joined the Marine Corps in 1904 and retired after 33½ years, including World War II service as an instructor and field major-sergeant at the Marine Barracks here.

Overseas duty with the Marines included duty in the Philippines, China, Cuba, Santo Domingo and Nicaragua. During World War I he did publicity work for the Marines in Philadelphia.

Huntley joined the guard staff of the Library in 1935 and was made a lieutenant after eight months.

Married, he has two grown children. He said his only plans are "just to work around the house."

State Worker to Retire, Do Sightseeing Here

Miss Mary A. Fuerst, of 2212 I st. nw. will retire from the State Department today after 32 years with the department. She will receive a letter of commendation from Secretary of State Acheson at 5:15 p. m. today in the secretary's office.

A native of Iowa, Miss Fuerst came to Washington in 1918. She is a communications analyst for the Division of Communications and Records.

Miss Fuerst said she intends to remain in the District and, despite her long residence here, "do some sightseeing."

Bombay to Go Dry

Bombay, India, (Friday) March 31 (AP).—The Provincial Government closed all bars in Bombay Province last night. Complete prohibition for the 30 million citizens goes into effect April 6.

Cancer Experts Test Each Other on Diagnoses

The American Association for the Study of Neoplastic Diseases began its annual meetings here yesterday—and pointed up the complexities of cancer.

The organization of some 400 surgeons, pathologists and radiologists met as usual at Garfield Hospital largely to bone up on tumor diagnosis.

Primary purpose of the meetings is for the members to test each other with actual case materials, explained Dr. Lewis C. Pusch, York, Pa., hospital pathologist and association president. And yesterday's tests showed that the diagnosticians often disagree.

"Some persons may have the idea that a doctor can just look at you and tell you whether or not you have cancer, but it's not that easy," one member explained.

He pointed out that every individual type of cell of every tissue of the body can develop both harmless and malignant tumors. The diagnostician's job is to determine into which class the tumors fall.

Admittedly, the cases presented for test at the annual study meetings are "borderline cases," the tumors hard to distinguish by known diagnostic procedures. Largely from such cases come the errors that hurt the profession, the patients who are told they are dying but who outlive the doctor, and others who die of malignant tumors falsely diagnosed as benign ones.

Members presenting their test cases are generally sure of their own diagnosis, either from consultation with other cancer experts or from clinical follow-up of the patient. They present, however, only the material that was available for the original diagnosis. The group members study the evidence of case history, slides and other materials, and then write their own diagnosis.

Yesterday, as is usual at the meetings, the president said, many of the diagnoses conflicted.

Disagreement in diagnosis is why the organization was founded, in 1930, by the late Dr. Joseph C. Bloodgood, eminent surgeon and pathologist with Johns Hopkins University and Hospital. It was Dr. Bloodgood who advocated the experts-test-the-experts procedure of the annual meetings.

About 100 of the nearly 400 members are expected to attend before the meetings end, Saturday, Dr. Pusch said.

Forewoman of Maids To Retire After 31 Years

Mrs. Sadie Gilbert, of 1812 6th st. nw. will retire from the General Services Administration today after 31 years' service.

Mrs. Gilbert was made a forewoman for the GSA's maid staff at the Department of Commerce about six years ago.

A party will be held in her honor at 12:30 p. m. today.

Heart Patient Research Begun By U. S. in Baltimore Hospital

The start of actual patient-treatment research by the National Heart Institute was anounced last night by Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator.

The new unit, termed the Clinical Section on General Medicine and Experimental Therapeutics, will serve as the nucleus for staffing the heart study section of the Clinical Research Center, Bethesda, Md., when the center opens to patients, in 1952.

About one fourth of the beds of the new 500-bed hospital have been tentatively allotted to heart patients.

Surg. Gen. Leonard A. Scheele, of U. S. Public Health Service, appointed Dr. Luther L. Terry, chief of the medical service of the Marine Hosptal, to head the newly formed section. It will function at its outset with some 60 beds in the Baltimore hospital.

Up till now, the National Heart Institute, set up by Congress in 1948, has been carrying out laboratory studies in heart and blood circulation ills. Actual patient studies, however, were relegated to other institutions supported by NHI grants.

The expanded program will permit the institute to more closely correlate its investigations into the full field of heart disease study, from laboratory studies to the care and treatment of human patients.

Delta Sigma Pi Opens Three-Day Conference Here

About 200 are expected to attend the eastern regional conference of Delta Sigma Pi, professional commerce fraternity, here today to Sunday.

The theme of the meeting will be labor-government-management relations and sessions will be held at Georgetown University, the Hotel Raleigh, Hotel Washington and the Potomac Boat Club with the Georgetown School of Foreign Service and the Washington Alumni Club of Sigma Pi as hosts.

Speakers will include Senator Matthew Neely (D., W. Va.), chairman of the District Committee; the Very Rev. Hunter Guthrie, president of Georgetown University; Harry Read of the CIO, and Erik Kjellstrom of the NAM.

South-of-Border Flavor

Mexican Air Colors Council Festivities

By Marie McNair

As meetings of the Interamerican Economic and Social Council continue in Washington, delegates continue to party. It was Mexico's turn yesterday and the Ambassador Rafael de la Colina and Senora de Colina were hosts at a large reception in honor of the top Mexican delegate, Antonio Martinez Baez, who's also Minister of Economy in the Mexican cabinet.

Senora de Martinez Baez shared honors with her husband as they stood with their hosts to greet the stream of guests.

There was a definite south-of-the-border flavor to the party yesterday. Senora de Martinez Baez's gown of peacock blue was draped with a matching serape bordered in green and scarlet, and there were toothsome delicacies from Mexico on the buffet table. But American-born Senora de la Colina was strictly American 1950, wearing a long black skirt and a white chiffon and lace blouse.

There was a crowd around the bar, set up in the blue and white tiled conservatory where tiled plaques of the various Mexican states form a frieze around the wall. There was another crowd around the long buffet table, digging in to guacomole—alligator pear paste with onion seasoning—with tostados—to the uninitiated, cornmeal flour fried in thin crisp crackers. There were empanadas, they're pastry squares filled with meat; and something called chicharron, which is pork skin baked and fried and feathery as a potato chip. Then there were the regulation cold hams, and turkeys, and the inevitable canapes which were going begging.

Early arrivals were Mrs. Edward H. Conger with her son-in-law, Lieut. Comdr. Arthur Sullivan, and her old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Stewart of New York.

The Argentine Ambassador, Jeronimo Remorino, who is delegate from his country to the Inter-American Economic and Social Council, stopped to talk to Edward G. Miller, Assistant Secretary of State, who heads our delegation to the council, and Walter Donnelly, our Ambassador to Venezuela.

Those guests in dinner jackets and dress uniforms were on their way to a dinner across the street where the Inter-American Defense Board was celebrating the eighth anniversary of its founding.

Col. Robert Guggenheim wore "black tie" for the dinner at the Statler Hotel by Columbia University Alumni in honor of its boss, Gen. Ike Eisenhower. Polly Guggenheim was there and in the crowd also were Paul Daniels, United States Ambassador to the OAS.

Saw Senator Alexander Wiley and Senator and Mrs. Pat McCarran and Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross exchanging pleasantries with Tom Burke, and Mrs. Burke not far away. Tallest man in the room was Albert Nufer, one of our delegates to the Economic and Social Council. Prettiest women? There were lots of them. But Senora de Heurtematte, wife of Panama's delegate, and Senora de Colom, whose husband is chief of the Agricultural and Conservation section of OAS, were up on top. Gladys Heurtematte wore gossamer black lace with a wide black hat bending beneath the weight of purple lilacs.

Then there were the Panama Ambassador, Rodolfo Herbruger; Justice and Mrs. Harold Burton, Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Gonzalo Guell, delegate from Cuba; the Haitian Ambassador, Joseph Charles; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Col. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, the Ecuador Ambassador, Augusto Dillon; Mrs. Ken Regan, Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. George Maurice Morris and her mother, Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard; Mrs. James Macpherson and Mrs. Paul Nachtman together; the Dominican Ambassador and Senora de Thomen, Undersecretary of the Navy and Mrs. Dan Kimball, Mrs. Walter Wilds, Mme. Espaillat and Mrs. Nathan Hurwitz.

'Phantom Coats' Designed For Washington's Summer

The ladies will be wearing coats in Washington this summer. And that's not a weather prediction!

The fashion industry has come up with tissue-thin, sleeveless "phantom coats" and tiny bolero jackets that reach just below the collar bone for Washington damsels to don when temperatures soar.

One outstanding contributor to this new style of summer "coats" is Mme. Pauline Trigere, a French-born New York designer who is making her first visit to the Capital.

Mme. Trigere, winner of last year's American Fashion Critics' Award, showed a dozen or so of her new summer creations yesterday at the Washington Fashion Group luncheon at the Washington Hotel.

And she must have had the Washington weather in mind as she designed the costumes.

Her sleeveless "phantom coat" is made from the very sheer fabric—almost transparent. And it hangs so loosely from all sides that the wearer hardly knows she has it on.

Why wear a coat at all under those circumstances? Well, a woman never feels totally well groomed on the street unless she has some semblance of a coat. It's phychological, they say.

The bolero jackets and capelettes are perhaps the trickiest of all. The shorter they come, the more stylish.

At best, it's just a suggestion of a coat.

In the 13 years she's been in this country, Mme. Trigere has become known as one of New York's most practical designers. Most of her summer styles have soft, simple lines and swishing circular skirts that are easy to wear, no matter what size the figure.

And the French designer has been kind to her customers in her choice of materials for the coming season.

She sticks almost exclusively to English voile, silk chiffon and Italian silk linen, probably the coolest of fabrics.

Mme. Trigere, who said she came to Washington to see the cherry blossoms, shared yesterday's style show with Pasternak's Dress Shop and Woodward & Lothrop's. The two stores displayed some of their newest imports from France. Mrs. Marian Tolson, regional director of the Fashion Shop, introduced the special guests for the afternoon, and Hazel Markel, program director of Station WTOP, was chairman of the luncheon program.

Among the guests at the head table were Mrs. Harold Burton, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim.

Hoover Plan Attacked by DAV Officials

Officials of the Disabled American Veterans last night urged a campaign by former servicemen to defeat veterans' provisions of the Hoover Commission report.

Veterans' preference in employment, veterans' benefits and employment opportunities and "cutbacks" in medical services were discussed before a student group at the Hall of Government, George Washington University, 21st and G sts. nw.

Kenneth C. Bradley, national DAV director of employment, predicted that curtailment of veterans' preference in employment will not get out of committee during the current session of Congress.

Charging that newspaper accounts of advantages of the Hoover report for veterans are "the bunk," Bradley predicted revival of the veterans' preference issue next year.

In urging a campaign to fight enactment of the Hoover report wherein it affects veterans, he was joined by George Shankel, DAV national service officer; James W. Lumesden, DAV national non-Government employment officer, and Ccero Hogan, DAV national director of claims.

The King Chapter No. 4 of DAV at George Washington is organizing a "combat team" to assure preference and security in employment for former servicemen through a "word-of-mouth" campaign in the District.

DAR Honors Ex-President

Baltimore, March 31 (AP). — A birthday party for its outgoing national president, Mrs. Roscoe O'Byrne of Brookville, Ind., concluded the convention of the Maryland society of the Daughters of the American Revolution today.

The Maryland meeting was the last Mrs. O'Byrne was to attend as president. She leaves the office next month.

The Free State D. A. R. group presented Mrs. O'Bryne with a poem, written for the occasion by Mrs. George C. Vietheer, regent of the Baltimore chapter.

At the morning session, Rear Admiral Harold C. Train, United States Navy (retired) addressed the State meeting of international organizations for peace.

Scalley Sworn In as Judge

Attorney Thomas C. Scalley, former deputy register of wills for the District, was sworn in yesterday as a Municipal Court judge.

The oath was administered by District Court Judge James Kirkland, in a flower-decked court room, crowded with Judge Scalley's friends and his new associates.

Also present were his wife, Nancy, and their four children, Thomas, jr., 23; Robert G., 19; Julia Anne, 16, and Mary Elizabeth 13.

His former associate in a law practice here, Simon F. McHugh, had the honor of giving him his new robe.

Judge Scalley, who is 50 and a native of Boston, has practiced general law since 1930. He served as deputy register of wills during the war and at one time was assistant legal adviser to the Railroad Retirement Board.

He received his B. A. degree in 1924 and his law degree in 1928 from Georgetown University. He resides at 5019 41st st. nw.

Senators Ask D. C. For Day-Care Plan

Before an audience of some 25 working mothers, a Senate District Subcommittee yesterday again directed city officials to submit promptly a plan for continuing the child-day care program here for at least another year.

The program, which no District agency wants to administer, looks after 278 children of low-income working mothers in six day care centers.

Operated on a year-to-year basis since 1946, the centers are due to close June 30, unless Congress approves new legislation and appropriations before then.

Yesterday's public hearing was on a bill to continue the present program with the same financing —$100,000 District appropriation plus fees paid by parents. A new feature would permit the Commissioners to contract with private agencies to operate the care centers. The measure is sponsored by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.).

Testimony of the mothers and citizen groups was solidly behind the program's continuance. Many demanded that it become a permanent community fixture.

But remarks of the Commissioners' spokesman and District agency heads clearly indicated they do not want the financial or administrative responsibility of the war-born project.

Corporation Counsel Vernon told the Senate group the Commissioners do not favor continuing the care centers as a District undertaking. "But since they have not come up with an alternative solution for operating them and since the bill would let the city heads carry it out on a contract basis," he said, "they will not oppose this legislation."

Gerard M. Shea, director of the Board of Public Welfare, which has operated the program since 1946 and would continue to do so under the Kefauver measure, reiterated the board's position:

"The board recognizes the need for this type of program, but again takes the position that its development and administration does not belong to the Board of Public Welfare." The board took that action at its December meeting.

Senator Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N. J.), then presiding over the hearing, turned next to Daniel L. Seckinger, District health officer.

"Custodial Phase" Worries

"Would you be willing to take it (the day-care program) on a temporary basis," the Senator asked.

Seckinger replied he thought the program was a "good" one and that it might be "integrated with the Health Department child guidance and health program." But, he added, "It's the custodial phase of the program that makes us pause."

The health officer said he had been approached on the question of his department taking over the centers "only a few days ago, and we frankly haven't had time to correlate our thinking."

Whereupon Hendrickson commented he felt the centers should be continued. "The job before us," he said, "is to find a parent for the child."

He asked Seckinger to restudy the interagency dilemma with other city officials and submit within a week an administrative plan for continuing the centers.

To Meet With Corning

Later Seckinger and Shea told reporters they would meet Tuesday with School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning in a new effort to come up with a solution.

Leonard S. Edmonds, for the Washington Federation of Churches, reiterated the churches' interest in the center but said the "District government must cooperate and share the responsibility."

Others testifying for continued operation of the centers included: Mrs. Milton Dunn, of the District League of Women Voters; Mrs. Gladys H. Cook, member of the Child Day Care Advisory Committee; C. M. Clifford, business agent of the Retail Clerks, Local 6398 (AFL); Miss I. Evelyn Smith, consultant in the Children's Bureau, and Mrs. Irene Raine, chairman of the Parents Committee on Child Day Care.

Greater Violence Breaks in Strike Of Snuff Workers

Memphis, Tenn., March 30 (AP). A threat-shouting, rock-throwing mob today turned the seventy-seventh day of the American Snuff Co. strike into the most violent yet.

Six non-union employes were injured slightly. Three automobiles were overturned. Windows in private cars and a company bus, loaded with workers, were smashed.

The ruckus brought the arrest of 21 persons.

The trouble began when the company bus pulled up to the plant with non-union employes. A crowd of some 500 persons, including striking members of the CIO United Steelworkers Union and sympathizing CIO members from other plants in Memphis, milled about the area.

Nearly every window in the bus was broken by missiles thrown from the crowd.

Crommelin Expects To Run for Senate

San Francisco, March 30 (AP). Navy Capt. John G. Crommelin, who figures if he can get elected to the United States Senate "I can keep on talking," flies to his native Alabama tonight.

He said he almost certainly would run independently for the seat held by Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.). It's too late to file for the Democratic primary.

Crommelin, 44, is beginning his Navy disciplinary furlough, at half pay, imposed because of his continual criticism of armed forces unification policies.

AN OPEN LETTER TO:

The Congress of The United States

Under a former Administration, the Hon. John Hay, Secretary of State, gave this nation the "Open Door" policy to China and the Orient and thus established an international viewpoint on the part of our nation's foreign policy makers. This was our first official break from Isolationism. We talk a lot about Nationalism and Internationalism. Yet today this nation stands isolated as never before in a maze of indecision and controversial statements on the Orient.

If we would look back a few years and again act under a bi-partisan agreement, in our way of thinking, we would no doubt receive consideration in all parts of the world for our long established American policy of the "Open Door." This would do away with any back door maneuver for anyone's political advantage. First, we are essentially a business nation with ample capital, labor and "know how." Our worldly experience in trade and in the advancement of peace is well established. Better understanding with the world is the first and surest move on our part and trade is the cornerstone of that better understanding.

China is and has been for centuries a business and trading nation. The Chinese are natural and traditional traders and business men. We can't afford to lose face by cutting off Oriental markets and the profitable business with a people whose influence covers 2/3 of the world's population. The revolution in China is not our business; the disagreements among their leaders should not influence American policies and our world relations.

Take the Chinese as a people—their history shows they have always absorbed other nationals—their philosophy has almost always brought China through. Today China urgently needs food and essentials for health. The United States is best equipped to help China in this fight to deal freely with the world. If we can afford to finance a one man's destiny to destroy political opposition, we must remember that the results of this move on our part could and well might last a century.

No doubt, the Chinese people have had a situation forced upon them by ambitious leaders guided by strength, weakness or selfishness. If the Chinese people want a change, they no doubt will achieve it as history will prove.

We in this country have been guided by an academic group of people of little or no business experience or responsibility. This has led to national indecision and mistrust. We have paid through the nose for crystal gazing and amateur philosophies. We are still searching the clouds for an answer to this chaotic condition all the while walking further into a quicksand of international intrigues and amateurish minded statecraft.

The American people are waking up from this manufactured confusion. Today we live by pro this, and pro that—selling out and giving away our resources under the pressure of foreign ideologies. How much longer will the American public remain apathetic to this national emergency and permit this nation to be led to disintegration?

No man or party of men should barter and trade away the destiny of this nation under the functioning of an academic group of idealistic planet makers. Every piece of legislation before Congress costs great sums of money—yet we pay little attention to business and trade which provides the only bag we have to dip into for that money. The world flocks to Washington to get, and does get, what they ask for. Every dream conceived and concocted by alien minded politicians (often guided by the textbook of Machievelli) get what they ask for —while we finance our competitors and close the door of opportunity at home. If our American Way is what we say it is, and we believe in the American way, we should be careful not to cut off the pipe line of supply and demand.

Think well of our history. Think of what made us great. Remember our stewardship for this nation will always be a matter of record. It is our duty to stay great—we are only the temporary custodians of this nation. Our duty and obligation is to deliver this nation intact to the future generation.

We talk about face saving. Many people think we not only lost face—but we have lost our heads as well. On the assumption that we want peace, our policy in that direction should be well taken, and we believe it should be steadfastly maintained.

Trade is one solution to a better understanding with the peoples of the world regardless of race, creed, color or political philosophy. We should take things as we find them, retaining at all times our own American ideology at home, and in this way serve as an example to others.

The "Open Door" doctrine traditional to American trade and foreign commerce and free access to the outer world is one solution to peace—Business, big and little, demands an outlet to compete with the rest of the world. NATIONS NEVER STAND STILL—THEY GO UP OR GO UNDER. To meet American commitments, both at home and abroad, we ask the Congress to exercise our rights under the established "Open Door" policy with China. Traditionally, Americans are the most natural people to carry on trade based on mutuality—our past actions will bear this out.

Playing politics with American destiny, our foreign trade and our Flag, is as dangerous as it is foolish—It most certainly is NOT the American Way.

Croppies, Rise Up

It was a very strange assortment of political bedfellows that gathered under the single set of blankets Wednesday in the House of Representatives to obtain the passage of the Fogarty amendment to H. R. 7797, whereby further economic aid to Great Britain would be suspended until the partition of Ireland has been ended. Probably no one was more surprised by the result than Representative Fogarty himself, whose motive in offering the amendment seems not to have been the wrecking of the Marshall Plan but to obtain a pretext for agitating the cause of Irish unification over the pages of the Congressional Record.

For this contretemps the Administration leaders in Congress have only themselves to blame, and this was another testimony to the poverty of that leadership this session. The record shows that not much more than a third of the House was present when the vote was taken. It also reflects a high degree of parliamentary ingenuity on the part of Mr. Fogarty and his Irish-American colleagues. They had enlisted the help of Congressmen representing constituencies in which Zionist sentiment is powerful; evidently by promising to support, if occasion arises, another amendment to prohibit further shipments of arms by the British to the Arabs. Mr. Fogarty and his friends were also abetted on principle by isolationists like Mr. Dondero, who perceive the hidden hand of Red conspiracy in almost every move of the Administration, by Mr. Marcantonio, whose fidelity to the Communist Party line has never been known to waver, and by some of the more astringent Republicans eager to snatch at any opportunity for embarrassing the Administration.

And certainly the Administration has been grievously embarrassed, especially since the shillelagh waving and Sassenach baiting coincided with the almost simultaneous arrivals of the first Ambassador of the Irish Republic and of the Prime Minister of Northern Ireland. No doubt it was also a most humiliating afternoon for the British, or for such of them as may still be sensitive on the question of their sovereignty.

For the rest of the world it was a highly instructive lesson in the intricacies of a political system based upon a separation of powers and the war of the right hand against the left. As for Mr. Fogarty, he is now pretty much in a position to dictate his terms for consenting to the elimination of his amendment from the final drafting of the bill. Since he is a reasonable man, as well as a clever one, we feel pretty sure he would settle for some kind of resolution approving the reunification of Ireland without seeking to enforce it by direct pressure.

Burleson Amendment

Unlike the harebrained action of the House in voting to deny ECA funds to Great Britain so long as Ireland remains partitioned, the Burleson amendment to the foreign-aid bill earmarking a billion dollars of ECA funds for the purchase of surplus American agricultural products cannot be dismissed as a legislative prank. The House approved the amendment only after prolonged debate, and in face of warnings that it would give color to Russian charges that the ECA is a device for dumping American surpluses on European markets.

Actually the Burleson amendment is not a dumping device, for the ECA plans to spend more than a billion dollars for American farm products next year. But, on top of the quarter of a billion dollar cut previously voted by the House the amendment would seriously handicap ECA in trying to readjust its buying program. The reason is that ECA could not use any part of the billion dollars thus earmarked for purchases of American farm products for any other purpose. Even if the Secretary of Agriculture refused to permit ECA to procure a commodity needed in Europe, because the domestic supply was inadequate to meet our own needs, no part of this billion-dollar earmarked fund could be used to purchase that commodity outside the United States. There would be a similar handicap to administration if bountiful crops in Europe made the countries there less dependent upon American farms and they wanted to switch to other goods.

From a purely selfish viewpoint the farm bloc is committing a grave error in sponsoring an amendment that would "hang a farm program on as the tail to a world-recovery program." As Congressman Fulton warned his colleagues, "As soon as dumping becomes unpopular, and if this program for European aid becomes unpopular and is terminated, so then will the farm program be terminated." Moreover, if farmers are given preferred treatment by ECA, other producers will begin bombarding Congress with requests that funds be earmarked for their benefit. Enactment of the Burleson amendment would, in short, set a precedent that might wreck the ECA program.

Certainly the Burleson amendment would make it extremely difficult to resist the pressure to turn ECA into an all-American aid program. Such a reductio ad absurdum would alienate the nations of western Europe and undermine the Atlantic Alliance in the campaign to build up resistance to Communist infiltration. Fortunately the Burleson amendment, voted when the House was sitting as a committee of the whole, is tentative. It is to be hoped that wiser second thoughts will prevail, and this mischievous provision will be deleted before the final passage of the foreign-aid authorization bill.

Little Money

Any fool can go to war or produce conditions that make war inevitable but it takes a wise man to develop those conditions which prevent wars. That is why we give a particular welcome to Secretary Acheson's Point IV statement yesterday to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The Secretary was at his expository best. He showed how Point IV is a security measure in a very real sense, and therefore "an essential arm of our foreign policy." The word defense is gravely misused as meaning only military defense. "Our military and economic security," said Secretary Acheson, "is vitally dependent on the economic security of other peoples."

Now this economic security of other peoples that the Secretary spoke of can be satisfied only by economic improvement. By no means is the only discontent in the world produced by Communists or furnished by communism. One of the phenomena of the times is that increasing numbers of people "no longer accept poverty as an inevitable fact of life." This is the characteristic of the entire world of the Orient. The resignation that used to have either a religious or a philosophical sanction is rapidly disappearing over the teeming and wide spaces of the East. As the result either of contact with the West or the impact of Western institutions, a sort of enlightenment, or belief in progress and desire for improvement, is spreading to Asia and Africa.

Here is a fact that must be faced. It is being faced by the President's program for the development of the underdeveloped areas through the medium of technical assistance. This is not a big-money idea. It is no effort to restore the age of imperialism in another guise. The imperial projects of prewar years served in many cases to disturb delicately adjusted and static economies in the process of selfish exploitation. Point IV is a little money idea, conceived as a cooperative venture in which the West will supply the know-how and the recipient countries capital and labor. Its aim is to help people do better what they already do by giving them the techniques which have built up the living standards of the Western world.

Point IV in this phase of it is a noble concept which has rich possibilities for good. Most of the Eastern countries, looking at what the West has done, think the reason lies in industrialization. This is a vast mistake. If the West encouraged it, these countries would develop lopsided economies. They can best satisfy the people's desire for betterment by helping the agriculturist. Better care of the soil, improved products, cooperative credit, tube wells, village handicrafts, rural rehabilitation, ideas of storing and processing and selling—these are the contributions that the West can bring to the East to mutual advantage. As Mr. Edward W. Russell told the National Farm Chemurgic Council in Washington on Wednesday, "the human race need not stay poor." Secretary Acheson gave many illustrations yesterday in behalf of his thesis that the channeling of know-how is a real test of Western statesmanship.

Evacuation Claims

Two years ago Congress passed an act to compensate persons of Japanese ancestry for the property losses they suffered as a result of being excluded by the Army from their homes on the West Coast. More than 120,000 persons, two thirds of them American citizens, were evacuated in 1942 as a military precaution against espionage or sabotage. The haste with which they had to leave their places of residence and business resulted in many instances in forced sales to unscrupulous buyers or in the depreciation of property through lack of care. The Evacuation Claims Act, giving the Department of Justice authority to settle valid claims up to $2500 and to adjudicate larger claims, was adopted by Congress as a matter of simple justice to people who had suffered these hardships through no fault of their own.

Although the Department of Justice had estimated that it would need 10 million dollars to settle these claims in the fiscal year 1951, it asked Congress, in the interest of economy, for an appropriation of only five million dollars for actual claim payments and $304,800 for administrative expenses. The Appropriations Committee of the House cut this request to a total of four million dollars, of which only a quarter million may be spent for administration. The effect of this is to thwart the hope that the Evacuation Claims Act extended. And it is at the same time one of those pennywise pieces of economy that must in the end prove foolishly extravagant.

Close to 25,000 claims have been filed. The Department of Justice must review and adjust them individually. The inadequacy of the funds available for administrative purposes, even more than the meagerness of the sum allotted for actual settlement of claims, confines the department to mere nibbling at the job instead of tackling it and getting it done. Neither economy nor justice will be served by dragging this program out over a period of years. The longer the delay, the more difficult will be the problems of adjudication. Many of the claimants are now of advanced years. Restitution, already long overdue, must be made promptly if it is to be meaningful. We hope that the House will restore at least the full amount needed to carry forward the administrative task efficiently.

Eisenhower's Advice

General Eisenhower has made it clear that he served merely as the "carpenter" rather than as the "architect" of the 13-billion-dollar military budget. Thus his assent, if it could be called an assent, to the reduction of the budget below the 15-billion-dollar budget was reluctant. At the same time, he also has made it clear that he is no jingoist. He stresses the necessary dovetailing of military strength with a healthy national economy, and he emphatically does not stand for 70 Air Force groups. "I believe," he said, "that you are fairly well on the line—the line between economy and security." An additional outlay of 500 million dollars for Air Force procurement, antisubmarine operations and Alaskan defense would bring military strength to a point where it could meet needs for the indefinite future.

Such testimony from one of the country's most respected military statesmen effectively answers the cries of the militarists who clamor for a garrison state to match Russia. It does not say that the present budget is perfect, but it does say that in the main the Johnson economies have been good. What, then, of the increase General Eisenhower suggests? This newspaper already has deplored the insufficient effort being put on antisubmarine research. Likewise, we believe that Alaskan defense, including the radar screen, warrant urgent attention, and we hope that the House will restore the cuts made in these items by its Appropriations Committee.

With respect to the 48 fully modern air groups which the general mentions, the great trouble is the lack of a yardstick. What is a "modern" group? Air Secretary Symington has stated that only approximately 42 of the present 48 groups are modern. But the size of groups is constantly changing, has changed, in fact, since the concept of 70 groups was advanced. For example, Defense Secretary Johnson asserted, in one chapter of his new semiannual report, that because of organizational changes in the size of Air Force groups, the present 48 groups are equivalent to 52½ under the former concept. These are Air Force estimates. Mr. Johnson also stated:

> As President Truman has pointed out, "the number of groups is a somewhat misleading measure of air power, since the character, size, number of aircraft, and other elements of the group are not fixed but constantly change as conditions require." An example of the type of change to which the President referred is the programmed size of each B-36 heavy bombardment group—which stood at 18 planes per group less than a year ago, and which stands at 30 planes per group today. In this connection it should also be noted that the programmed size of nine groups which stood at 30 B-29s or B-50s per group two years ago, stands at 45 today. In addition, these groups include 20 B-29-type tankers which increase the effective range of each individual bomber.

Particularly relevant in the discussion of air groups is the obsolescence factor. Are planes to be arbitrarily written off as obsolete after a certain period, or is their obsolescence to be measured against the planes of a potential enemy? The contention that Russia has some 300 B-29-type bombers has been used as an argument for more American planes. Can this same contention then be turned, as has been done, and used as an argument that this country's B-29s are obsolete? Furthermore, is it necessary that all 48 groups, including troop-carrier units, be fully modern in the jet sense?

These questions of relativity, and the obvious discrepancies between Secretaries Johnson and Symington, ought to be resolved before additional procurement is undertaken. Similarly, Congress ought to ask one other searching question: If more plane procurement is authorized, how will this affect future budgets The easiest part of procurement is always the initial authorization; it is in later years that the expense looms larger and becomes a burden. Will more planes authorized now unbalance defense later to the extent that the legitimate needs of the other services will be impaired?

UNDER THESE STREETS

Earth is there, just under the paving.
Men who prisoned him know full well
What the strength of the captive giant;
Put no trust in this molded shell!

Try with hands the silent metal
White with the charging winter storm:
Warm! As flesh in a fitted garment
Makes the stuff of the garment warm!

Earth is a god of growth and growing.
What are these barren streets and walks?
Roots examine the jointed curbstones,
Grass creeps up through ballast and knocks.

Even now as darkness hovers
Somewhere, learning the crust is light,
Earth has silently lifted upward,
Found the way to remembered light!

Stimson's Protest

Above the yelping of the McCarthys and the Wherrys, as they nip at the heels of Secretary Acheson, finally comes the voice of a big Republican, Henry L. Stimson. And seldom were the words of that splendid statesman more timely. They put tawdry maneuvers of McCarthy & Co. in their proper perspective as a cheap political stunt, designed to gain some partisan profit at the expense of the country's welfare and prestige.

Mr. Stimson's trenchant letter in the March 27 New York Times cannot help but underscore the unhappy contrast between the caliber of the former Secretary of War and that of present-day Republicans. With the exception of Senator Vandenberg, whose partial retirement is one of the tragedies of today's political scene, our leading Republicans are sadly lacking in stature. Even Senator Taft, whose integrity is not usually open to attack, does not look very pretty in the role of goading McCarthy in his cheap smear campaign. As for McCarthy, Wherry and Bridges, busy sharpening their partisan axes for Secretary Acheson, they richly deserve the appellation "little men" and the adjective "stupid" which Mr. Stimson did not hesitate to apply.

Vandenberg On ECA

What a magnificent tonic to all Americans Senator Vandenberg has provided in his timely and masterly letter of March 25 to Mr. Paul G. Hoffman, Administrator of ECA.

Whatever fair criticism there may be of the handling of our foreign affairs, there can be no question of the desirability of "going down the line" for the ECA program. As he emphasizes, that program (of which he was a major architect) was conceived, formulated and has been carried out as an unpartisan enterprise. The ills at which it was directed are, in large measure, on the way to being cured as a result of the soundness of the remedy and the skillful administration of ECA. Surely, it is a wise course to follow through with his suggestion that the same careful studies which preceded ECA be initiated now to map the policies which will be needed when ECA comes to an end in 1952.

But right now, it is urgent to keep on with appropriations for the ECA which will not hamstring its efforts. Any diminution in the effectiveness of the ECA program, which has been our most successful weapon in the cold war, will cost us more than the illusory savings of the proposed cut.

Sex Education

Intricacies of the atom bomb now are being studied by thousands of the District's high school students, according to your issue of March 23. To date the A-bomb is the world's most destructive force. Probably the most constructive force—the one essential to a continuance of human life on our old planet—is the human generative system. But local teachers have no charter for instruction in that field. In fact, it's still largely tabu in official educational circles.

In repeated resolutions, the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, 27,000 strong, have urged "that the school should help (in sex education) by laying scientific foundations through courses in elementary science, health and physical education, biology, home economics and other subject matter areas where the problem may be studied." So far, these urgings have fallen on deaf ears on Franklin School's academic Olympus. But the claim still is made that our schools are giving extensive training "to aid youth toward sound family life."

"Family life education" is a far more comprehensive term than "sex education." The two, in our view, are not properly synonymous. Sex education is, or should be, a vital component of family life education. Too often, however, the latter term is used as a rationalization by those who have acquired and continue to harbor a fear of the word "sex."

Many school boards and administrators, including those of the District of Columbia, point with pride to the family-life units in their teaching material. They applaud and indorse the family as "the basic social unit" but seem to look down their noses at sex as sort of an unfortunate but necessary concomitant that is tolerated but not approved. Yet we can't have one institution without the other; we can't have families without sex.

Labeling Veterans

I am a daily admirer of both your editorials and the clarity and completeness of your paper's news coverage. However, there is one detail that irks me considerably—that is the tendency of your reporters to label any person who commits a crime, if he has ever been in any branch of the service, as "ex-marine," or "ex-soldier," etc. I cannot see where this labeling serves any purpose other than to degrade the service in question in the eyes of many civilians.

The services have a difficult enough problem as it is to maintain the decorum of their personnel who are still in uniform, without the addition of the admittedly small percentage of the many millions of the ex-servicemen who have retired to civilian life.

Housing Defeat

To us who cherish the American privilege of individual initiative culminating in private enterprise, the recent congressional defeat of the two-billion-dollar co-op housing program is glad tidings. Perhaps if the privately operated and owned banks were not loaded down with Government restrictions, private industry would be able to supply houses for the middle income class.

"Drowning Out The Nation's Voice"

Your March 23 editorial "Drowning Out the Nation's Voice" is truly a masterpiece of point and clarity as to the grave situation facing our country in this hour of hysteria and confusion.

There can no longer be any doubt that we now are reaping the whirlwind of uncertainty and disruption, which is the inevitable consequence of drifting with the tide and nurturing a false sense of national and international security since the end of World War II.

In the first place, it was folly of the worst sort (as General Eisenhower so clearly stated in his Columbia address of the same date) for the USA to disarm to the "danger point" following the end of hostilities. True, we had the United Nations as a new source of hope and strength in our quest for peace and world security. But, at the same time, we knew full well that a former ally (USSR) not only failed to follow in our steps but proceeded forthwith to increase its armed strength!

Again, although we should have learned from our experience following World War I that "dollar diplomacy" and "economic strategy" alone will not suffice to insure the peace of the world, we immediately resorted to this method of meeting the postwar exigencies. There can be no doubt as to the value of ECA, etc., in restoring a modicum of individual and collective well-being, at least to the extent of insuring survival and a new lease on life. But economic security is of little consequence when the threat of democratic demoralization hovers over one's head like a storm cloud.

The great tragedy of the past five years has been our proneness to rely on the material aspects of life, to accept our new greatness as a matter of course, and to conclude falsely that what we had acquired through long diligence and devotion to democratic principles could not be taken from us.

There should never have been any doubt in our mind that the USSR eventually would turn upon us and seek our downfall. The Marxian Manifesto plainly calls for "international dictatorship of the proletariat" and demands the extinction of the "capitalistic state." Whatever the present strategy or tactics of the Politburo, there can be no doubt that it has not departed from the basic principle of making communism a world-wide hegemony—for the simple reason that communism is "international socialism," nothing more and nothing less.

There should never have been any belief in our mind that we had a so-called "monopoly" on atomic energy, in either its application toward peace or war. But, we blithely reveled in the strength of our alleged "atomic supremacy"—until one Soviet blast to "move a mountain and change the course of a river" sent us reeling.

There should never have been any doubt in our mind that Communist personnel or influence would be imbedded within our national structure—both official and otherwise—wherever such infiltration were possible by means fair or foul. Did not Marx tell his disciples to make allies of any (the petty bourgeoisie) who would advance their cause against their greatest enemies (the bourgeoisie)—and then turn upon their former allies and destroy them in turn? Have we not had sufficient evidence in court to prove that this commandment is being faithfully followed in our midst?

Our present impasse can be laid to two outstanding defects: (1) lack of realistic approach to present problems, and (2) lack of a definite national and international policy, reinforced by strong and uncompromising leadership. The most insidious enemy in our midst today is our national lethargy (which results in only half of our voters going to the polls in a national election), our materialistic attitude (which leads us to depend upon money and munitions instead of Christian brotherhood for world security), and our refusal to realize that peace and security are the fruits of inward desires and outward manifestations in good faith—never attainable merely through preachments, professions, pacts or protocol.

The Backward Area Fallacy

A Communication

THE CONTRAST between your editorial of March 28, "Roadblocks to Trade," and a letter by Mr. O. Strackbein, chairman of the National Labor-Management Committee on Foreign Trade Policy (Washington Post, March 27), illustrates how the area of disagreement on basic issues is being extended at the time when a unified American foreign economic policy is urgently needed.

Mr. Strackbein attacks the Administration's import policy on the assumption that in the United States, where the production problem is solved in terms of optimum production at minimum average unit cost, "a high price level" is required. The obvious inference is that in the rest of the world a high price level is not as urgently required as in the United States. It happens, however, that the rest of the world by and large solves the production problem in terms of maximum production (and employment) at any cost. This, of course, keeps not only cost-prices high but actually is pushing them higher and higher.

We may well question whether America, which averages a yearly climb of 2 percent to 3 percent in productivity per man-hour, need fear import competition from a world where productivity is at best constant if not falling. Here enters The Washington Post's premise: "This tendency to regard import restrictions as protective devices instead of measures adopted to tide countries over an emergency . . ."

The result is the inexorable logic of their situation that these countries have made trade restrictions permanent features of their foreign economic policies. Neither the dollar shortage nor the rising demand for American products abroad is an emergency phenomenon. The "dollar gap" is a superficial manifestation of two divergent trends—one, American, and the other, non-American. The origin of these trends goes back, in western Europe at any rate, to the 1880s when a period of intense cartelization was inaugurated concurrently with the passing of antitrust laws in the United States.

AS FAR AS those areas now called backward are concerned, they have been experiencing economic contraction in the secular sense since the turn of the present century. This trend has been accelerated since 1940 as a result of more or less violent inflationary pressures.

Few American industrial managers would exchange their healthy, literate, and self-respecting but "expensive" labor for the disease-ridden, illiterate, and servile-minded labor of the backward world. This fact throws serious doubt upon another of Mr. Strackbein's premises, that is, American labor cannot compete with the "cheap" labor of the rest of the world.

Some of the cheapest labor forces in the world are right here in the United States. This should not be construed to mean sharecroppers and ditch-diggers, but rather the industrial research men, laboratory technicians, and many thousands of highly skilled workers whose contributions far exceed their costs to the economy as a whole.

If tomorrow all trade barriers throughout the world were removed, it would not be this country that would be flooded with foreign goods, but rather the rest of the world would be flooded with American commodities.

The dislocation of world trade should be viewed as only an aspect of a much larger and infinitely more complicated issue with which neither ECA nor the Point IV program has yet come to grips. It is not easy to define such a complex issue, since it goes back to such questions as: What distinguishes modern industrial society from any other, whether ancient, medieval, primitive or Oriental? What has modern science and its methodology done or what can it do for us?

HISTORICALLY, the periods of economic expansion have been less conspicuous both in their number and duration than periods of contraction and stagnation.

Now we are told that we should develop underdeveloped areas, yet we lack appropriate tools of analysis. The term "un- or underdeveloped" itself, for instance, has a tendency to be identified with economic immaturity, flexibility, and ready expandibility. It would seem somewhat less than accurate to refer to an old man (a backward economy) with hardened arteries (structure of market) and poor circulation (operation of market) as a vigorous youth.

Economic development is a rational process that comes into existence gradually with the configuration of certain favorable factors, such as fluidity in the operation of the market and flexibility of its structure, mobility of resources, elasticity of the pattern of income distribution, contractual relations (in contrast to hierarchical relations dominant in backward areas), and so on. It would be a travesty if we could ignore the tragic consequences, to identify construction works with development in areas where these necessary factors are absent.

The place to begin helping other nations to help themselves could well be a disinflationary program designed and implemented to arrest and reverse the persistent trend of economic contraction.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

Truman Must Choose

A MAJOR and far-reaching shift in the whole range and tempo of American foreign policy is soon to be recommended to President Truman by Secretary of State Dean Acheson. This will be the result of the root-and-branch review of policy which Acheson initiated when President Truman announced his decision to go ahead with the hydrogen bomb.

Since that time, Acheson and almost all his most important subordinates have been concentrating on this review. Moreover, a number of experienced men from outside the department, including former Undersecretary of State Robert Lovett, Harvard President James Conant and Physicist Robert Oppenheimer have been called to Washington for consultation.

As a result of these efforts, policy papers have now been prepared for submission to the National Security Council and the President, probably shortly after Truman's return from Key West. And it can be confidently reported that all the studies have pointed in the same direction—a much greater effort in all fields is required if the United States is not to fail in its role of leader of the free world.

This conclusion has, indeed, been clearly foreshadowed in recent speeches by Secretary Acheson. Acheson has said that "the only way to deal with the Soviet Union" is to "create situations of strength" by focusing "our total resources on the winning of the struggle," as in wartime. In short, Acheson is preparing to recommend to Truman that the country be asked to treat the cold war like a war, with all the effort and much of the sacrifice that war demands.

ONE THING is clear on the face of it. There has never for many years been a time when the country, the Congress and the Administration itself have been less prepared for a bold, new approach to the world crisis. The most visible symptom of this fact is the triumph of the irresponsibles and the isolationists on Capitol Hill, where Senator Robert A. Taft has now surprisingly and dismayingly given his blessing to the malodorous "Get Acheson" campaign.

All sorts of reasons may be advanced for what is happening in Congress. There is the budget situation, which has strengthened the position of the apostles of business-as-usual. There is the illness of Senator Vandenberg, which has permitted the irresponsibilities of the Wherry-McCarthy-Bridges stripe to crawl out of the woodwork. There is the Hiss tragedy. There is Acheson's manner—perhaps because he is tired, Acheson has tended to treat members of Congress rather after the fashion of a bored and brilliant schoolmaster wearily dealing with unruly and uninformed brats.

Yet all these reasons are peripheral. The real reason lies within the Administration itself. For the Administration has been speaking with two voices. One has been the voice of Secretary Acheson, calling for "total diplomacy" and a total effort, warning that the cold war can be lost without a shot being fired.

The other voice has been the voice of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, supported by such business-as-usual confederates as Treasury Secretary Snyder and Commerce Secretary Sawyer. When this voice speaks, everything Acheson says is neatly transformed into meaningless nonsense. For it emits soothing sirup about "economy," or demonstrable untruths about the increasing military strength of the United States, or gassy boasts about "licking the hell out of Joe Stalin."

IF THE Johnsonian "economies" have permitted this country "to obtain greater national security at less expense," as Johnson has claimed, Acheson is obviously talking through his hat, when he asks us to "focus our total resources." If we can save money and at the same time be capable of "licking hell out of Joe Stalin," Acheson's warnings are alarmist twaddle.

Thus there is nothing really surprising about what is happening on Capitol Hill. Given a choice, Congress believes what it likes to believe. Johnson's phony reassurances and his talk of economy are popular. Acheson's warnings and his calls for sacrifice are not. Thus Acheson is pilloried, while Johnson, the most vulnerable public official in recent history, goes scot free.

The Acheson policy review is certain to bring this ugly situation to a head. For there is no chance at all that Congress or the country will accept the effort and expense of going over to the offensive in the cold war, unless the Administration speaks with one voice. The real decision rests, inevitably, with President Truman. Within a matter of weeks, perhaps days, he will have to make his choice—between business-as-usual and politics-as-usual, or the great effort of leadership which the world situation requires, and which only the President can make.

Docherty Installed As Pastor

REV. GEORGE M. DOCHERTY
Pronounced Benediction

The Rev. George M. Docherty last night was installed as pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

More than 800 persons crowded into Calvary Baptist Church 8th and H sts. nw., to witness the 95-minute ceremony. Others were turned away because of limited seating facilities.

Many members of the congregation heard the new minister for the first time when he pronounced the brief benediction after the service.

Mr. Docherty succeeds the late Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, who died in January, 1949. He was called to the church from his pastorate at North Church, Aberdeen, Scotland, and arrived in the United States early this week.

He was "pronounced and declared . . . duly constituted pastor" of the congregation by the Rev. Isaac M. Steenson, moderator of the Presbytery of Washington City and pastor of Clarendon, Va., Presbyterian Church.

At the service, the Rev. Robert T. Bridge, who has served as acting pastor of the church since Dr. Marshall's death, read congratulatory messages to the congregation from church officials in Aberdeen.

The Rev. Dr. Clifford E. Barbour, moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church, United States, declared in his sermon that the "Christian church will become effective in propagating the Gospel when it combines evangelical fervor with intellectual vigor."

Installation of the new pastor was held in the Baptist church because New York Avenue church is in the midst of a building program.

Its 97-year-old building is being demolished to make room for a new $893,000 church at 13th st. and New York ave. nw.

Mr. Docherty will preach his first sermon as pastor of the church at 11 a. m. on Palm Sunday, at Lisner auditorium, 21st and H sts. nw.

Frustrated GOP

By Marquis Childs

Demagogy Instead Of A Program

THE REPUBLICIAN PARTY has lost five presidential elections in a row. In the 18 years since 1932 they have lost three congressional elections and won one.

Childs

That is a somber record of defeat even when the four years of the war, which saw by comparison at least a suspension of partisan politics, are taken into account. For oldline Republicans it is not merely depressing, not merely humiliating; it is downright immoral, wicked and contrary to nature.

You can see this attitude as the two parties approach what may well be a crucial election this fall. The opposition party suffers from a deep sense of frustration and, with that, one can detect a related feeling that anything is justified in order to win.

It is easy to understand this feeling. The Republicanism of the past rooted in the belief that God and the American people meant the Republicans to govern the Nation.

This was not just a political belief; it was a creed, a faith. I saw it in my father who was born and lived all his life in Iowa. Iowa was Republican as inevitably and as finally and as unshakeably as the sun rises and sets.

OH, THERE was another political party called the Democratic Party. And at rare intervals the American people in confusion and uncertainty gave temporary support to this other party. But my father never doubted that these were temporary periods of aberration and that sooner or later, and usually sooner, the people would see the error of their ways.

My father was a delegate to the Republican convention of 1920 that nominated Warren G. Harding. I remember that I met him at the station when he returned from Chicago and it seemed to me he was just a mite shaken. But Harding was a Republican and therefore he was right.

The collapse of farm prices in 1920-21 did great harm to Iowa and to Republicans in Iowa. But it was not until long after my father's death that I realized how tenacious and how complete his faith had been in spite of these calamities. One of my father's close friends told me that my father refused to speak to him for several months because the friend had spoken slightingly of Calvin Coolidge.

The dammed-up frustration growing out of five successive defeats has generated the kind of do-or-die desperation that is visible today. If this attitude is examined carefully, its relation to the dangerous conviction that any means, however immoral, justifies the attainment of the moral end becomes clear. That end is the restoration of the Republican Party to power and the Nation to virtue and decency once again.

OUT OF this attitude comes the smear and the demagogic denunciation. Fundamentally, it is a refusal to discuss issues in the belief that such discussion is futile and that only more virulent and irrational means will carry the day.

In my opinion there is in this the potentiality of disaster, and disaster not merely for the Republican Party but for our political life. If ever there was an Administration that needed the corrective of vigorous and persistent criticism on both performance and principle it is the Truman Administration.

In large areas it is shabby, threadbare and specious, or worse. It is lacking in vigor and resolution. Far too many misfits and hacks are in important positions. Political appointments have lowered the standards of the judiciary.

For a real and a forceful opposition the opportunity would seem to be unparalleled. The answer of many Republicans is: "We tried that and it doesn't work and it won't work so long as this crowd keeps on handing out benefits."

Of course, it never has been tried in any vigorous or forthright way. One reason is that Republicans, themselves, are divided on the kind of opposition they want to set against the party in power.

In my opinion any gains growing out of the irrational and demagogic approach are bound to be short-lived. The Republican Party is not really equipped for that kind of game. The old timbers will not stand that kind of strain. If a party of irrational virulence and demagogery is to come into being, it will not be the Republican Party as we have known it.

There are Republicans who understand this. They are beginning to raise their voices. But they must assert themselves quickly if they are to set their party on a hopeful and positive direction.

Postlude

Ballet Group Sparkles on 2d Evening

By Paul Hume

Ballet Theater's second night was so good we are sorry their short stay in Washington is over.

Billy the Kid was the first real excitement of the evening. It was matched in another vein by the closing Theme and Variations.

In "Billy" the company has a real, representative piece of American art. Eugene Loring did the choreography some years ago, with music by Aaron Copland.

Brazen Virility

John Kriza's portrayal of the Kid is handsome character dancng. He looks the part, acts it with brazen virility, and gives it the right touch of self-deception. Peter Gladke, Paul Godkin, and Ruth Ann Koesun gave him wonderful support, as did the whole cast.

The choreography is weak in the brief interludes and the final recapitulation of the opening scene.

Theme and Variations at the end of the evening, found Nora Kaye in top form as a classic dancer with fresh, lithe, easy control. Youskevitch, in his tremendous solo, found new ways of looking unbelievable. He is a constant marvel. The way he balanced Kaye's dancing was breathtaking.

The corps again showed its keen awareness of the high standards they are expected to maintain. This was also true in Sylphides, the evening's opener. Diana Adams and Norma Vance contributed beautifully in the waltz and prelude.

Exceptional Accompaniment

Erik Bruhn danced with Nana Gollner in the Nutcracker pas de deux. He has all the elan and manner of the brilliant classic dancer. Miss Gollner has the reputation of a star in some cities. Her Washington performance did not merit it.

The company's accompaniments were exceptionally well played both evenings by the orchestra under Max Goberman's expert leadership.

Yesterday afternoon the National Symphony under Howard Mitchell played a special concert for school children.

Playing is Lisner Auditorium for a packed house, they gave the local premiere of Robert Ward's new overture, Jubilation. It is a virtuoso piece of writing, with broad melodies over varying backgrounds, usually syncopated in handsome style. The young audience approved it enthusiastically.

2 Help Douse Blaze at Parents' Home

If your house catches on fire, you don't have to have a fireman right there—but it helps.

The Lesers found that out at about 6 a. m. yesterday when five Lesers were routed from their beds in their home at 9036 Baltimore blvd., Berwyn, by the smell of smoke and the sight of flames.

While Mr. and Mrsfl Frank Leser and daughter, Maybelle, 27, and son William, 16 did what they could to keep the fire from getting out of control, son Rodney, 21, dashed for the Branchville Fire Department.

And well he might, for Rodney is a member of the Branchville Fire Department, the B.F.D. He drove the first truck back from the station to help put out the blaze. Also among those who responded to the alarm was the B.F.D. captain, none other than Carl Leser, 25, another son of the Lesers.

Leser, sr., estimated damage at about $4000.

Falls Church Annexation Suit Against Fairfax Opens Today

A three-judge panel, designated by the Virginia Supreme Court to decide a Falls Church annexation suit against Fairfax County, will convene at 10 a. m. today at Fairfax courthouse.

Members of the panel are Judges J. R. H. Alexander, of the 26th Virginia Circuit; Burnett Miller, of the 9th Circuit; and Paul E. Brown, of the 9th Circuit, which includes both Falls Church and Fairfax. Judge Brown is the presiding judge in Fairfax Circuit Court, where the case will be heard.

According to court officials, no actual arguments will be heard at today's initial hearing. The court is expected to set a date for the full annexation suit. However, attorneys for both Falls Church and Fairfax County will be present.

Falls Church wants to acquire nearly 14 square miles of adjacent Fairfax County territory contending its "urban" administration can best serve the area now governed by the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors. The annexation would more than double the city's present population of 7000.

Garry Davis Held By U. S. Officials As Liner Docks

New York, March 30 (U.P.)—Garry Davis, self-styled "World Citizen" came home under the French immigration quota tonight and was held by U. S. Immigration authorities.

A spokesman said Davis was being detained "for further examination as to his eligibility to enter the United States." It was indicated he might be forced to remain on Ellis Island all night.

Davis arrived from France on the liner America.

In a statement handed to reporters he said he did not intend to become a citizen of the U. S. again "since this step would not change my status as a human being on our planet."

Know Your Waterways

The "Pork Barrel" Myth

It is astounding that the derisive term "pork barrel" when used in connection with waterway legislation is so widely believed. Such legislation has been free of "pork" for a generation. Projects are almost always initiated by local interests, not by Army Engineers or politicians. To warrant approval they must be certified economically sound after hearings and long study; first, by the District officer of the Army Engineers; second, by the Division engineer; then, the findings are reviewed by the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors and, finally, by the Chief of Engineers. If they pass these tests and are approved in the House and Senate Public Works Committees, they are incorporated in an authorization bill, which, if passed, makes the projects eligible for allotment of funds when made available by Congress. Over one-half of the projects investigated are rejected by the Army Engineers because "the benefits to be anticipated . . . are insufficient to warrant the expenditure of Federal funds." No other Federal expenditure is subjected to closer scrutiny. Labeling such legislation "pork barrel" is either deliberate misrepresentation or plain ignorance; it impugns the integrity of the Corps of Engineers and its chief, committee members, and all other member of both houses of Congress.

Defense Chiefs Battle For Permanent Control Over 'Security' Risks

Defense officials yesterday went straight down the line for the Administration bill to give them permanent power to summarily suspend civilian employes on "security risk" charges.

In testimony before the House Civil Service Committee, they objected strenuously to a proposed amendment to allow accused employes to appeal to an impartial board.

Felix Larkin, a defense official, promised to use the authority sparingly and with the "greatest discretion" if it were approved. He argued that the employe would be given more protection under the proposed bill than he now gets under the temporary wartime firing power available to military officials.

Larkin explained that only 480 employes had been fired on security charges since the temporary law was enacted 10 years ago; 244 in Navy; 227 in Army; and 9 in Air Force. Less than 50 of these took place since the war's end. Nicholas Allen said the Air Force also had 192 pending cases.

Navy Undersecretary Dan Kimball said the Navy considered sex perverts a security risk. He implied that the Navy would take immediate action against any found in its employ.

Kimball also said the Navy had a policy of transferring "security risks" to routine jobs where they wouldn't come in contact with secret and classified information.

"But if they refuse to transfer," the Navy's No. 2 civilian said, "we must have a way of dealing with them and that's why we want this power to suspend them summarily."

Several committee members went out of their way to compliment Kimball for the way the Navy had handled its loyalty-security program, especially the placement of loyal employes who were given a "security risk" label in nonsensitive jobs.

Oddly enough, Commerce officials were given a terrific going-over when they revealed a similar security risk policy to the House Appropriations Committee. For doing the same thing, one department is patted on the back and the other is kicked in the teeth. You can never tell how Congress will react.

The security bill appears to have picked up several supporters on the committee. Chairman Murray (D., Tenn.) and several of his colleagues spoke up for it.

BEP: Any day now the Bureau of Engraving & Printing will announce a new wage boost for its clerical-mechanical employes. The proposed wage raise announced several weeks ago was withdrawn to revise it in line with the new wage rates at the Government Printing Office.

In addition, skilled employes at the bureau will get pay boosts in line with recent 5 to 16 cents an hour increases at the GPO. The boosts have been okayed but the several thousand employes involved won't actually get the money until Congress approves funds to foot the bill.

PLAN 18: Federal employes involved in the President's Reorganization 18 would benefit instead of getting salary cuts under it. After a week or so of indecision, the Budget Bureau, Civil Service Commission, and General Accounting Office are agreed this would be so.

The plan would transfer a number of Federal buildings outside of this city from the Postoffice to General Services. Building employes feared salary cuts under it because they are under the more liberal postal wage system. But now, the Administration promises, there would be no pay cuts and the employes would get more annual and sick leave under the classified service.

NOTES: Loyalty charges have been placed against several employe leaders in the postal service. . . Six employes are retiring today from the Veterans' Administration. They are: Charles A. Bernard, Hazel M. Braman, Hallie McAnally, Clarence C. H. Perry, Eleanor L. Umhau, and William W. Watt. . . . P. P. Greenwood retires today as chief inspecting engineer of the Panama Canal after 37 years of service in the agency here. . . . The Administration has renewed its plan to construct a building in a nearby area to house the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance now in Baltimore.

Recreation Pool Plan Wins House Support

Board Committee To Seek Conference With Chapman on Swimming Operation

A House District hearing yesterday set the stage for resuming negotiations between the District Recreation Department and the Federal Interior Department over how six public swimming pools are to be operated in Washington this summer.

House District Committee leaders are moving to support the aim of the District Recreation Department to take over operation of the pools, with two for Negroes, three for whites, and probably one on an unsegregated basis.

Interior officials expect their department to insist on retaining control over the pools and are following its policy of nonsegregated operation.

Conference With Chapman

Next step planned is for a District Recreation Board committee to seek a conference on the issue with Interior Secretary Oscar Chapman. The latter is expected to return today to his office after a trip to Key West with President Truman. District Committee members may seek to participate in the conference. The conference has not yet been arranged.

These plans were disclosed in the hearing at the Capitol. It was called by a subcommittee headed by Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.), to consider a bill by Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), District Committee chairman.

Aim of the bill is to transfer the pools from Federal to District control. The hearing was followed by an executive session which then adjourned to next Wednesday. Indications were the group will hold the bill in reserve pending the results of the conference with Secretary Chapman.

Harry S. Wender, chairman of the District Recreation Board, told the committee he hoped that by a conference with Secretary Chapman a plan could be worked out that would be "wise, sound, dignified and compatible both with the program of the President and with local customs."

Opposes Segregation

Wender referred to last year's disturbances at the Anacostia pool, which led to its being closed for the summer, as a "disgrace." He said he opposes segregation but that it cannot be eliminated by coercion. He said the board is willing to try a nonsegregated operation of McKinley pool but not of all six pools at once. If a compromise can't be reached, he said he'd favor legislation to give the District control of the pools.

Irving C. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks, and the Interior Department's representative in the District Recreation Board, said the present plan is to continue operating the pools in accord with the program of the President, and to give every possible protection to persons using the pools.

After considerable quizzing of Root, Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) suggested that if the Interior Department was going to be adamant, there was no point in going further with the hearing. Representative McMillan and Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) then joined in expressing the hope that conferences with Chapman would lead to a compromise solution.

Hopes for Solution

At one point Abernethy asked Root if he wouldn't like to get rid of the swimming pool problem. Root said he certainly would, but later modified the remark to say he hoped for a "reasonable solution."

District recreation officials now provide instruction programs and free swimming in the Federal-owned pools in the mornings, up to noon. After noon the pools are operated as a concession by the Government Services, Inc.

In practice, East Potomac and Takoma pools have been used by white swimmers; Francis and Banneker by Negro swimmers; and McKinley was used largely by Negroes last summer, officials said. Anacostia pool had been used by white swimmers until disturbances led to its closing for the summer in June last year.

Jury Told Air Embolism Killed Mrs. Campbell, Not Beating

The abortion-death of Nina Jean Campbell was caused by an air embolism, not the savage beating inflicted upon her, Deputy Coroner Dr. Christopher J. Murphy testified yesterday.

Dr. Murphy gave the details of the result of the beating, but said none of the wounds received was sufficient to cause death.

He testified at the seventh day of the trial of Ralph W. Myers, 44-year-old window-shade salesman, charged with performing the abortion in which the 20-year-old mother of two lost her life.

Reading mechanically from notes, Dr. Murphy testified his autopsy revealed that Mrs. Campbell's body was virtually covered with lacerations, contusions, abrasions, and discolorations, including "apparently teeth marks."

Dr. Murphy's testimony corroborated earlier testimony indicating that Mrs. Campbell died before she was beaten.

The deputy coroner placed the time of death as "sometime between 9 p. m. and 11 p. m. January 4."

Nurse Ruth Childs in whose apartment at 1321 Fairmont st. nw., Mrs. Campbell's body was found, has testified that at 11 p. m. January 4, she discovered Mrs. Campbell on her bed and believed she was dead, but said she saw no evidence of the beating described by Dr. Murphy, at that time.

Under questioning by Prosecutor John C. Conliff, Dr. Murphy testified that he could not positively tell whether the injuries were suffered before or after death.

But, Dr. Murphy testified, injuries inflicted from one half to two hours after death—while there is still cell life within the body—would leave their mark.

Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin questioned Dr. Murphy closely on the subject of air embolisms, referring frequently to the recent mercy-killing trial of New Hampshire doctor Hermann Sander, in which death by injection of air into the blood stream was a key issue.

Dr. Murphy told Laughlin "as to the amount of air (necessary to cause death) I can't answer. I do know that 10 c.c.s. of air injected rapidly into a dog will kill the dog almost immediately.

"In humans, air injected slowly in small amounts will not bring on death, but injected rapidly in large amounts will bring on death," the deputy coroner continued.

"I do know that in this case, sufficient air was given to cause the death," Dr. Murphy said.

Air entered the blood stream, he said, through sinuses in the uterus of the deceased. The attempted abortion was "incomplete," Dr. Murphy testified.

On redirect examination, Conliff showed Dr. Murphy a rubber syringe and asked him if it could have caused the injury to the uterus which caused air to enter the blood stream. Murphy replied that it could. The syringe was wrapped in a bloodstained newspaper, but was not further identified.

First witness on the stand yesterday was Mrs. Violet A. Poe, acting director of nurses at Children's Hospital, where Miss Childs was employed as director of education until she resigned.

Mrs. Poe testified about a telephone conversation she said she had with Myers at 8 p. m., January 5. Myers told her he had "tragic news" for her, Mrs. Poe said, that "Ruth is dead."

"No, she isn't. She just walked in my office," Mrs. Poe testified she told Myers.

"He kept insisting she was dead and I told him he must be having a nightmare," she said. "Then he said 'Well, who is this then that is here beside me, out cold and all bloody?' Then I told him he could talk to Miss. Childs."

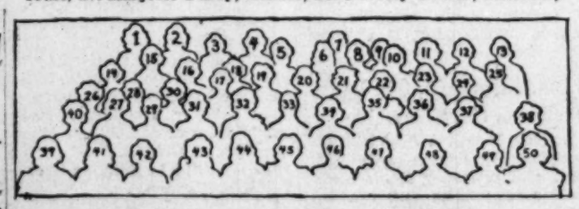
The second witness of the day was Lieut. John K. Baker of the Homicide Squad. Baker told of going to Myers' house at 2110 N. Lincoln, st., Arlington, Va., at 6: 30 p. m., January 5, and taking him with Arlington police to the court house, where Myers signed a waiver of extradition.

"Myers said at that time that he couldn't understand, and that he hadn't done anything," Baker testified.

Myers first denied knowing Miss Childs or having visited her apartment on January 4, then admitted both, Baker said.

Baker identified a brown canvas bag, which he said was taken from the rear of Myers' car the night he was arrested, and identified the contents: a thermos bottle containing a liquid solution, a jar of vaseline, an electric hotplate and cord, a sauce pan, a ring of keys, scotch tape, a cardboard box and some mercurochrome.

The trial will resume at 10 a. m., Monday.



Cherry Blossom Princesses Make Debut at Fete Here

The princesses vying for the title of Cherry Blossom Queen last night made their preliminary public bow at a reception in the Senate Caucus Room.

Many members of Congress and others prominent in Washington life were among those present at the reception for the 51 party-pretty princesses, guests of the various State societies.

The deferred flowering of the Oriental cherry trees surrounding the Tidal Basin in West Potomac Park—which are not expected to bloom now until around Easter—cast no gloom over the evening's gaiety.

Heading the receiving line was Carl Walker, chairman of the Conference of State Societies. Adding to the festive air were the flowers and plants from the Botanical Gardens and music by the Marine Corps String and Reed Orchestra.

The reception followed a broadcast of the Aldrich Family show from the Hotel Mayflower over a National Broadcasting Co. network.

Ezra Stone, who plays the role of Henry Aldrich, will be master of ceremonies at the 9:30 p. m. reception and supper dance today in the Shoreham Hotel's Terrace Banquet Room.

Highlight of the evening will be the selection of the Cherry Blossom Queen about 11 p. m. A spin of the "Wheel of Fortune" will determine who reigns as queen.

In addition to the princesses and their escorts from the armed services, members of Congress and officials of the State societies will be present.

Saturday's activities will begin with a 11 a. m. "brunch" for the girls and their escorts at the Hotel Statler.

The Cherry Blossom Festival Pageant at the Watergate will begin at 1 p. m. Saturday with the Navy Hour broadcast over an American Broadcasting Co., network. At 1:30 p. m. organist Milt Slosser will lead the audience in a community sing, and at 2 p. m. the pageant, "Spring is a Wonderful Thing," will start.

Secretary of the Navy Matthews will crown the queen as a part of the pageant.

The pageant, not including the Navy Hour program, will be repeated at 2 p. m. Sunday.

Tickets for the pageant are available at all Peoples Drug Stores; Government Services, Inc., cafeterias; room 204, Evening Star Building; the 14th and F sts. ticket trailer from 10 a. m. to 7 p. m. today and Saturday; and the Watergate box office beginning at 10 a. m. Saturday and 11 a. m. Sunday.

All seats are reserved. Tickets are $1.25 and $1.00, tax included, and 50 cents for children.

Retired Fireman Granted $25,000 For Crash Injuries

A retired District fireman yesterday was granted a $25,000 out-of-court settlement for injuries he received in the collision of a fire hose wagon and a trailer truck.

He is Homer L. Swaney, 36, of 94 Frederick ave., Kensington, Md., who retired from the Fire Department February 1 of this year.

The settlement was made with Brooks Transportation Inc., Richmond, Va., owners of the trailer truck, according to Swaney's lawyer, A. J. Spero.

The accident occurred in December, 1948, at 3rd st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., while the fire hose wagon on which Swaney was riding was responding to an alarm. Swaney said he suffered back injuries, which he described as permanent. He is married and has one child.

County Manager Urged in Fairfax By Women Voters

The Fairfax County League of Women Voters has gone on record as favoring a county manager form of government in Fairfax.

In a letter directed to the county board of supervisors, the league says it favors the county manager government because it "provides a strong local government responsible to the people, thereby reversing the trend toward state centralization and control." It also contends the manager form will mean either lower taxes or improved services—"or possibly both."

Three Youths Hold Up Columbia Road Store

Three youths took between $10 and $15 in change from the cash register of a delicatessen at 640 Columbia rd., nw., about 7:40 p. m. yesterday after one of the trio restrained the 67-year-old proprietor.

The store owner, Abraham Raport, said two of the youths were about 18. One wore a dark, three-quarter length coat while the other had on a brown coat. There was no description on the third. A police look-out said all three were Negroes.

Gen. Young to Send Congress Plan for Rehabilitating Slums

Engineer Commissioner Gen. Gordon R. Young's 17-point program for more vigorous action in rehabilitating below-standard housing here "will be forwarded" to District leaders in Congress, its author said last night.

The long-awaited slum rehabilitation report carries several recommendations requiring congressional action.

The report, officially released yesterday, will not go to Capitol Hill until it has received approval of the Board of Commissioners. John Russell Young, board president, is now studying it.

Most of the suggestions deal with strengthening and streamlining procedure of the Board for the Condemnation of Insanitary Buildings, whose progress was described as "wholly unsatisfactory."

Key to bolstering the board's work in seeking correction of structural defects in occupied dwellings is more personnel on full-time duty, General Young emphasized.

"In the 7-year period from 1942-48 it (the board) has handled 580 cases, or an average of 83 a year," Young pointed out. "At that rate it would take 60 years to work through the estimated 5000 worst cases," he said.

"The board should seek to raise its output so that, by the end of the fiscal year 1951," Young wrote, "it is operating at the rate of 500 cases a year, or say 40 per month."

The 17 recommendations follow, the first 10 marked for "immediate or early action":

1. "The board should continue the simplification and streamlining of its procedure."

2. Seek the congressional green light on the commissioner's request for 5 more board employes.

3. Determine what other insanitary conditions, not presently acted against, the board "can bring within its purview under existing law, and act accordingly."

4. "The commissioners should adopt new regulations, permissible under existing law, needed to strengthen the hands of the board."

5. The corporation counsel should draft "simple and noncontroversial legislation" to permit the board to act against insanitary conditions, now out of reach of existing law.

6. The board should concentrate on "areas" of slum housing, preferably complete blocks, and should work in areas where owners can make necessary repairs "without very large increases in rents and if possible without displacing tenants during repairs." The board should give the commissioners an 18-month program of suggested target areas within 90 days.

7. Develop cooperative action between the board and other District agencies "to insure a comprehensive cleanup of any area where the board acts, and to insure maintenance of good standards thereafter."

8. "In such areas, the commissioners should adopt a liberal attitude in providing inexpensive public improvements . . ."

9. "The board should work closely with National Capital Housing Authority on provision of space, in existing public housing, for low-income tenants evicted from dwellings which, on account of the board's activities, are either demolished or so extremely improved that new rentals are wholly beyond the means of the original class of tenants."

10. The experimental block cleanup projects—"The Flanders Plan" and the "Ruhland-Seckinger Plan" should be pushed "vigorously."

Young's recommended actions "needing more time" are:

11. "The question of assigning all board cases to a single District judge, perhaps for a limited trial period, should be further canvassed."

12. The corporation counsel should "consider how best to deal with" insanitary conditions which cannot be covered without "complex or controversial" new legislation.

13. "The commissioners should seek means of enlisting support and assistance of key civic groups and of our citizens generally."

14. Further study should be made of the complex problem of how to prevent overcrowding.

15. "The commissioners and the major and superintendent of police should consider the advisability of increasing the police force enough to permit fulltime assignment of a few men to checking on insanitary conditions in the slum areas. Further study should be made of how the system is working in Baltimore."

16. "At the appropriate time, the commissioners should arrange with NCHA for reserving for slum evictees a part of the 4000 new low-rental public housing units now being planned.

17. "In the fall of 1950 the commissioners should consider a further speeding up of the work to be planned for the fiscal year 1952.

Navy Board to Question Man Who Talked With Gunner Before His Mysterious Death

The man who reportedly talked with Chief Gunner's Mate Wesley C. Thompson minutes before he died suddenly early Sunday will be questioned today by a Navy investigating board, it was learned last night.

Chief Machinist's Mate C. R. Maupin, Baltimore blvd., Berwyn, Md., said he has turned in a statement to the board of inquiry, headed by Capt. W. R. Murray, chief medical officer of the Naval Receiving Station. He told The Washington Post last night he had been requested not to comment on it.

He is expected to be called for questioning today when the board reconvenes to probe the mysterious death of Thompson, who was found slumped on the floor of the master-at-arms office of Quarters K, Arlington, at 1:05 a. m. Sunday by an unidentified resident of the barracks.

2 Phone Conversations

Mrs. Fannie Thompson, wife of the 41-year-old noncommissioned officer, told The Washington Post she understood her husband had two telephone conversations with Maupin around midnight Saturday.

Maupin was the junior officer of the day on duty at Quarters K, a barracks for 1400 Navy Department employes, when Thompson's body was found.

Death was tentatively attributed to a heart attack. But an autopsy at Bethesda Naval Hospital revealed that Thompson died of a head injury.

Thompson, father of two small children, left his home at 4902 1st st., Temple Hills, Md., at 11 a. m. Friday to report for duty, according to his wife.

Navy officials said he had been reassigned from Quarters I in West Potomac Park to Quarters K, but never reported for duty. He was scheduled to stand watch sometime Sunday when his body was discovered.

D. C. Man Critically Injured by Car Near Woodridge; Arlington Couple Hurt

Randolph H. Harris, 43, of 5817 Colorado ave. nw., was in critical condition at the Naval Hospital, Quantico, Va., last night, as result of a traffic accident 24 hours earlier.

He suffered a fractured skull, fractures of both legs, and shock. Virginia State Police said he was struck down near Woodbridge, Va., by a cab driven by James A. Cook, 405 10th st. ne.

The State police booked Cook on a reckless driving charge and released him under $500 bond for hearing at a date to be determined by outcome of Harris' injuries.

Investigators said they learned Harris had stopped to spend Wednesday night at a tourist camp near Woodbridge.

Three persons were injured in a collision of two autos last night at N. 10th and Daniels sts., Arlington.

They were Capt. David R. Boylan, Air Force, 213 N. Wayne st., Arlington, admitted to Arlington Hospital, fractured ribs, condition good; Mrs. Mabel Boylan, his wife, admitted, fractured pelvis, condition good, and Corpl. William Keeffer, 27, of Fort Myer, treated for head cuts and released.

Police said the Boylan car and one driven by Keeffer were in collision, but did not have a full report on the accident. The Boylan car overturned.

Four persons were injured last night in collision of two autos on the Marlboro Pike at Upper Marlboro. Three were passengers in the auto of Robert W. Swann, 30, of Owings, Md., who was uninjured.

Mrs. Elsie Cox, 55, postmaster at Lower Marlboro, suffered head cuts and a possible fractured right leg and her daughter, Dorothy, 19, suffered cuts and bruises about the face and knees. Both were admitted to Casualty Hospital. Mrs. Lester King, 31, of Owings, was treated at Prince Georges General Hosptial, Cheverly, for cuts and bruises and released.

Sergt. John T. Lampert, 22, of Andrews Air Force Base, driver of the other car, according to police, was treated at Casualty Hospital for head injuries, and transferred to Walter Reed Hospital.

Leon Blum Dies; Led France 3 Times

Paris, March 30 (AP).—Leon Blum, a militant Socialist who was thrice Premier of France, died of a heart attack today at his home in Joyen-Josas, a Paris suburb. He was 77.

The first Socialist and the first Jew to become Premier of France Blum was active in the government almost to the end. He would have been 78 on April 9.

Blum had been in failing health for more than a year, but he attended a party with newspaper and political colleagues last night. Friends said he seemed strong and in good spirits. The party was held to mark the 100,000th subscription to the Socialist Party newspaper Le Populaire, which he edited.

Blum, a poet and dramatic critic turned politician, fathered France's first "popular front" government with the support of the Communists in 1936. But, as the party's senior statesman, he approved the end of the 11-year-old alliance when Socialist Premier Paul Ramadier threw the Reds out of the French cabinet in 1947.

LEON BLUM
Heart Fails at 77

Brought Reforms

Blum was credited with bringing to France the 40-hour week for workers, paid vacations, social security and collective bargaining.

He took political leadership of his country for the first time in June, 1936. A million and a half sit-down strikers occupied factories during his first days of office. Under pressure from the new Premier, Parliament pushed through social reforms.

Blum's term lasted more than a year—a long time in a turbulent period when French cabinets succeeded one another within months, sometimes within weeks.

His second cabinet—in 1938—lasted only a month. There was a whisper among some Frenchmen: "rather Hitler than Blum."

He formed his last Government in 1946, to close out the postwar French provisional government and help install the French Fourth Republic. In a time of rapid inflation, he performed the feat of cutting all prices by 10 percent. His job ended automatically when the new regime came in with the year 1947.

He was nominated for a fourth term as premier in 1948 but failed to get confirmation from the National Assembly.

Blum took no part in the governments immediately before the war. Former Marshal Henri-Philippe Petain, chief of state under the German occupation, put him under house arrest. Blum and other prewar leaders stood trial at Riom, near Vichy, on charges of being responsible for the defeat of France in 1940. Blum turned his defense into so powerful an indictment of the Vichy leaders that they were soon glad to forget all about the case.

Seized by Gestapo

The Gestapo seized Blum and other French leaders and took them to the Buchenwald concentration camp. American soldiers liberated Blum in the Austrian Tyrol when Germany collapsed.

It was Blum who coined the term "Third Force" signifying a middle road between extremes of capitalism and communism. With the developing cold war be had called upon Britain to join with France in such a movement to forestall totalitarianism.

Russia and the Russian press constantly denounced him as an enemy of the Soviet Union, particularly after Blum voiced words of praise for the United States and the Marshall Plan. Yet Blum remained optimistic that some way of life between the capitalist and communist giants could be found.

Blum was known throughout France as a critic, poet, and novelist as well as a politician. His best-known book, "On Marriage," shocked many Anglo-Saxons by the frankness of its discussions.

Blum himself was married three times. He was a widower twice. His third wife, whom he married late in life, followed him in his wartime captivity.

Joe Yule, Mickey Rooney's Dad, Dies of Heart Attack

Hollywood, March 30 (U.P.).—Joe Yule, who taught his son, Mickey Rooney, the tricks and gags that made him a movie star, died of a heart attack today.

Rooney wasn't present when his father, a former vaudeville comedian, said his last lines at 7:30 a. m. The pint-sized actor, who looks like Yule did when he was 28, reached his father's bedside in his modest San Fernando Valley home five minutes after he made his exit.

"I'm lucky to have had him as long as I did," said Rooney. "The 56 years he lived really were longer because he lived sueh a full life. I'm happy that he went fast, with no suffering."

Yule's second wife, Leota Hullinger, whom he married in 1932, said the actor told her, "you'd better get a doctor. This is it." Mrs. Yule called an inhalator squad which tried to save the actor's life.

Yule, who celebrated 50 years in show business last year, recently made a comback. He landed a leading role in the road show version of a broadway hit, "Finian's Rainbow." And he played Jiggs in a movie series, "Jiggs and Maggie," because he looked like the pudgy, pug-nosed comic strip character.

Yule, born in Scotland, April 30, 1894, started his career as an 1890 Dead End kid in "Child Slaves of New York." He was a burlesque entertainer for 23 years. He also played in melodramas, stock companies, and vaudeville and as a character actor at MGM where his son was a star.

The actor and his first wife, Nell Carter, were a vaudeville team before they were divorced 20 years ago. Mickey was born in the dressing room of a Brooklyn vaudeville house. Eleven days later, his mother went back to work.

Fliers' Rites Are Held With Steinhardt's

Ottawa, March 30 (U.P.)—Military and diplomatic honors were paid by Canada today to U. S. Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt and four Americans killed with him Tuesday in the crash of a U. S. Embassy airplane.

Thousands of persons lined Ottawa streets in a biting wind to see the funeral corteges move to Union Station following separate funeral services.

Two 19-gun salutes boomed and a band played the Star Spangled Banner as four of the bodies were placed aboard trains for the United States. The fiifth victim was buried here.

Steinhard's funeral was held at his Rockcliffe home and the casket, draped with the American flag, was escorted by Royal Canadian Mounted Police to the station. The Ambassador's body will arrive in New York about 8 a. m. EST tomorrow. A second funeral service for him will follow.

Earlier, funeral services were held for Alan Harrington, 21, son of United States Minister Julian F. Harrington, at the family residence. Young Harrington was buried in Ottawa's Beechwood Cemetery.

Allen Will Be Buried In Arlington Monday

Funeral services for Reginald Allen, 40, veteran WTOP announcer, who was also prominent in local theatrical circles, will be held at 12:30 p. m. Monday at the Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin st. nw. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. Allen, who lived at the Dupont Plaza apartments, died of cancer Wednesday at Emergency Hospital, just a week before the radio division of the April 3 cancer fund campaign begins its efforts.

Mr. Allen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Allen of Hartford, Conn., have requested that instead of flowers friends contribute to "Cancer, Washington, D. C.," the local fund.

W. H. Schofield, 85, Dies; Orchards Co. Executive

William Hamilton Schofield, 85, longtime Washington area resident, died yesterday at his home, 2540 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Born in England, he came with his family to Alexandria, Va., when he was 8 years old. Mr. Schofield attended Washington schools, and was secretary-treasurer of the Arcadia Orchards Co. at Falling Waters, W. Va.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Marguerite B. Schofield and a son, Joyce, of this city. Funeral services and burial will be private.

Joshua C. West Dies; Former Mayor of Suffolk

Portsmouth, Va., March 30 (AP)—Joshua C. West, 3d, 64, former mayor of Suffolk, died at the Naval Hospital in Portsmouth today after a month's illness.

He was educated in the Suffolk schools and was graduated from Virginia Military Institute. He entered World War II as a first lieutenant in the Marine Corps, Third Division, and served three years, a large part of the time in the South Pacific.

In June, 1947, he was elected a member of the City Council of Suffolk and on September 1 was made mayor, serving until April 4, 1949, when he resigned because of failing health.

James A. Jones Funeral Rites Today at Chatham

Funeral services will be held today at the Scott Funeral Home, Chathan, Va., for James A. Jones, 81, retired assistant to the vice-president of the Southern Railway system. Burial will be in Chatham.

Mr. Jones died Wednesday at his home in the Virginia town.

A native of North Carolina, Mr. Jones was with the Southern for 59 years before retiring in 1945.

That railroad said that under his supervision "the communications department of the Southern developed one of the outstanding railroad communication networks in the country, with more than 58,000 miles of telephone and telegraph lines in operation."

Deaths Reported

Safeway Plans 65 New Stores In D. C. Region

By S. Oliver Goodman

Safeway Stores, Inc., plans 65 new locations in the Washington division during the next five years, it was learned yesterday. The division covers Virginia and Maryland, as well as the District of Columbia.

Two more super-stores are under construction, with one at Piney Branch rd. and Dale dr., near completion. The other will be located just east of 18th st. and Columbia rd. and will be the largest of the 200 in this division, according to a company spokesman.

The annual report of Safeway Stores, distributed to stockholders here yesterday, showed that at the end of 1949 Washington had 98 Safeway stores, Maryland 27 and Virginia 74. Five small stores were closed here during the year.

President Lingan A. Warren told stockholders that "if there is no major unfavorable change in our political or labor relations conditions, I feel that we can all look forward to 1950 with optimism."

Concretely backing his own optimism, Warren revealed that the Nation-wide chain plans to construct about 1000 new retail locations during the next five years and to remodel many of the existing stores. No expansion into new territory is planned, he added.

As reported previously, Safeway's net earnings last year increased sharply despite a drop in sales.

Net profit amounted to $14,369,124, an increase of 44 percent over the previous year, and equaled $5.22 a common share. This compared with 1948 net of $9,978,231 or $3.50 a share.

Net sales last year totaled $1,095,063,621, a drop of 7 percent as compared with $1,178,702,000 in 1948. The figures do not include Canadian operations. The corporation operated 2066 stores in the United States and 136 in Canada at the end of 1949.

PROMOTION: M. M. Frost has been elevated to head Eastern Air Lines' traffic and sales department. Frost joined EAL in 1945 as a vice president after three years with Air Force. His war services included an assignment as chief of supply and transportation, Army Air Force headquarters in Washington.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: A. B. Landa, Washington attorney, has been elected a director of Fruehauf Trailer Co. He is general counsel of the firm . . . H. R. Holmes, former Washington banker, has been appointed vice president of the tar products division of Koppers Co., Inc. . . . Frederick O. Lyter, superintendent of agencies for Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, is in Washington for a sales conference with the John L. McElfresh agency members . . . Carleton H. Palmer, chairman of E. R. Squibb & Sons, has been elected president of the American Drug Manufacturers Association . . . Robert W. Graham has been elevated to general superintendent of the Duquesne, Pa., work of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp.

NEW EDITION: The popular booklet "Investment Facts About Common Stocks and Cash Dividends" has been revised by the New York Stock Exchange and is available on request at local member firms. It contains a summary of elementary investment facts and a roster of 285 common stocks that have paid cash dividends every year for 20 to 104 years.

NOMINATIONS: Six persons were nominated as candidates to serve on the board of directors of the D. C. Life Underwriters Association. The candidates, chosen by popular vote at a luncheon meeting yesterday in the Mayflower, are: Mitchell T. Curtis of Lincoln National, Frederick V. V. McNair of Jefferson Standard, William L. Porte of Mutual Life of New York, C. Carney Smith of Mutual Benefit, Lawrence W. Brown of Reliance Life, and William D. Macy of Phoenix Mutual. Three will be elected at the May meeting.

Nats Get Weik Pitching, 10-3 Lacing From Phils

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

CLEARWATER, FLA., MARCH 30—A traveler from California, looking suspiciously like Mr. Chet Smith of the Pittsburgh Press, checked in at Clearwater today. He has been consorting with the Pirates for a month, he said.

There at San Bernardino, the big news of course was Master Paul Pettit, the 18-year-old Lomita, Calif., High School boy whom the papers have been saying got a $100,000 bonus for signing with the Pirates. All of that money despite the fact that the Pirates admit that Pettit doesn't know how to pitch.

POVICH

"All we bought," confessed Mr. Frank McKinney, president of the Pittsburgh club, "was an arm and a body. We're gambling we can teach him how to pitch."

To that end, the Pirates have sent young Pettit to their New Orleans farm club in the Southern Association. But it was not just like that. At least one precaution was taken. They've provided Pettit with a special mentor, detaching from their scouting staff the old pitcher, Ben Tincup, as confidant, nurse and companion to the young man.

Tincup will live with Pettit, show him how to pitch, shield him from the outer world's temptations, and deliver him to the Pirates next spring sound of wind, arm and pitching mind.

ACTUALLY, THE PIRATES didn't give young Pettit the $100,000 that was reported. But they insured him coffee and cakes for a long time by settling on an $85,000 figure. The payment was made on the terms of Mr. Frank McKinney, president of the Pirates, who is a banker, and thinks in terms of securing his investment.

With the example before him of Dick Wakefield, the boy to whom the Tigers gave $52,000 in a lump sum a few years back, McKinney guarded against any such sudden affluence turning the head of young Pettit. He spread the $85,000 payment over nine years, had trustees for the money appointed by the court, and Pettit can draw only moderate sums from his windfall.

With his seven no-hit games in California schoolboy circles, Pettit had the big league scouts dippy, and it was Babe Herman who risked his own neck with the Pirates by avowing that they'd better outbid the other clubs. Only the Pirates and the Red Sox stayed in the bidding after it hit $80,000. The Red Sox are philosophizing that "perhaps it's the best buy we never made."

FOR A WHILE, the Pirates were thinking they might have to get along without McKinney in the active presidency after midseason. He was being seriously considered by President Truman to become Secretary of the Army, but the Pirates kept their president and the Army got a new secretary when Budget Director Frank Pace was named to the office today. McKinney, it is understood, requested that he be allowed to retain his Pirates presidency, but on an inactive status.

Ever since McKinney and his group, including Bing Crosby, who is in for an 18 percent share, took over the Pirates late in 1946 from the Benswangers, they've done very well. They've spent more money than any major league team, and their first act was to put $800,000 worth of improvements in the park, but they have still shown a profit.

They excited baseball interest anew in Pittsburgh in 1947 by signing Hank Greenberg at $100,000. Greenberg flopped and wasn't worth that sort of money, but it served a purpose. It showed Pittsburgh fans the McKinney group was leveling. And then after Greenberg couldn't make it, the Pirate owners got a real break—Ralph Kiner came along.

KINER, WITH HIS HOME RUNS, proved the National League's biggest drawing card. In '47, when the Pirates finished fourth, they drew 1,500,000 fans at home, breaking all Pittsburgh records. Last year, when they finished sixth, they drew only 100,000 fewer, setting a record for sixth-place clubs. This season they already have $750,000 in advance sales.

They've been lucky, too. When attendance began to sag last summer, who should come along but Dino Restelli, the barrel-build outfielder from the Coast. He went into the line-up and hit eight home runs in 10 days. The town went mad about him, packed the park. Restelli was a two-week sensation only, but over that fortnight he sent the attendance booming.

Next season, with any kind of break, the Pirates will do all right, too. Because that is when they'll bring Pettit into Forbes Field. Right now he's a curiosity. If he starts winning for the Pirates, they'll have their $85,000 back in jig time.

Catholic U.'s Ennis KO's Oliver in NCAA Bout

State College, Pa., March 30.—Catholic University's Bill (Bucky) Ennis scored a third-round t.k.o. over Maryland's Don Oliver in their 155-pound bout in the thirteenth annual NCAA tourney today.

Ennis belted neighbor Oliver on the chops at the start of the round and it was halted nine seconds later. It was one of only two knockouts in 24 bouts of first round competition.

The Terps' Paul Kostopoulos outpointed Tim Curley of Syracuse in the 135-pound class.

Two of Ennis' teammates weren't nearly as successful, both Tommy Cronin and Billy Maher bowing out of the tourney.

Cronin, 125-pounder, was decisioned by Milton Pastor of LSU; Maher, 165-pounder, lost a decision to Syracuse's Jim Rollier.

Defending Champion Louisiana State showed its class by scoring four impressive victories. The Bengals were led by Ted Thrash, defending 130-pound titlist.

In addition, LSU has a fifth man competing in tomorrow night's finals, Heavyweight Blackie Howell who drew a bye.

Michigan State, with four semi-finalists, tied the Southern champs with four points but LSU loomed the favorite.

Syracuse, Eastern champ, lost three of its five bouts and just about blew its chances. San Jose State and Idaho, strong Western hopes, lost two of four each and appeared out of it.

First Round

123 Pounds—Neil Ofsthun, Minnesota, outpointed Frankie Echevarria, Idaho; Mac Martinez, San Jose State, outpointed Steve Oremban, Wisconsin.

Milton Pastor, Louisiana State, outpointed Tom Cronin, Catholic U.

Henry Amos, Michigan State, outpointed Jim Huba, Syracuse.

130 Pounds—Jim Reilly, Gonzaga, outpointed Dave Mackey, Minnesota.

Ted Thrash, LSU, outpointed Al Tafoya, San Jose State; Jim Sreenan, Wisconsin, outpointed DeForest Fovey, Idaho.

135 Pounds—Jack Tierney, Michigan State, outpointed Norman Walker, Idaho.

Paul Kostopoulos, Maryland, outpointed Tim Curley, Syracuse.

145 Pounds—Ben Dolphin, Syracuse, outpointed Don Soderberg, Superior, Wisconsin State; Leonard Walker, Idaho, outpointed Pat Dougherty, Michigan State.

Eldon Long, Washington State, outpointed Frank Gross, Penn State; Alfred Bourgeois, LSU, outpointed Floyd Wilson, UCLA.

Dick Murphy, Wisconsin, outpointed Cody Connel, Minnesota.

165 Pounds—Jim Rollier, Syracuse, outpointed Billy Maher, Catholic U.

Lloyd Jones, Louisiana State, outpointed Ed Williams, Minnesota; Herb Carlson, Idaho, outpointed Raul Diez, San Jose State.

175 Pounds—Charles Spieser, Michigan State, outpointed Bill McMoore, Minnesota; Don Schaeffer, San Jose, Calif., outpointed Pete Monfore, Army.

Carl Madey, Gonzaga, technically knocked out John Bolger, Penn State, 1:31, second round; Carl Bernardo, University of Miami, outpointed George Kartalian, Syracuse.

Heavyweight—Gabriel Marek, Michigan State, outpointed Jack Scheberies, San Jose.

NCAA Starts Probe Of College Boxing

State College, Pa., March 30 (AP). — The National Collegiate A. A. boxing rules committee will initiate an investigation of every aspect of college boxing, Dr. W. J. Bleckwenn of Wisconsin, committee chairman, said today.

This investigation augments a two-year medical study, conducted by Wisconsin physicians, which has disclosed no harmful effects of boxing. The committee will consider the physical and academic aspects plus the postgraduate activities of the college clouters.

Moose Really Back in the Saddle

Peters Wins 3 in Hot Comeback

NOSED OUT—Jockey Moose Peters got home three winners at Laurel yesterday, but none was as close as this three-way photo finish in the third race. He had to wait for the camera to tell him he'd scored with Militant Lady (No. 6) here. The winner beat Witch Way (No. 10) and Blue Daze (No. 5) in the order named. Not too far away are Hi Ante (No. 4), Encased (No. 8) and Best Punch (No. 2). Peters also scored in the second and fourth

Veteran Jockey Isn't Rusty From 9-Year Layoff

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

LAUREL, MD., MARCH 30.—Few athletes have retired for nine years and then made a succesful comeback.

Looks mighty like Jockey Maurice (Moose) Peters will be one of the rare exceptions. The normally stocky fellow, who quit the saddle in 1941, sought to regain the spark of riding greatness that was once his as the Laurel meeting opened.

After several disappointments, Peters apparently has struck his stride for he stole the saddle show here this afternoon.

Moose, who brought his nickname along with him from his native North Dakota, had three mounts today and he was the winner on each occasion with an exhibition of riding that smacked of a combination of Arcaro, Workman and Atkinson.

Peters' winners came in successive races. Here's the recap:

Second Race—Broke Grand Actress on top, urged her to shake off an early challenge of His Honor, rated her nicely as the pacemaker and shook her up to hold Blue Fedora and Vera Connelly safe by a length and a half. Grand Actress AOD $8.20 and put the finshing touches on a $57.80 daily double.

Third Race—Kept Miltant Lady in first flight, tried to steady her in the stretch but the filly was bumped and knocked back to fifth position. He straightened her quickly, roused her and came between horses to be up by a nose in a 3-way photo finish. Militant Lady paid $10.60.

Fourth Race—Stag dwelt slightly at the start but he soon had the colt under way. He eased him from the inside rail and went to the outside of the leaders for the final drive. Stag responded to his urging and the son of Challedon was a going-away winner by two and a quarter lengths, paying $10.80.

THUS PETERS won with a 2-year-old, a 3-year-old and a 7-year-old mare, showing that he was at home on any kind of horse. He won with a front runner, a come-from-behind horse and one who was in enough trouble for an ordinary jockey to have lost heart.

Moose has been smiling ever since he rode his first 1950 winner yesterday on Gaby H, a $30 shot. But the last two years were trying ones. He used to be the star jockey for the Foxcatcher Farm, but making weight began to brother him and he turned to training.

He had some success, but became involved in the Saguaro case. In an effort to get the horse to leave the starting gate, somebody used a shotgun loaded with rock salt in a workout. The horse had to be destroyed. Peters was the trainer and, under the rules making him responsible, was suspended.

When he applied for reinstatement as a jockey he weighed 162 pounds and when given the green light few believed it meant anything more than a forgiving gesture.

But Moose Peters had ideas planted and it can't be said they aren't taking root.

Heintzelman, Trinkle Hold 8th Placers To Six Hits

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Clearwater, Fla., March 30.—The Nats suffered from Weik pitching today. Rookie Dick Weik walked six Phillies in six innings, forced in one run, served up two home run balls and a triple and invited the Phillies to beat the Nats, 10 to 3, which they did.

The Nats weren't helping Weik any, either, in another dismal display that led to their fourth straight beating. They didn't give Weik any sort of a run to work with during his stint, and avoided a shutout only because Sam Dente and pinch hitter Ed Stewart hit homers late in the game.

Actually, it didn't make much difference to the Phillies who was pitching. When Big Earl Davis, left-handed rookie, poked his nose into the proceedings in the seventh, the Phillies banged him for four somewhat rapid runs.

Goliat Smacks Two Homers

Mike Goliat, the Phillies' second baseman, played no favorites. He whacked a homer over the center field wall off Weik in the fourth, and in the seventh he did the same thing against Davis with a bigger effect. There were two on when Goliat teed off versus Davis.

The Nats couldn't get a man past second base against Southpaw Ken Heintzelman in his six-inning tour of duty, and they amassed only six hits all afternoon. It was against Ken Trinkle that Dente and Stewart hit their homers. Dente produced the Nats' first two runs. Stewart batting for Davis in the ninth produced the perfect pinch hit—a homer over the right field wall.

Phils Wait, Walk

The only comforting item for Manager Bucky Harris was the merry continuation of big Ed Robinson's current hitting streak which has now spanned 12 consecutive games. Robbie rapped out two singles, and now has a .436 average in the Grapefruit League, with 24 hits in 55 turns at the plate.

Against Weik in the first inning, the Phillies needed only patience. Blatnick beat out an infield hit, but otherwise their 1-0 lead was

Fazio's 67 Leads Azalea

Woodmont Pro 5-Under Par; 3 Tie for 2d

Wilmington, N. C., March 30 (AP).—George Fazio, veteran pro from the Woodmont County Club, Washington, D. C., put together nine hole scores of 34-33 for a five-under par 67 today to lead the first round of the $10,000 Wilmington Azalea open golf tournament by one stroke.

Fazio held a one-stroke lead over three rivals, one of them, defending champion Henry Ransom of St. Andrews, Ill., who played in the same threesome with Fazio. Ransom had 35-33 for his 68 as did National Open champion Cary Middlecoff from Ormond Beach, Fla. Sharing the spot with them 33-35 was E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, St. Andrews, Ill.

Lew Worsham, of Washington, D. C., had a 35-38—73.

Fazio raced to the front with three straight birdies, canning a 10-foot putt on No. 2. He took three putts from the edge of the fourth green to lose a stroke to par and then stayed even through the turn. Another string of three birdies began with a 12-footer on 10. He missed his only green, the thirteenth, where he was trapped and needed a five. But he got that one back with a birdie on the long fifteenth and finished in par.

Middlecoff needed only a three-foot putt to get an eagle on the 545-yard twelfth. In addition, he had three birdies, but lost a stroke to par with a four on the par three eighth. On that hole he was trapped and needed a 10-footer to get even a four.

Yankees Snap Reds' Winning Streak, 14-2

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 30 (AP).—Cincinnati's seven-game winning streak in the Grapefruit belt came down with a crash today as the New York Yankees battered out a 14 to 2 triumph.

The Bombers scored 11 of their runs off Ken Raffensberger, who hurled the first five innings and was tagged for 14 hits. Joe DiMaggio, Gerry Coleman and Yogi Berra collected three hits each. In all, the Yanks collected 19 hits, getting their final tallies off Frank Smith and Jim Avrea.

Allie Reynolds pitched five scoreless rounds for the Bombers.

White Sox Pound St. Louis Browns

El Paso, Texas, March 30 (AP). Beaten three straight times by the Browns, the Chicago White Sox roared back with a vengeance today and walloped the St. Louisans 16 to 7 in an exhibition game before 2321 cash customers.

The Sox slapped three pitchers for 16 hits, including a three-run homer by Dave Philley and a two-run homer by Hank Majeski. Don Lenhardt anad Ken Wood pounded home runs for the Browns.

Rocky, Janiro Clash Tonight

New York, March 30 (AP).—Former middleweight champion Rocky Graziano, hoping for another title shot, was rated a 1 to 3 favorite today to defeat handsome Tony Janiro of Youngstown, Ohio, in their Madison Square Garden ten-rounder tomorrow night.

It will be Rocky's first fight in the Garden in four years and a bumper crowd of 16,000, mostly pro-Graziano rooters, is expected.

Although the 22-year-old Janiro never has been stopped in 85 bouts, the bookmakers have established Rocky as an even money bet to win by a knockout.

The fight will broadcast over WMAL, 630 on the dial, and televised over WNBW, Channel 4, beginning at 10 o'clock.

Longwood Prep Loses To Carteret in Tourney

Glen Falls, N. Y., March 30.—Longwood Prep, of Olney, Md., was eliminated in the first round of the Eastern States Invitational tourney here tonight by Carteret, N. J., pre-tourney favorite, 54-46.

Longwood trailed by only a point, 41-40, going into the final period but couldn't withstand Carteret's closing rush despite the outstanding play of Bob Quinn of Washington, D. C. Longwood plays a consolation game tomorrow afternoon against the Suffield-Blair Academy loser.

Governing Body Throws Out Basketball's 2-Minute Rule

New York, March 30 (AP).—The National Basketball Committee, final power on the rules of the amateur game, today officially eliminated the controversial 2-minute rule from the books.

From now on, amateur basketball games in the United States and Canada will be played under the same code for the full 40 minutes.

The committee, made up of representatives from the NCAA, AAU, YMCA, National Federation of High Schools and Canadian amateur groups, also passed the following rules:

1. Clock to be stopped on all held balls.

2. Substitutions to be made only when the clock is stopped (when a foul is called, a held ball, a time out, or for an unusual delay); otherwise a time out is to be charged.

3. The molded ball will be the only official ball.

4. A player who commits a foul must raise his hand over his head; a technical foul t be charged for failure to do so.

The major changes followed the recommendations of the National Association of Coaches which voted yesterday to throw out the two-minute rule.

Knicks Win, Even Series

New York, March 30 (AP).—The New York Knickerbockers held off a late drive by the Syracuse Nationals tonight to win, 80-76, and tie up their National Basketball Association best-of-three eastern playoff at one game each.

'Sounds Like Kid Stuff'

Werber Hasn't Forgotten How Cincy Reds Decided to Hustle; It Paid Off With Pennant

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

BILL WERBER, the rock 'em, sock 'em major league third baseman of 10 years ago, was right at home in the bankers league the other night.

Nattily dressed in a gray pin-stripe, his hair carefully parted in the middle, Werber looked like the other prospective vice presidents at the Burlington Hotel banquet, honoring the basketball champions of the Bankers League.

Eddie Joost

The guy who once started a near riot at Griffith Stadium by tagging the Nats' Buddy Myer on the jaw with the ball on a close play at third, was the principal speaker.

He was doing a good job, too, freely kidding dignified Henry Hoffman of the 2d National and August Terneak of Hamilton, and getting away with it. He knew them "when."

"I remember when Augie and I played basketball for Tech High in the middle '20s," Werber reminisced," and Augie was our backcourt guard who never got a chance to shoot. Finally, in the last minute of the last game at old Arcade gym on 14th st., I passed back to him. He let go with a perfect 40-footer, but it was ruled no good.

"Augie had been standing 3 feet out of bounds.

"And Heinie'll remember that tight Eastern-Tech game in George Washington U.'s bandbox gym. Heinie was playing against us. The crowd was so noisy that nobody heard timekeeper Shirley Povich blow the final whistle. A minute after time was up, Shirley finally got our attention by grabbing the cymbals of the band and throwing them onto the court."

Presently, Werber's theme turned to a subject he's an authority on, hustle and team spirit.

"Character building, 'some of the sarcastic critics of coaches call it," Werber said. "But don't let anybody underestimate its importance. It won our Cincinnati team a couple of pennants in 1939 and '40.

"When I joined the club, I became a pal of Shortstop Billy Meyers and Second Baseman Lonnie Frey because I liked their hustle. We figured we could take the pennant if we could get big Frank McCormick, our first baseman and best

3-Year Olds Take Over Laurel Event

Laurel, Md., March 30.—At least 10 three-year-olds are expected to match strides here on Saturday in the $7,500, six-furlong Laurel Stakes, which this year is an allowance event limited to the sophomores of racing.

Previously the Laurel was a stake for horses of all ages and was run at either a mile or a mile and a sixteenth during the fall meetings.

Mrs. James Carson's Kinsman, one of the better performers in Florida during the winter shapes up as the likely favorite in the Laurel but his price hardly will be prohibitive.

Rated as likely to oppose Kinsman are Bobanet Stable's Mystagogue, Cedar Farm's Halter, Mrs. H. S. Clark's Puppet, H. B. Cohen's Jess Linthicum, High Ground Stable's Prepared, Dion K. Kerr's Fleet Argo and a three-ply entry sent out by Trainer R. F. Curran consisting of Mrs. H. A. Campbell's Wily Fox, Mrs. W. H. Labrot's Balkan and Robert M. Wood's High Frequency.

Janet N. Kelly's Gigolo, who had been considered a probable start until a few days ago, has been shipped to Havre de Grace to await engagements there in the Chesapeake Trial on opening day and the Chesapeake Stakes on April 15.

Most of the Laurel stakes candidates also are eligible for the two three-year-old events at Havre de Grace and a good line on their prospects for the early spring classics will be available following their clash here on Saturday.

Casanova Hunt Set Saturday

The Casanova Hunt Schooling Show and Hunter Trials will inaugurate the spring season of the Virginia Horse Shows Association Saturday at Spring Hill Farm, Casanova Station, Va.

The Casanova Hunt affair replaces the former Warrenton Schooling Show as the spring test for youngsters, green, and veteran show ring performers and is bound to attract the cream of Virginia and the metropolitan area's exhibitors to its new show grounds on the estate of Charles H. Tompkins. It is located about 10 miles south of Warrenton, Va., near Casanova Station.

Sam Jethroe Scores on Pop Fly

Bradenton, Fla., March 30 (AP).—Boston's Braves won their first game in three tries from the St. Louis Cardinals today, edging the Redbirds 1-0 as Johnny Sain and Vern Bickford combined for the five-hit shutout.

The winning Tribe got only a half dozen safeties off Gerry Staley and Cloyd Boyer but bunched two of them with the game's only balk in the first inning for the single run of the exhibition.

Sam Jethroe was safe at first on a missed double play, went to second on Bob Addis' drive off Staley's glove and both advanced on a balk.

Werber Recalls How Cincy Won Pennants on Hustle

hitter, to hustle. So we tried a little psychology.

"We formed a clique called the Jungle Club. Frey was 'the leopard,' Meyers 'the jaguar' and I was 'the tiger.' Sounds like corny kid stuff, doesn't it?

"We called each other by those names when we tossed the ball around the infield, and McCormick began to feel slighted. He was the only infielder not in our club. Finally, he asked in. We told him, "no, not until you show us you can hustle for a month straight.'

"Well, do you know that the big lug went on a terrific hitting spree, and was running out even the sure outs, and on June 15, he approached us again and asked to be initiated. We brought him in and dubbed him 'hippopotamus.' He was tickled pink and batted us to the pennant.

"Ival Goodman, our right-fielder, saved us the 1940 pennant with his heads up play. Late in the season, we were playing the second place Cardinals in the game that could clinch us the flag. We were leading by a run in about the eighth inning.

"Ducky Medwick led off for them with a terrific liner to dead center. Our centerfielder, Harry Craft, raced back, trying for a sensational catch, rather than fielding the ball off the fence. The drive hit the fence just over Craft's glove and bounded way back toward the infield, apparently a sure triple.

"However, Goodman, playing heads up, had raced 200 feet over from his position, grabbed the ball, whipped a perfect throw to me, and we got Medwick, who, if he had reached third, would have been the sure tying run.

"Another guy on our club who had the spirit was utility infielder Eddie Joost. He couldn't break into the lineup for anything. But instead of moping, he was convinced he was better than either Meyers or Frey and kept in peak condition just waiting for a chance to prove it.

"Eddie got his chance the day before the 1940 World Series began when the heavy lid from the water bucket fell on Frey's foot, fracturing a toe. Joost stepped in and his play was one of the big reasons we beat Detroit in the series."

Werber forgot to say that his .370 average was tops for the '40 series, or that three times he led the American League in stolen bases and once in runs. His reckless baserunning would hardly have warranted a prediction that he'd turn out one of the most successful insurance brokers in the East.

Bill's 41 now, but he looks spry enough to play third for a lot of teams in the majors. You'd hardly think that he has an 18-year-old boy, Billy, jr., following in his footsteps at Duke University, but he has.

He's going to be a good ballplayer, too," says the old man. "He's already made the freshman team. Only trouble is, he's a left-handed first baseman. I don't know how that happened."

compounded from three walks and a wild pitch

But five of the seven hits the Phils eventually rapped against Weik were for extra bases. Bill Nicholson reached him for a homer in the third, Goliat homered and Andy Seminick doubled in the fourth and in the sixth he pitched a triple to Jones and a double to Ashburn.

By that time it was 6-0, Phillies, and the Nats weren't looking good, viewed from any perspective.

SHORT . . . The Phillies are the murderers' row of the Grapefruit League. They've averaged 15 runs a game in their last four contests . . . Bill Nicholson was both humiliated and hurt in the fourth inning today when Mickey Grasso picked him off first base. He sprained an ankle trying to get back to the bag . . . Funny thing about today's wind—it was blowing only for the Phillies' hitters, apparently—Bucky Harris gave Gil Coan a rest and moved Eddie Yost to the top of the batting order . . . Harris is obviously unhappy about the lickings his club is taking and says it's a downright shame that an otherwise good ball club suffers from this kind of pitching . . . Roberto Ortiz will report to the Nats next week and they'd like to trade him for a second-flight pitcher of the Tigers, who need a right-handed pinch hitter . . . The Nats drop down into cheaper company tomorrow, against Minneapolis at Tinker Field. It will be another test for Joe Haynes.

Stobbs, who won 11 and lost six when used in spots last season, was reported to have suffered only a sharp pain, no broken bones.

DEAR FOLKS: AT LAUREL

Here's a suggestion that could be worth something: Ed Sparrow, former sports editor of the Baltimore Sun, wants the calling of races over the PA system to be made by saddle numbers instead of names. He says more persons can follow the numbers than the names. He brings out that many horses' names have four sylables—Cock of the Walk, Markability, Adelantado are examples—while only two numbers between 1 and 12—7 and 11—have two syllables—I might get some track owner to try it. For a long time I've advocated that colors coincide to post positions—white for No. 1, green for No. 2, etc. The dog tracks use this system. But the horse people love their tradition.—BILL.

Colonials Open Baseball Season Today Against MIT Here

Highs Also Make Debut In 5 Games

George Washington University's baseball team opens its season at 3:15 this afternoon on the East Ellipse with a wingback, a blocking back, two centers, a fullback and two tailbacks in the lineup against Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Only Pitcher Bones Becraft and Second Baseman Chet Pietras of the Colonials aren't veterans of the varsity football team.

The wingback is first baseman Lou Ciarocca, a sophomore, and the only lefthanded batter in the lineup. He took over the job of Don Druckenmiller, who will do the catching.

Druckenmiller and Centerfielder Joe Famulette are the centers, Rightfielder Art Kenedy the blocking back, Leftfielder Frank Cavallo the fullback, and Shortstop Bob Cilento and Third Baseman Jack Tivnan the tailbacks.

Today is also opening day of the high school baseball season with five games slated.

The one which will attract most attention will be the 3 p. m. Washington-Lee vs. Devitt Prep game in Arlington.

W-L, Virginia state champ, will send its ace pitcher Bob Munro to the mound and will be banking on Centerfielder Billy Hillenbrand and First Baseman Det Haislip to retain the fine form which earned them all-state recognition last year.

D. C. Deaf Play Los Angeles

Undefeated Washington tackles top seeded Los Angeles tonight in the opening game of the National Amateur Basketball Tournament for Deaf Clubs at the National Guard Armory, 7 o'clock.

Second seeded Little Rock plays Worcester, Mass., defending champion Des Moines meets Spartansburg, S. C., and fourth seeded Pittsburgh takes on Milwaukee in other first round games tonight.

Three semifinals games are set for tomorrow morning, 9 o'clock, at the Armory, with two consolation games at 2 p. m. Championship game will be played at 8 p. m.

Washington, with 11 straight victories, has two high scorers in Donald Padden and John Schumacher.

Redskins Sign Another Fullback

After just signing Al DuGoff, GW fullback, the Redskins came back yesterday with an out-of-town fullback. Bill Chauncey, of Iowa State, became their 14th draft choice to sign.

Chauncey is 6-foot, 195-pounds. He's received Big Seven football mention for the past four years and also earned letters in track, baseball and basketball.

Unbeaten Ft. Belvoir Wins D. C. Rifle Title

Fort Belvoir No. 1 defeated National Capital, 1147-1106 for its 21st consecutive victory in the D. C. Rifle League last night. The soldiers thus finished their four-man team league season with a 21-0 record for the Class A championship.

Arlington Rifle Club, 18-3, was second and Army Map Service, 15-6, third. Fort Belvoir's No. 2 team won the Class B title with a 14-7 mark. GPO and Taylor Model Basin were tied for second

Leboff Does It

Rutgers Shades Virginia, 3-2, Scoring Winning Run in 7th

Charlottesville, Va., March 30.—Rutgers University shaded the University of Virginia, 3-2, here this afternoon.

Rutgers pushed across the winning run in the seventh inning when Jules Leboff scored on Sado's ground out. Leboff had singled to open the inning and advanced on a base hit by Ray Van Cleff and a ond in three starts. Virginia has won one and lost one.

3 Safe Suspects Held for Jury In Arlington

Three safecracking suspects were ordered held for the grand jury on housebreaking charges yesterday in a hearing before Arlington County Court Judge Hugh Reid.

The three are William Kirkpatrick, 26, and Cleaven Cordell, 32, both of 1415 1st st. sw., and Charles Williams, 45, of 1816 9th st. nw. They are charged with breaking into the Fairlington Laundry, 3800 S. Four Mile Run dr., Arlington County, early Monday.

The trio, in an affidavit filed before County Manager A. T. Lundberg, charged Wednesday that two policemen beat them during questioning.

In an affidavit yesterday, the men said that none of the three officers who testified in the Arlington County Court hearing were involved. The three who testified were Det. George Coppage, and Pvts. Truman Adams and L. J. Rasmussen.

Neither of the two accused policemen have been identified except by their last names.

Attorney William J. Hassan, who represents two of the three defendants, said his clients told him after court that the officers involved were in the courtroom at the hearing.

AN "interpretive ballet performance" is the Shoreham's description of their new type floor show. But before you turn away, remember that the secret lies in what they're interpreting. Nelle Fisher, Jerry Ross and Jack Russell stick to young love on a dude ranch (or should we call it authentic Western folk lore?) "Love and Sex," a rehash of the Roaring Twenties, plus a fight between David and Goliath thrown in.

You can get right in the mood if you've had a few drinks, and if you haven't, you can wax intellectual on the future of American folk dancing.

Nelle Fisher should know her modern dance. An ex of Martha Graham's dance group, she studied at the Cornish School and New York's Neighborhood Playhouse. Jerry Ross is from these parts—Elizabeth Burtner's tutelege at George Washington University started him on his career. Singing the stories, with the Barnee-Lowe Orchestra backing him up, is Jack Russell. He has a fine voice for these tales set to music, and his acting is assured and effective.

The group is currently appearing on NBC's "Show of Shows," with the same colorful costumes and "excerpts" from American history.

CLUB Kavakos is providing the belly laughs just as when Buddy Lester was there. Mickey Shaughnessy, its present comedian, gets the same results with a different approach.

Shaughnessy is a good-hearted, mirthful Irishman. His character studies are acted to perfection. For 55 minutes, twice a night, it keeps the patrons haw-hawing.

Single shows are a snap to Shaughnessy. If a real estate group, a fraternal order or what have you requests an appearance, he says, "Sure, and whatever you think it's worth; make out to the Damon Runyan Cancer Fund."

We asked him about this procedure, and he explained: "There's such a thing as being comfortable, and after that you get greedy, and start losing friends. And after all, those shows are no chore. It only takes 20 minutes to walk in, get laughs, and walk out again."

As for his selection of the Damon Runyon Fund for his surplus cash, he said that Walter Winchell gave him his first big break in night clubs. "He raised me from a $75 a week comic to a $650 a week one—by his constant plugging."

Witnesses Sworn in —After Testifying

The Senate gave a new twist to an old procedure yesterday: Witnesses were sworn in after they had testified.

It happened at a Senate Commerce Subcommittee hearing. Two immigration officials, Watson Miller and A. R. Mackey, had described their work.

As they finished, Senator Hunt (D., Wyo.) recalled that they hadn't been sworn in. So he had the men stand up and repeat:

"Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you have given, etc."

They swore that they had told the truth, and left.

Forum to Discuss Arlington Zone Writ

The following panel members will speak at the meeting, sponsored by the Arlington County Civic Federation: Charles Conrad, former member of the county planning staff; Carroll Wright, chairman of the Arlington Planning Commission; Ashton Jones, jr., member of the Arlington Board of Zoning Appeals; Herbert Howe, president of the Home Protective Association.

Russia Gains Foothold in Rich Sinkiang

London, March 30 (U.P.).—Foreign Office experts said today Russia has obtained a firm foothold in China's largest and richest western province of Sinkiang under two agreements announced by Moscow radio.

The agreements establish two Chinese-Soviet joint stock companies, one for prospecting and developing oil resources and the other for mining and developing nonferrous metals.

Experts believe the agreements portend a rapid increase of Russian influence in Sinkiang, where the population is only about 20 percent Chinese. The majority are Manchus, Mongols and Mohammedan tribes related to the inhabitants of Soviet Asia across the border.

(Sinkiang is one of the areas United States Secretary of State Acheson said the Russians are "attaching" to the Soviet.)

Russian airlines have established bases in Sinkiang. Three existing air bases cover the heart of China and are within bombing range of New Delhi.

Four Foreign Ships Seized by Nationalists

Taipei, Formosa, March 30 (AP). Pressing their blockade of Red China ports, Chinese Nationalists have seized at least four and possibly five foreign ships.

The latest seizure occurred about March 23 near Communist-held Amoy. The steamer Tai Chung Shan, flying the British flag, was forced into Quemoy, nearby Nationalist island.

MILTON STRASBURGER,
JACOB SANDLER,
Tower Building, Washington, D. C.,
Attorneys for Plaintiff.

IN THE MUNICIPAL COURT FOR the District of Columbia, Civil Division. K Street Garage, a corporation, 1212 K Street N.W., Washington, D. C., Plaintiff, vs. Frank F. Chesser, United States Public Health Hospital, Postoffice Box 2000, Lexington, Kentucky, Defendant. No. 512-787. Order Publication—Absent Defendant. The object of this suit is to establish and enforce a garage keeper's lien for storage charges in the sum of $290.00 and at the rate of $25.00 per month from February 18, 1950, against defendant's 1941 Buick automobile, Serial No. 24948, Motor No. 44227833, and to obtain judgment for the sale of said automobile for the satisfaction of plaintiff's demand. On motion of the plaintiff, it is therefore, this 22d day of March, 1950, Ordered that the defendant appear in this Court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why judgment should not be had and said lien enforced; otherwise this suit will be proceeded with as in case of default; providing a copy of this order is published once a week for three consecutive weeks in The Washington Post newspaper and the Washington Law Reporter, before said day. (Signed) ARMOND W. SCOTT, Judge. A true copy. Test: WALTER F. BRAMHALL, Clerk. By C. A. CLEMENTS, Deputy Clerk.

WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, MARCH 31, 1950

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

Anne Scoville and Jane Byers playing platform tennis

Platform Tennis New Sport

By Ellen Buell Farry

A NEW sport is making inroads in the Washington area, where less-than-perfect weather half the year has always been a bugbear to tennis fans.

The importation, platform paddle tennis, is played on a slightly raised wooden platform which drains and dries in a jiffy after rain or snow. Several of these all-weather courts are already up and in use in the environs.

The Herbert (Pete) Scovilles, jr., of Ten Oaks, at Langley, and the Edward F. Hamms, jr., of Rocky Run, McLean, are among the game's sponsors here. The Scovilles recently had their platform trucked down to Virginia from their place at Paconic, Conn., where they have used it for many years. The Hamms bought their court three months ago.

These couples invite neighbors to play every weekend. Probably no one should own a court who isn't sociable. Friends learn to play easily and love the game so much that they keep reappearing. The shorter paddle or racquet makes hitting the ball easier than hitting with a tennis racquet, which adds to the game's popularity with all comers.

Fessenden S. Blanchard and James K. Cogswell of Scarsdale, N. Y., originated platform paddle tennis in 1928. People in that section have been playing it in increasing numbers ever since. The game spread from New York to Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and through the Middle West, particularly around Chicago and Cincinnati. In some of these sections they now have tournament play.

Gaining Steady Popularity

ALTHOUGH slow to catch on in Washington, where the season for regular tennis is somewhat longer than in genuinely cold climes, the game has been steadily gaining in popularity in the North and Middle West.

While many children play, it has been so far primarily a game for adults—is a first cousin of the paddle tennis or playground paddle tennis played in gymnasiums, playgrounds and city streets, mostly by children.

Actually it stands about half way between tennis and ping pong. It is played on an area about one quarter the size of a regular tennis court. The platforms are marked like tennis courts; the method of scoring is the same as in tennis, and, with a few exceptions, its rules are the same.

A distinguishing feature of the new game is that balls may be taken off the back and side wiring, as in squash, provided they have first hit inside the court, and before they have struck the platform again.

The equipment may be built for about $500, about half the cost of a regular tennis court. The upkeep is little or nothing.

With so many practical points in its favor, fans here expect the new game to win a permanent place for itself in the catalogue of Washington sports.

Pan American Plans Break Precedent

By Marie McNair

PAN-AMERICAN DAY, April 14, will take on a special glitter this year with the dinner and large reception to be given by the President of Chile, Gabriel Gonzalez-Videla, that evening at the Pan-American Union.

The day-long celebration at the Pan-American Union will open with a special meeting of the Council of the Organization of American States, in honor of the Chilean Chief of State, who will address the members. In past years this special meeting has heard the President of the United States or the Secretary of State. This year marks the first time in the history of Pan-American Day that a President from Latin America has been the speaker.

As Congress is to be recessed during Pan-American Week, Representative Mike Mansfield has introduced a resolution designating April 6 as the day on which Congress will commemorate the holiday. Pan-American relations will be discussed in the Senate and Representative Mansfield will open with a tribute to the Americas in the House.

Other festivities planned are a luncheon by Dr. Fred L. Soper, director of the Pan-American Sanitary Bureau for Ambassadors, members of the Council of OAS and officials of the Sanitary Bureau; a luncheon on April 12, at which Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan will be host, and diplomats and agricultural trainees who are in Washington from Latin-America will be honored. And a symphony concert will be given on April 14 by the Department of Agriculture orchestra in the Department of Agriculture Auditorium. A display of the 20 flags of the Americas will be on display in the patio.

Two Parties Given For Mme. Rybar

ON THE calendar yesterday were the dinner by the Ecuadorean Ambassador and Senora de Dillon, and the luncheon at which Mrs. Alexander Kirk was hostess at the Westchester in honor of Mme. Vladimir Rybar.

Hugo Gouthier, retiring Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy, was the guest in whose honor Col. and Mrs. Jess Bryon Bennett entertained at luncheon yesterday.

Among the guests were Jean Daridan, Counselor of the French Embassy and his guest, Gen. Vinovi Pechkoff of France; Senora de Undurraga, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador, and Senora Nieto del Rio and Senora de Martinez-Vargas, daughter-in-law of the Bolivian Ambassador and Senora de Martinez-Vargas.

Mexican General Honored at Luncheon

GEN. WADE H. HAISLIP, Vice Chief of Staff, USA, was host at a luncheon in the Carlton Room of the Carlton Hotel Tuesday at 1 p. m. Gen. L. C. Ruiz, Mexican Military Attache, who will depart shortly for his homeland, was guest of honor. General Ruiz was presented with a decoration from our Government, the Legion of Merit, Order of Commander, for his sincere efforts for a better understanding between the armed forces of the United States and Mexico.

Williamsburg Chosen For Baby's Christening

MILDRED LYNARD ALLEN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Fell Allen of Alexandria, Va., will be christened on Saturday at Bruton Parish Church, Williamsburg, Va., by the Right Rev. H. St. George Tucker, former presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church of the United States. The ceremony will be followed by a buffet luncheon at Williamsburg Inn.

Attending the ceremony and luncheon will be Mr. and Mrs. John Gomery of Rosemont, Pa., the latter godmother for the baby and a classmate of Mrs. Allen at Finch School; Miss Sheila Emerson of Greenwich, Conn., and Mrs. James Joyce, grandmother of the baby, who will come from her winter home at Sarasota, Fla. Col. and Mrs. Royal Roussel and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Alfriend, and Mr. and Mrs. John A. Croghan of Alexandria will motor down for the event and Mrs. McCrain Smith, event and Mrs. McCain Smith, M. Coors will be there from Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen's other daughter, Mimi, was christened at Bruton Parish three years ago.

The godparents, in addition to Mrs. Gomery, are Mrs. Allen Masser and Edward Emerson, both of Greenwich.

Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson, widow of Major General Donaldson, former District Commissioner, is in Washington for the League of American Pen Women conference, opening Saturday at the Statler.

Mrs. Donaldson is the author of "Passport to Adventure," "My Capture and Escape" and other stories. She has recently returned from Honolulu and Japan.

MRS. VICTOR THOMAS SPONSLER, the former Miss Gabrielle Carroll, was married March 25 at St. Matthew's Cathedral, with a reception following at the New Zealand Embassy. The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Carroll of Te Aroha, New Zealand, was given in marriage by Ambassador Berendsen. The bridegroom, an Air Force captain, is the son of Mrs. S. T. Cooke of Washington and the late Earl Sponsler.

Hallows Guild Flower Mart Plans Unfold

Plans for the 1950 edition of Washington Cathedral's famous Flower Mart began to unfold this week, as members of the All Hallows Guild Flower Mart committee met at the home of Mrs. G. Howland Chase.

Friday, May 5 (or, if rain, Saturday, May 6) has been selected as a date for this Spring fete sponsored annually by All Hallows Guild.

Mrs. Chase, who is president of the Guild, will also serve as this year's Flower Mart chairman. Her committee includes Mrs. Preston Delano, Mrs. Frederick B. Lee, Mrs. J. Blaise deSibour, Mrs. Lewis Clark and Mrs. A. S Monroney

Repeat assignments to head booth committees have already been accepted by Mrs Jean Delattre Seguy and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, jr. Mrs. McCook Knox and Mrs. Walter Boyd are cochairmen of a committee on research.

Although in the past most of the Flower Mart booths have been concentrated upon the Pilgrim Steps and southeast terraces, it has been decided this year to take advantage of the Cathedral area fronting on Wisconsin avenue.

SHAD Expert Elwood Wathen shows a customer, Mrs. Fred Maxwell of Rockville, Md., how he ferrets out the bones in a plump Chesapeake shad. On the tray in the foreground are filleted shad and shad roe ready to be cooked

Season for Good Eating

Spring Means Shad to Epicures

By Lucia Brown

"WHEN the Lord made shad, the devil was mad and stuck in the bones out of spite."

So goes an ancient verse pointing up the only defect in a fish considered practically perfect along the banks of the Potomac and the Chesapeake.

Other sections of the Atlantic Coast enjoy this fine springtime fish, but Marylanders and Virginians have had a special feeling for it since colonial days. They'll even forgive it its bones, particularly since we have experts hereabouts who'll remove them before you take your fish home from the market.

One of these is Elwood Wathen, whom we interviewed as he skillfully extracted bones from a fat shad at a local market this week.

Mr. Wathen says it's all a matter of knowing where to slit the fish. Head and scales come off first. The roe is removed next. Then, with a couple of slices through the middle of the fish, he takes out back and stomach bones all in one piece. Side bones—three "veins" of them on each side—are cut out in long strips with a sharp knife. Result is two fine shad filets, to be broiled, baked or fried.

Season Hasn't Yet Reached Its Peak

SHAD from the Potomac and Chesapeake are generally most plentiful from mid-March to mid-May, Bishop Thompson, Mr. Wathen's boss, explained to us. The season will be at its peak a couple of weeks after Good Friday, though there's a large demand for them right now.

"Long cooking will make small bones in a shad dissolve," says Mr. Thompson, "but it spoils the flavor of the fish. Best way to get 'em out is to cut 'em out."

Here's how to broil enough boned shad to make four generous servings:

BROILED BONELESS SHAD

2 pounds shad filets
6 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
Flour
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon paprika

Dip fillets in cold, salted water (1 tablespoon salt to 1 quart water). Remove and wipe dry. Brush both sides of filets with melted butter or margarine. Dust with flour. Oil the hot broiler pan. Place filets flesh side down, on broiler pan (three inches from moderate flame). Cook until skin is covered with dark brown bubbles. Turn. Baste several times with basting mixture. Cook until nicely browned. Serve immediately.

Shad Roe Always A Great Delicacy

THE roe is, of course, one of the most prized portions of the shad. It can be purchased separately or in the fish. Roe shad always commands a higher price than buck shad. Right now, price tags are around 40 cents per pound for buck and 60 cents for roe shad. Here's one method of broiling the separate roes:

BROILED SHAD ROE

Water
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon vinegar
Salt and pepper
Melted butter

Simmer shad roe for 15 minutes very slowly in enough water to cover with the salt and vinegar. (Put roe in while water is still cold.) Drain, cover with cold water, and let stand for five minutes.

Drain, remove loose membrane, sprinkle roe with salt and pepper, brush with melted butter, or dip in egg and crumbs and broil until golden brown. This will give you enough roe to serve six. Sometimes, strips of bacon are spread across the roe while it's under the broiler. The two make a good flavor combination.

Shad roe may also be sauted, baked or scalloped.

Baked Whole Shad A Feature Treat

BAKED whole shad is a festive treat, though here you must contend with the bones yourself. Either roe or buck shad can be used. The roe shad run 2¾ to 5 pounds in weight, while the bucks are only 1¼ pounds to 3 pounds.

PLANKED SHAD

3 to 4 pound shad
Salt and pepper
½ cup melted butter
2 cups hot mashed potatoes
Parsley and lemon

Clean and dress fish. Broil for 10 minutes and then place on a buttered plank, skin side down, season well, pour melted butter over top and bake in hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) 15 minutes.

Heat plank before placing fish on it. Protect plank from scorching by coating with damp salt all portions not covered by fish. The salt dries and is easily removed before potato is added. Remove from oven and place mashed potatoes pressed through pastry bag around the fish. Return to oven until potatoes are brown and fish well done. Garnish with parsley and lemon slices. Serves six to eight.

FILET OF SOLE: Add to 4 filets of sole, salt and pepper, fine dry bread crumbs, oil or other fat for frying. For sauce: ¼ cup butter or margarine, ¼ cup chopped roasted blanched almonds, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, lemon wedges. Sprinkle fish with salt and pepper. Dust lightly with crumbs and fry in hot fat. For the sauce melt butter or margarine and add almonds and salt. Heat, stirring constantly, until almonds are crisp and thoroughly heated. Stir in lemon juice and serve very hot over fish. Garnish with lemon.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Referring to Happy May-December Marriages. In Which Man Is the Elder, Spinster Wonders Whether to Encourage Lad Who Is Half Her Age

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In your column some weeks ago you spoke encouragingly of marriage where the man is substantially older than the woman; and seemed to say that a difference of 20 or 30 years is not too much, if they are congenial in character.

What would you say if the age difference were reversed? That is, if the woman were 20 years older than the man? Alec is 20 and Jane is 40. He is matured and wise beyond his years; intelligent, studious, handsome, a keen judge of character. Jane also is studious and intelligent, young in spirit and a good worker.

The attraction between them was such that they could communicate thought without words at times. They are both sensitive souls and incurable romantics; they complement each other and seem perfectly attuned. Jane is rather naive, never having gone out much with men; and having been more or less dominated at home, she has an easy-going disposition.

Life Is Changed by His Interest

QUITE AGAINST her natural inclinations, and indeed with almost superhuman effort, Jane resisted Alec's advances because of the difference in ages. She shrank from what people might say of the great incongruity in that respect. Yet his ardent admiration changed her life so much that she finds it impossible to forget him. Each seems "home" to the other.

Was this an unnatural association? Would Jane be taking advantage of Alec's youth if she encouraged his devotion? Would it be possible for them to marry and be happy in present day society? Alec is very settled in his ways and attitudes and Jane is not—in the sense that she could adapt to almost anyone. Please advise us. J. L.

Little Evidence of Companionship

DEAR J. L.: The gauzy construction of this alleged idyll, which seems to consist slightly of fact and largely of poetic dreaming on Jane's part, suggests that the pair are lonely persons, who came under the spell of strong sex hunger in each other's company—maybe for lack of friendly association with potentially more suitable life partners.

It seems to me there hasn't been enough prosaic association here to indicate—much less to prove—congeniality between the two. If there had been substantial companionship, in the way of taking walks, dining together, going to movies, trading books, discussing views, etc., there would be less hyperbole in your statement of the case, I think. You would be simply, factually concerned about the age angle, not constrained to try to sell the idea that mutual love exists.

However, taking your story at face value, let me assure you there's nothing unnatural about flickers, or even long sieges, of sentimental attraction between a young man and a woman substantially older. It happens right along in human history.

But if the lad is only 20 and the woman 40, I couldn't argue sincerely in favor of marriage for them, — not because of the difference in ages per se, but because of the lad's green youth.

Youth in Love Can't See Risks

AT 20 a boy just isn't old enough to foresee what his companionship needs will be in another few years, when he shall be levelling off for the long run of marriage; nor is he experienced enough to comprehend the uncommon risks that challenge any conjugal venture that departs from the traditional folk pattern.

Since you write indirectly, I shall advise indirectly to this effect—a sensitive, intelligent older woman of responsible character will treat a young lad's devotion with friendly appreciation and serious respect, but will generously contrive at the same time to give their exchange a briskly platonic flavor, so that as the romantic impulse dies of attrition, a durable brand of social fellowship will emerge. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

MRS. GRAY SILVER, Jr.

Miss Kathleen Hanold, daughter of Mrs. Robert Paul Usak of Martinsburg, W. Va., and Gray Silver, jr., were married yesterday in Martinsburg. The bride is on the secretarial staff of John Steelman, assistant to President Truman. Only members of the immediate families attended the ceremony and reception which followed.

The bride wore a Navy blue suit and a corsage centered with a white orchid. She was given in marriage by her uncle, George A Claytor of Baltimore. Miss Marguerite Smith of Washington was her only attendant and Frank Silver was best man for his brother. Mr. Silver, prominent West Virginia attorney with offices in Martinsburg, is the son of Mrs. Kate Bishop Silver and the late Gray Silver.

Mme. Pandit to Speak at U. N. Forum

Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture and chairman of the United Nations Forum, announced today that Mme. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, Ambassador from India, will speak at the next meeting of the forum, April 5. This meeting, the second in a series of four, will be held at the Shoreham Hotel at 11 a. m.

Mme. Pandit, who will speak on "The Rice Bowl of Asia," will be accompanied on the panel by H. P. Yang, a native of Foochow and currently the rural welfare officer in the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations. Joseph C. Harsch, whose new book, "The Curtain Isn't Iron," is just now being published, will moderate.

Following the lectures coffee and sandwiches will be served. Among those pouring will be Signora Tarchiani, wife of the Ambassador from Italy; Mrs. George Malone, Mme. Vladimir Rybar, Senora de Castro, wife of the Ambassador from El Salvador; Mrs. Leonard Scheele, Mrs. Edward Bartelt, Mrs. Tom Clark, Mrs. Ludwig Kleinwaechter, wife of the Minister from Austria, and Senora de Martinez Vargas, wife of the Bolivian Ambassador. Grooms Often Gloom, But Now Here's An Usher Worried About His Wedding Chores; Anne Gives the Lowdown

IT'S WELL KNOWN that bridegrooms gloom over the terrifying details of a big church wedding, but here's an usher suffering pangs of anxiety three months in advance.

DEAR ANNE:

I've been invited to be an usher in a wedding in Denver in June and have already started worrying about my duties and responsibilities. I never paid any attention to these poor, unfortunate fellows at other weddings and wonder what I'm in for. Uneasy Usher, Washington.

You'll undoubtedly get plenty of coaching from the bride—maybe even from the bridegroom—if you get to Denver in time for a rehearsal. But, just in case, here are a few cues on the gentle art of ushering:

Remember that relatives and friends of the bride are seated on the left side of the church, while the right side is reserved for the bridegroom's relatives and friends.

Ask each lady who enters (unless you know her) "Are you a friend of the bride or bridegroom," then offer her your right arm and escort her to a seat. Talk quietly as you proceed down the aisle. Stalking along in absolute silence seems a bit stiff and rude.

A gentleman is never ushered to his seat. If he is with a lady, he walks a pace behind the usher and his companion.

The usher should pause for a moment at the end of the pew while guests whom he has escorted take their places. He should then return to the vestibule doorway to resume his duties.

Ushers line up for the procession in the vestibule in front of the bride and her party. After the recessional, two ushers escort the bride and bridegroom's mothers from the church in advance of the other guests.

Other duties an usher may be assigned include drawing the aisle ribbons and spreading the aisle canvas. They're also expected to mingle with the guests, at the reception, see that no one is neglected and everyone has a good time.

DEAR ANNE:

Recently I noticed a mention in the society column concerning a booklet published by a Washington woman listing names of places where one might get repairs made or purchase items for the home. Can you tell me the name and author and where it can be obtained? S. C. K., Washington.

I believe you must be referring to "Your Handbag Directory," a list compiled by Mrs. W. Jasper DuBose and Mrs. Robert G. McKay. It is sold at an F st. bookstore (Republic 3913), and its branches; also at an Alexandria shop (Alexandria 7833), one in Georgetown (Hobart 4141), and another on Connecticut ave. (Decatur 1044.)

DEAR ANNE:

What type of desserts can I serve with my ice cream forks? E. C. Arlington, Va.

Ice cream forks can be used for meringues, heavily-iced cake, pie, molded ice cream—in fact, any dessert that is not "juicy" enough to require a spoon.

DEAR ANNE:

After washing my white cotton blouse, I put it on a hanger to dry and it acquired rust stains. Is there any way to remove these. S. Kirschbaum, 947 E st. sw.

You can get these spots out with one of the rust removing preparations sold by drug stores and houseware's sections. Or you can give them the lemon juice and salt treatment. Sprinkle stain with salt, squeeze on lemon juice, and put in sun to dry. Add more lemon juice if stain still shows, then rinse well.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me how to rejuvenate an old Navy blue leather purse? It is soiled and the color is worn off in spots. Should I use dry-cleaning fluid to clean it? J. K., Arlington.

Nay, nay, my lass. Dry-cleaning fluid takes the natural oils out of leathers and makes them crack. Use shoe cream to clean the purse. If you buy blue shoe cream, this may be sufficient to restore the color. If not, use shoe dye in a matching shade to touch up worn corners. But be wary of putting colored polish or dye or handles or places where your hands will often rest. It may rub off on your light gloves.

Tobe Says...

Milan Straw Is Early Spring Fashion

If you went South this winter you probably bought a pair of shoes in milan straw and a bag to match in natural or red or some other gay color. Those will stand you in good stead this summer of course. But do you realize that milan shoes and bags are a very important early spring fashion too?

Yes, in navy and black and a very smart new shade of Balenciaga brown, milan shoes and bags have the right formal quality for pre-Easter costumes. I think milan shoes are prettiest in the new very open strippling sandals because the milan straw braid makes them fine little strips. The bags are so well styled that they do not seem like straw bags at all.

Honick's, 3130 Wilson Blvd. OX. 2498.

One on the Aisle—

If a Congressman Reviewed a Movie

By Richard L. Coe

THE BRILLIANT DISCOVERY by the House of Representatives that the business of foreign relations is just a big joke not to be taken seriously is a boon to the harried movie reviewer.

Following the example set by our lawmakers, it is possible to review Red Skelton in "The Yellow Cab Man," at the Capitol, in a new, more frivolous manner than formerly. One may be permitted, therefore, to write seriously of the presumably comical:

Long a celebrated heldentenor of the Metropolitan Opera, famed for his Wagnerian roles, Red "Rouge" Skelton is following his dramatic success of "The Fuller Brush Man" with an equally stirring tribute to the cab driving populace in his new epic, succinctly titled "The Yellow Cab Man." (It should be inserted in the record that by "Yellow," a lack of courage is not implied. The adjective simply denotes the color of the vehicle, and by vehicle is meant not the star's picture but a taxicab.)

The 95-year-old Skelton herein delineates the role of an inventor of unbreakable glass, which product he seeks to sell to a taxi company. One can imagine the stirring moments involved when this great artist plumbs the depths of such emotional implications. Through narcosynthesis, a revolving house, a springler system, a grease pit, an automobile accident and an archery set, the dramatic prowess of Rouge Skelton is brilliantly revealed.

Nor is the deathless romance between the star and the stunningly beautiful Gloria De Haven ignored by the writers of this photo drama, Devery Freeman and Albert Beich. Miss De Haven's dramatic talents, which a man careless with truth might compare to the gifts of the immortal Duse and the divine Sarah, reach new heights.

Other artists of Los Angeles County appearing in this latest Culver City presentation include Messrs. Jimmy Gleason, Jay C. Flippen, Edward Arnold and Mme. Polly Moran, fondly remembered by all who saw her in the first production of the 375th Shepherd's play.

NOTE: The balance of this column can be taken at its face value.

THE MAYFLOWER PARTY in which Blevins Davis, Lucia Chase and Oliver Smith presented members of Ballet Theater to diplomats representing countries where they will dance this summer, rates A-100 in even a party-crazed town. Highlights for the memory book: Rosa Ponselle, her voice as rich and warm as your fondest memories of it, breaking into impromptu song, merrymakers automatically quieting to hear her sing 'Some Enchanted Evening," Schubert's "Ave Maria" and whatever came into her head; most moving were her unaccompanied "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny' and 'Swanee River," though the on-the-spot accompaniment of the small orchestra couldn't have been more perfect . . . Nana Gollner and Nora Kaye holding court . . . Igor Youskevitch and Faye Emerson doing a Charleston . . . Dynamic, electric-eyed Johnny Kriza waltzing with Lucia Chase's waltz-loving sister . . . Paul Godkin, fresh from his sailor suit in "Fancy Free" telling why he finally bought a new dinner jacket.

THE PIX switches today from the Italian solemnity of "Open City" and "Paisan" to two top laughs from Hollywood, the Marx Brothers in "A Night at the Opera" and Harold Lloyd in "Movie Crazy" . . . Comedy also prevails at the National, where Hope and Crosby take over in "The Road to Rio."

FRONT ROYAL note-for-the-day: In honor of Bing Crosby Day Saturday, the Skyline Caverns will be open free of charge, owner H. B. Long inviting all Bing's fans to come see his stalactites.

BING CROSBY, Front Royal-bound, will be hopping off a B. & O. train for a half hour this morning at Union Station at 8:55.

THE CAST of the Gayety's "Goodbye, My Fancy" will attend a special screening this afternoon of Director-Star Sam Wanamaker's British-made version of "Christ in Concrete," "Salt to the Devil," part of the advance drums for Sam Roth's new Plaza Theater.

THE WESTMORELAND Congregational Church will present Mary P. Hamlin's "The Rock" on Easter Eve and Easter night under the direction of Joan Connor, with Edmund R. Strait, associate minister of the church in the title role of Simon Peter.

JERRY ROSS, the Washington dancer who's hit TV nicely with Nelle Fisher and Jack Russell in their "Dance Ballads," are topping the Shoreham's nightly bill; you remember Jerry from "Sing Out, Sweet Land," Miss Fisher from the movies' "Up in Central Park" and Russell has just closed in "Alive and Kicking" . . . Another favorite of larger haunts is clubbing, too, the wonderful Dean Murphy, opening a run of his swell mimicking at Old New Orleans tonight.

ALSO TONIGHT is Hillbilly Jamboree and Square Dance evening at Uline's, with Jerry and Sky, "The Sunshine Boys from the Sunny South," trucking over from Wheeling's WWVA show, along with the other mountaineer experts.

READY FOR EASTER: Marjorie Main, who often looks as she does at the left, intends to change all that for the Easter Parade, for which you see her bedecked at the right. Marjorie's next is "Ma and Pa Kettle Go to Town"

'Washingtonian' Award Goes To Luchs; Bird Runner-up

Luchs

Runner-up for the honor was Walter M. Bird, president of the North Washington Recreation Council. The awards were announced at the Junior Chamber's weekly luncheon at the Burlington Hotel.

In announcing Luchs as the winner of the organization's gold key and certificate of honor, Jaycee President Paul Mathews praised Luchs for giving "unsparingly of his time and energy (and) placing the Chest campaign at the top of his daily appointment schedule for more than six months."

A native of Washington, Luchs is associated in the real estate firm of Shannon & Luchs. He is a graduate of Central High School and of the George Washington University. He is a past Jaycee director, a trustee of the Washington Boys' Club, and vice president of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

As general chairman of the 1950 Red Feather Drive, he became the youngest Washingtonian to assume the position.

Bird, an employe of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., is also a native Washingtonian. He is president of the Shepherd Park Citizens Association, a member of the Board of Deacons of the Presbyterian Church of Pilgrims, and a director of the American Businessmen's Association.

He was particularly cited for his activities in obtaining recreation facilities.

Students to Give Operetta

Greenbelt High School students will give a performance on "The Frantic Physician," operetta based on Moliere's "Le Medecin Malgre Lui," at 8 p. m. today in the Center School Auditorium, Greenbelt. The performance is under the direction of Miss Ellen Beckman, high school music teacher.

N. Y. Cleric to Speak

The Rev. Robert S. Bilheimer of New York will speak at 7:30 p. m. today at the parish hall of Immanuel Church on-the-Hill, Alexandria. He is program secretary in North America for the World Council of Churches.

Magnetism Expert to Speak

Dr. George R. Wait of the department of terrestial magnetism, Carnegie Institution of Washington, will be among the speakers at a symposium on aerosols to be held at the Army Chemical Center from April 3-5.

Prince Georges To Dedicate 2-Way Fire Radio System

Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) and the Prince Georges County Commissioners will take part in the dedication of the county's new two-way fire radio system Saturday.

Mayors and officials of the county towns also have been invited to take part. A motorcade will form at 2 p. m. at the County Service Building, Hyattsville, and proceed to the Hillside Firehouse where the 125-foot aerial is located, 425 feet above sea level.

The system already has hookups with 24 of the county's 28 fire departments and will have dispatchers at Hyattsville and Capitol Heights. Two-way communication can be carried on between apparatus at a fire and the fire control board. The system was rigged by Lieut. Louis Mackall and Corp. Reginald Austin, county police radio experts.

Merrick Camp Plans Vacation For 600 D. C. Boys

The Merrick Boys' Camp on the Potomac at Maryland Point will give almost 600 local and underprivileged boys a two-week vacation starting early in July.

At a meeting of the camp's executive committee, in the Mayflower Hotel, plans were discussed for the camp's two-month season. A fund drive to support it will start shortly, Raymond A. DuFour, insurance broker who is president of the camp, announced.

The camp occupies a 300-acre tract about 55 miles from Washington in Charles County, Md. It is conducted under Catholic auspices, but a third to a half of those attending are of other religious faiths or none.

Pontiff in Peace Plea on Eve of Germany's Polish Invasion

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII, Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career, from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year in 24 daily installments.

By Kees Van Hoek
Foreign Affairs Writer of the Irish Times

XIII Toward War

AFTER Pope Pius XII was crowned, international tension, which had been rampant all winter, began to move toward its inevitable combustion. Hitler, shedding all previous pretense that he was only concerned over German peoples—that doctrine of "One People, One State" which had served as excuse for the rape of Austria and for the annexation of the Sudetenland—suddenly occupied all Czechoslovakia. Mussolini, feeling hurt in his prestige by coup after coup of his brother dictator, chased King Zog out of Albania and proclaimed it a dominion of Italy. Premier Chamberlain had to accelerate British rearmament and introduce conscription, to make it clear that Britain would back with deeds the words of her guarantee to threatened Poland.

The Pope worked incessantly through all these months, almost to the point of "neglecting his other duties," as he put it pathetically, supporting every effort that could have averted war. Even during what was to have been his summer holiday at Castel Gandolfo, he received day by day Ambassadors and Ministers of the Powers accredited to him, as he called his own Nuncios from foreign capitals.

Enlists Public Opinion

AS EARLY as May he had sent formal notes to the Italian, French, British, German, and Polish governments, proposing an international conference to examine the dispute between these countries. The replies were courteous enough in tone, but useless for all practical purposes. At the last moment the Pope suddenly decided to enlist the moral support of public opinion throughout the world by a personal broadcast, in which he stated clearly both the danger as well as his aim. Let us quote his own words, considered so historic that they have been reprinted verbatim in the "British White Paper Relating to the Outbreak of Hostilities":

"Once again a critical hour strikes for the great human family; an hour of tremendous decisions, toward which our hearts cannot be indifferent and from which our spiritual authority, which comes to us from God, to lead souls in the ways of justice and of peace, must not hold itself aloof.

"Behold us all of you, who at this moment are carrying the burden of so great a responsibility, in order that through our voice you may hear the voice of Christ from Whom the world received the most exalted example of living and in Whom millions and millions of souls repose their trust, in a crisis in which His word alone is capable of mastering all the tumultuous disturbances.

"Behold us, leaders of peoples, men of state and men of arms, writers, orators and all those others who have the power to influence the thought and action of their fellow men for whose destiny they are responsible.

Fear Excruciating

"WE, ARMED ONLY with the word of truth and standing above all public disputes and passions, speak to you. Notwithstanding our repeated exhortations, the fear of bloody international conflict becomes more excruciating; today when the tension of minds seems to have arrived at such a pass as to make the outbreak of the awful scourge of war appear imminent, we direct with paternal feeling a new and more heartfelt appeal to those in power and to their peoples; to the former that, laying aside accusations, threats, causes of mutual distrust, they may attempt to resolve their present differences with the sole means suitable thereto, namely reciprocal and trusting agreements; to the latter that, in calm tranquillity, without disorder agitation, they may encourage the peaceful efforts of those who govern them.

"It is by force of reason and not by force of arms that justice makes progress; and empires which are not founded on justice are not blessed by God. The danger is imminent but there is yet time. Nothing is lost with peace; all may be lost with war. Let men return to mutual understanding. Let them begin negotiations anew. Conferring with goodwill and with respect for reciprocal rights, they will find that to sincere and conscientious negotiators an honorable solution is never precluded.

"May the Almighty grant that the voice of this Father of the Christian family—of this servant of servants who bears amongst them, unworthily indeed, but nevertheless really, the person, the voice and the authority of Jesus Christ—find in the minds and in the hearts of men a ready and willing reception.

Safeguard of Honor

"MAY the strong hear us that they may not become weak through injustice, may the powerful hear us if they desire that their power be not destruction but rather a protection for their peoples and a safeguard of order.

"We have with us the hearts of mothers which beat as one with ours; of fathers who would be obliged to abandon their families; of the lowly who labor and do not understand; of the innocent upon whom weighs heavily the awful threat; of the young men, generous with the purest and noblest ideas.

"All humanity seeks justice, bread, freedom; not steel, which kills and destroys. With us is Christ Who has made His one, solemn commandment — Love Thy brother—the very substance of His Religion and the promise of salvation for individuals as for nations. . . ."

* * * *

A week before this Papal broadcast Count Ciano had visited Herr von Ribbentrop at the latter's summer seat in the Austrian Tyrol. The Italian asked the German Foreign Minister, "What is it you really want? Is it only Danzig and a corridor through the Polish corridor or is it all that part of Poland which has strong German minorities?" When Ribbentrop replied with cynical candor: "We would even refuse the entire Corridor, if it were offered to us. We want war—war now that we are sure of our supremacy."

A Sleepless Night

UNAWARE of that mad determination, the Father of Christendom waged one more attempt. All the night of August 30-31 he had lain sleepless in his bedroom at Castel Gandolfo. He rose very early that morning of the 31st—and by 5 o'clock he was in his study. There, at his desk, he drafted with his own hand the final effort over which he had pondered all that sleepless night. He proposed a 15-day truce of all military preparations—the truce had to be short to have any appeal at all to Hitler's temperament. But the truce was to be utilized to convene, within that time, an international conference which was not only to examine the German-Polish dispute but a complete revision of the Treaty of Versailles.

By 8 that morning, the Pope summoned his Secretary of State, Cardinal Maglioni. Before noon his message was in the hands of Hitler and Beck, was in Downing Street in London and on the Quai d'Orsay in Paris. That same afternoon the British Foreign Secretary, Lord Halifax, instructed his Ambassadors in Berlin and Warsaw that "H. M. Government wished to support the Papal proposal in the strongest possible way." But it was all of no avail. At 6 o'clock the next morning Nuncio Orsenigo telephoned from Berlin that the German armies had invaded Poland and—so an eye-witness told me—the Pope went to his private chapel and, as he knelt before the altar, tears streamed down his face.

If We Are True

We do not have to fear as long . . . As we put forth our best . . . With diligence and constancy . . . To carry out our quest . . . As long as we are honest and . . . Assume our equal share . . . And do not let ourselves be blue . . . Or driven to despair . . . For these are all the factors and . . . The qualities we need . . . To live our lives courageously . . . And do the better deed . . . There is no cause to be concerned . . . Or reason to regret . . . As long as every duty is . . . A task that we have met . . . As long as we are kind and good . . . And walk the humble way . . . To comfort other creatures and . . . To glorify the day.

Look For Baseball History in 1950

On the opening day of each baseball season, I publish my annual predictions as to how the teams will finish in the two major leagues.

My forecasts are based on Shuttle's Law, "The best team figures to win," because baseball usually runs true to form.

But my preliminary analysis for this season indicates that we are about to see two pennant races that will make history. Either my crystal ball needs a tune-up job or 1950 will be a season of upsets that will rock baseball to its very foundations.

Don't miss my opening day forecast. It's going to be so sensational I can hardly wait for it to come out myself.

STREET SCENE

A car with Ontario tags was making an illegal U-turn on 12th st. nw., between E st. and the Avenue, just a few feet from a sign which sternly forbids U-turns.

Hands on hips, the cop on the corner watched the driver's inept execution of the maneuver until traffic was pretty well fouled up.

Then he pulled a book of tickets from his back pocket and wearily shuffled off in the direction of the miscreant.

"Aw, can't you see he's from Canada?" called out a kibitzer on the sidewalk. "Didn't you ever hear of the Good Neighbor Policy?" The cop grinned.

"I don't recognize the car," he replied, "but the driver is strictly a local boy and he'd better not try any French accent on me."

EXPLANATION

One paragraph in the Give-Away section of this column was blurred in part of the "State" edition run Wednesday morning.

Many readers called to ask what it was supposed to say. I've given this explanation so many times I think I can recite it by heart:

After the "Bulldog" edition was distributed, I got a call at 10 p. m. informing me that one of the Give-Away items wasn't really a give-away. The owner of the dog wanted to sell it—not give it away—and the price was $150.

I called the number listed and was told: "Yes, I'm afraid there has been a misunderstanding. We wish to sell the dog, not give it away."

With the "State" edition just starting to roll, I had the pressman "mash" the erroneous paragraph, to eliminate further inconvenience for both the owner of the dog and prospective applicants. To make sure, the phone number was completely chiseled off.

While the "State" was running with these unintelligible lines, I "made-over" the left-hand comic page, and substituted a short "Personal Note" for the paragraph which was eliminated.

That's why the Give-Away appeared in the "Bulldog," was purposely mashed in the "State," and had disappeared by the time the "City" was on the presses.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Young male cat, gentle with children; white chest and feet." (Wisconsin 3156.)

"Four 2-month-old kittens in dire need of home; will deliver." (Shepherd 4387.)

"Very pretty, very cute 6-week-old kittens; one boy, one girl." (Hudson 5815 before 9:30 a. m. or after 5 p. m.)

"Three adorable housebroken black kittens, 7 weeks old." (Lincoln 6-4001 after 6 p. m.)

"Roly poly 6-week-old pup with high butterfat content; Belgian police extraction." (Tuckerman 4958.)

UNIFICATION NOTE

The April issue of Coronet magazine features a condensation of "Disaster Through Air Power," by Post Reporter Marshall Andrews.

A Pentagon newsstand put up a snappy display of the magazines, set off by appropriate posters. But a passing Navy captain ordered: "Take that down; it promotes dissension among the services." The display came down.

Mused Author Andrews: "Andrews has been accused of being pro-Navy; but is the Navy pro-Andrews?"

I WAS DOWN TO 11 POINTS MYSELF

Somebody ought to write some music to fit the familiar chorus: "It was the deadest card in the deck—how was I to know he needed it for a gin?"

1 HIT, 1 ERROR

Eleanor Lut of Broadwater, Md., says she wishes that folks who do the vocals on popular songs over the radio would pronounce the words a bit more carefully.

Eleanor's little brother, Skippy, has been marching around the house lately singing: "The Old Mashed Potatoes from the Far-Away Hills."

PRETTY CUTE, EH?

I reported recently that the late Congressman Sol Bloom did not accept the story that George Washington had thrown a dollar across the Rappahannock.

My item said that Mr. Bloom doubted that Washington had ever thrown a coin of any kind over any body of water. But an old subscriber from the Kennedy Warren protests:

"With all due respect to Congressman Bloom, didn't General Washington throw a sovereign across the Atlantic?"

McCarthy Draws Truman Blast

By Drew Pearson

President Truman really poured it on mud-slinging Senator Joe McCarthy in a long-distance phone conference from Key West with congressional leaders in Washington this week.

McCarthy

"What's wrong with that fellow, anyway," exploded Truman. "Doesn't he know that he is doing irreparable harm to his Government by all this loose talk?"

The President commented that McCarthy's unsupported charges that the State Department is "loaded with pro-Communists" already had seriously undermined the morale, and perhaps the efficiency, of this vital branch of the Government.

"Think of the great numbers of loyal personnel in the department who have given their whole lives to their Government," he said, "and think what McCarthy has done to the spirit of these people. It wouldn't surprise me if many of them were thinking of resigning. They probably figure that they'll be next on McCarthy's list and they don't want to have their families dragged through such an ordeal."

The effects of McCarthy's character assassination and reckless rantings were even more damaging on United States prestige abroad, Truman emphasized, particularly in western Europe, where we must keep our heads high in the cold war with Russia.

McCarthy has played right into the hands of Russian propagandists who are doing everything to sell their satellites and other western European countries the idea that the United States is divided against itself, the President declared.

He added that McCarthy had made the job of our foreign diplomats "doubly difficult," because they are afraid to be seen talking to anyone who might be accused of pro-Communist leanings in France, Italy and other countries, even in the course of their duties.

As a result, the President said, our embassies and legations in some countries had become "virtually isolated" and our foreign-service personnel in these places seriously demoralized.

Things Most People Don't Know About "Commies" in Government. Chairman of the State Department's Loyalty Review Board, charged with weeding out Communists, is a Republican—Gen. Conrad Snow of New Hampshire. He was appointed on the recommendation of GOP Senator Styles Bridges, a backstage brain-truster for Senator McCarthy's attacks . . . Chairman of the top Loyalty Review Board also is a Republican, Seth Richardson, who served under Hoover. Most of the lawyers under him are also Republican. Neither Truman nor anyone else can overrule them—only the courts . . . Actually, Acheson has fired more State Department employes than any other Secretary of State.

McCarthy's attacks have been almost as vitriolic as Moscow's. Here is its latest diatribe against Acheson: "This Fascist-like diplomat . . . a truly incorrigible liar . . . swindler . . . a hired lackey of the instigators of war who spent his scanty brains to belie truth, freedom and peace . . . Acheson's true masters are the banks and concerns who dream of looting the globe" . . . Acheson's family is worried over his terrific strain. He is wondering whether he has not become a liability, that for the good of United States foreign policy he should resign.

Writes another Secretary of State, Henry L. Stimson, in the Hoover Cabinet, about Senator McCarthy: "The man who seeks to gain political advantage from personal attack on a Secretary of State is a man who seeks political advantage from damage to his country . . . This is no time to let the noisy antics of a few upset the steady purposes of our country or distract our leaders from their proper tasks."

Harassed over flying saucers, the Air Force now refers queries to the first chapter of the Prophet Ezekiel, who saw a living wheel in the heavens. Airmen are not arguing with Ezekiel and cast no doubt upon what he saw. But they do cast doubt on modern prophets. They say they have tracked down every flying-saucer report, and there ain't no such animal . . . The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, slightly gleeful at presidential seasickness, reminds him: "Mr. President, modern streamliners, manned by competent union crews, run daily between Washington and Florida. And no little brown pills are required" . . . But the trainmen overlook one thing. The Navy paid the bill. Had he gone to Florida by train, he would have had to pay the bill . . . Two great Bible fans are fighting for the Republican senatorial nomination in New Hampshire. Senator Charles Tobey and Challenger Wes Powell are doing their best to outquote each other . . . Bradley Nash has written a book on Herbert Hoover's Government reforms—"A Hook in Leviathan."

One of the best men in Government resigned the other day—Tracy Voorhees, Undersecretary of the Army. A Republican. Truman could have kept him on by promoting him to be Secretary of the Army, a post to be vacant when Gordon Gray becomes president of North Carolina University. But despite the urge for a bipartisan policy, Truman hasn't been appointing many Republicans lately.

Correction: Carrol French, mentioned in a recent column as being with Standard Oil of New Jersey, is no longer with that concern. French was the gent who helped tell business leaders how to propagandize with labor through pay slips.

DINNER from the HOME FREEZER

Frozen Food for City Dwellers, Too

By Harriet Jean Anderson

FOOD FREEZING is not new. Country dwellers for years have been enthusiastically verbose about the time-saving, the convenience, the ease, even the money that can be saved by having a freezer in the home. City folk have sighed with envy and said, "Yes, it must be wonderful, but of course you have a garden."

They aren't sighing any more. Food freezing is hitting the city apartments as rapidly as canasta hit card tables.

What has brought this about? There are several factors that together have given impetus to the use of frozen foods.

More women than ever are working today in offices throughout the country. That means that they are having less and less time to devote to meal preparation. They eagerly seize every mechanical means to shorten kitchen hours. Women today want more time for better living.

For City or Country

TO MEET this demand, equipment manufacturers are ever working to design new and better labor-saving equipment that can be adapted to a city or country home. The combination refrigerator-freezer has introduced more and more homemakers to the use of commercially-frozen foods as well as to the freezing of their own fresh and cooked foods. Since these freezing compartments will hold from 50 to 75 pounds of frozen foods in addition to ice cubes, depending upon the refrigerator size, there is plenty of space for a small family to use food freezing as a convenient time and money-saving feature.

Home equipment buyers report that the small-sized freezers—the three, four, and six-cubic-foot size holding from 100 to 200 pounds of frozen foods, are gaining rapid acceptance for city apartments. Many chest-style models have flat working surfaces that do double duty. The cabinet type of freezer that looks like a refrigerator takes up little floor space, has foods easily accessible. And freezers go anywhere—we have seen the chest type even in the living room, neatly camouflaged in a bar set-up.

Frozen Food Prices Cut

HOW CAN the city homemaker best use her freezer or freezing section? A great deal will depend upon the size and the needs of the family.

Many families may want to use their freezer space exclusively for the storage of commercially frozen foods. To spur sales, frozen food distributors occasionally have a "Stock Your Home Freezer Month," giving homemakers an opportunity of buying a variety of frozen foods in quantity lots at reduced prices. Many wholesale freezing and locker companies offer low-cost buys in frozen foods and some grocers are operating a frozen food service with weekly deliveries.

These same homemakers may use the freezer space in their refrigerator or small-sized freezer for the freezing of left-overs as a means of saving money.

Oh, Yes, Something CAN Be Done About Weather!

By Conrad P. Harness

THE fellow who said "nothing can be done about the weather" is now chewing his words. The air conditioning industry is furnishing the salt and pepper.

Although the Washington Board of Trade has never boasted of our humid summers, they're famed from Flatbush to Foggy Bottom. And it's only a scant three months from now until you can use your shirt tail for a handkerchief.

The air conditioning industry has risen to the challenge. For a few bucks down and a few more each month, you can have a unit installed in your own room, home or apartment.

The large number of people doing just that, plus stores, office buildings, hotels and other commercial installations, leads the industry to believe 1950 will be its best year.

Sales of most individual room air conditioning units start at $250. Existing homes can be completely air-conditioned by using units in connection with duct work serving as outlets for warm air heating systems. Several Washington firms specialize in this work. A typical price for a six-room house would be around $1300 and up.

Bulk of sales are made to commercial users. Professional men, such doctors, lawyers, dentists and architects have proven another fertile field. Industry spokesmen predict, however, that 35 percent of future sales will be made to home owners.

Washington is rapidly becoming the most "air conditioned mined" city in the Nation, according to T. C. Meeker, general manager of the air conditioning division of Griffith-Consumers Co.

Meeker pointed out that greater production of room units has produced lower price tags, opening up new markets in homes and offices.

The Building Owners and Managers Association, a local group of men who run the city's "skyscrapers," has repeatedly recommended air conditioning old structures as a means to compete with newer and better equipped postwar buildings.

The vast majority of new office buildings boast the magic words "completely air conditioned" in their advertising lures for clients. Costs run up into the thousands of dollars and each job is scientifically studied to achieve the best results.

Home air conditioning units are di-

Buy Best Foods, Then Package Them Properly

By Dorothea Cruger

YOU CAN'T get more out of it than you put into it!

That old adage is just as true about home freezers as it is about life. The housewife who buys inferior food, wraps a few folds of waxed paper around it, and drops it into her icy pantry expecting to get appetizing results must believe in miracles.

Home freezing is a wonderful thing, but it can't perform those miracles. However, by keeping a few common-sense rules in mind, anyone can get better meals, in less time, and with less trouble, with the help of a home freezer. The things to remember are: First, buy food of good quality. And second, package it properly.

It's impossible to overstate the importance of proper packaging, for without it, the best food will be wasted. Fortunately, a wide variety of containers and wrapping are available that make it possible to safely store anything from last Sunday's roast to that bumper crop of strawberries.

Here are a few tips to keep in mind about the packaging of your food for freezing:

1—The wrapper or container must be moisture-vapor proof; that is, keep out as much air as possible. It must be tightly sealed, whether by heat, as with an iron, or by taping.

2—It must be durable and keep its shape during freezing and storage.

School Lunch Ready At a Lift of the Lid

By Connie Zatkovick

THIS "ice age" is a nice age for kids. Mrs. William Lovelace of Arlington has two sons, 13 and 6, who think the home freezer is "plenty all right." In the morning all they have to do is lift the lid of the home freezer and select their frozen lunch (prepared in advance by Mrs. Lovelace).

"It is so handy in storing bread, eight or nine loaves at a time . . . and when the Good Humor man shows up in the block, I just buy a raft of them . . . and, you can imagine, they don't stay there long."

Other mothers feel the same way about the convenience of storing lunches.

School box lunches never used to be fun to make, between stirring the oatmeal for breakfast and calling "time to get up." Even making them the evening before wasn't too satisfactory—bread never tasted fresh and the filling often dried out.

Home freezers have changed all that. Now, at leisure you can plan a variety of sandwiches, "surprise" salads, or some stewed or fresh fruit.

Good Fillings

MEAT, cheese and fish, make good sandwich fillings. Sliced cooked meats, chicken, meatloaf, jelly-peanut butter, egg salad and even baked bean sandwiches are tasty. All sandwich fillings should be thoroughly chilled before being used and the bread spread with butter. Wrapping the sandwiches in vapor-moisture-proof paper is the trick that keeps them fresh for months.

Orange juice, white or chocolate milk and other fruit juices, thawed out by the noon lunch hour, will taste mighty good with ham salad sandwiches on whole-wheat plus jelly roll desert.

The box lunch idea has all kinds of possibilities: The working man's lunch can be twice as large as the school edition. Bigger sandwiches—corned beef, mustard on rye, perhaps cheese with pimento and bacon, a small carton of apple sauce and some strawberry pie for desert.

Ready for Surprises

IMPROMPTU picnics in the country are easier to plan for when you know the frozen lunches can be made beforehand. By double wrapping the boxes in newspaper, they will defrost slowly. About 5 hours from the time you board the jalopy, they'll be just right to eat.

When mother feels the need for visiting relatives in Paducah, she need no longer worry about her starvin' family. Complete lunches and dinner can be left in the freezer—a carton of chicken ala king would be good. If necessary, instruction can be pinned in plain view.

Surprise parties, and drop-in affairs are no cause for harassment with frozen sandwiches, ice cream and cakes stored in the deep freeze.

Party sandwiches can be "fussed over" ages in advance of the actual party. There are too many other things to do just before the guests arrive.

Shrimp-topped open sandwiches, checkerboard ones with pink and green cream cheese fillings, or rolled yellow cheese filling on whole wheat bread fresh from the freezer, are ready to serve in 20 minutes.

In the meantime, you can enjoy the party. That's something most hostesses, in pre-home-freezer days, had to be a genius, with one foot in the kitchen, to manage. Now it's easy to enjoy the guests and let the home freezer do the rest.

'Treasure Chest' Will Require Defrosting About Once a Year

By Lucia Brown

WHEN THE frost is on the freezer—more than half an inch of it—it's time to take action!

Defrosting your hope chest of frozen foods is as important as defrosting an ordinary refrigerator, says Dr. Earl McCracken of the Department of Agriculture. The way you go about it differs, however.

Once a year is usually often enough to defrost, Dr. McCracken concludes after extensive research on the subject. He says, however, that if surroundings are humid or the door is frequently opened, you may have to do the job two or three times a year. Try to defrost when relatively little food is in the box, he adds.

"First, remove frost unmixed with ice by scraping when the freezer is in full operation," says Dr. McCracken. "If the freezer is not too full, move food packages from one part to another as you work, rather than taking them out.

"Use special scraping tools sold for the purpose, or a broad, stiff spatula, a putty knife or sharp-edged wooden paddle. Catch frost on papers, cardboards or cloths as it is scraped from vertical dividers and walls. Or collect it from the bottom with dustpan and whiskbroom. If pans and broom are kept cold, frost will not melt from contact with them.

Scrape the Frost

"IF ICE is mixed with the frost or a complete cleaning job is needed, remove food packages and disconnect the freezer. Put the food packages on trays or in baskets that have been well-cooled in the freezer. Pile packages compactly and cover with chilled blankets, newspapers, or other insulating material.

"Next, scrape as much frost as possible from the surfaces, to lessen need for mopping up melted ice. If the freezer has a drain, speed melting by running cold water over refrigerated surfaces. Don't use hot water because this would cause difficulty when starting the compressor again.

"Speed defrosting by removing loosened ice from the surface. An electric fan can help melt the ice if placed so that it blows room air into the freezer or cold air out. If the freezer is upright, set the fan on the floor or a chair,

Freezer-Packing Vegetables in Brine

Asparagus, cauliflower, broccoli and other vegetables which tend to get too soft and to lose their shape when blanched are often freezer-packed in a 2 percent brine.

This brine is prepared by dissolving a level teaspoon of salt in one cup of cold water, or four level teaspoons of salt per quart of water. A stronger brine solution may make the vegetable tough and may be more salty than is desired.

Not All Pie Need Be in the Sky

ALL SORTS of delectable baked goods can be stored away in the home freezer, then taken out and served on short notice if unexpected company turns up.

Rolls and biscuits can be frozen before or after freezing, and you can have rolls on the table in the time it takes to heat and thaw them. That's about 15 minutes in a slow to moderate oven. If raw yeast rolls are taken from the freezer, however, you have to allow time for them to thaw, rise, and bake.

Such taste-tempting bits of fluff as cream puffs and jelly rolls (filled or unfilled) may be stored away in the freezer. They must be carefully wrapped, and sheltered by cartons. They're good if you thaw them in the refrigerator, then serve with the filling still frozen a bit.

As for pie, you can freeze that either baked or unbaked, too. Best results are obtained with two-crust fruit pies, for the crust helps protect the filling from the air. If the pie is to be frozen unbaked, the slashes and vents should not be cut in the top crust until baking time. The solid top crust will afford better protection from air during storage. Seal edge of crust carefully to prevent leakage during baking.

Pie—like all other baked goods—should be thoroughly cooled before packaging for the freezer. Place in moisture-proof packaging then slip into a carton. It may be easier to freeze a pie and then wrap. However, wrapping should follow freezing immediately.

A pie baked before freezing may be thawed at room temperature or in the oven with the temperature at 250 degrees.

To bake a frozen pie, there are those that hold they are better thawed and then baked. To bake it in the frozen state, add about 10 minutes to the baking time.

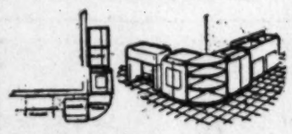
Baked foods do not keep indefinitely. Experts give the following table:

Bread, rolls, baked, 12 months; unbaked, one month.

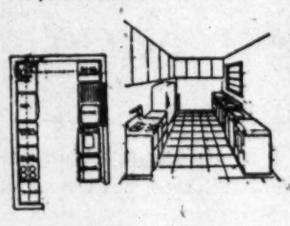
Muffins, baked, six months; unbaked, two weeks.

Butter cakes, cupcakes, baked, six months; unbaked, two weeks.

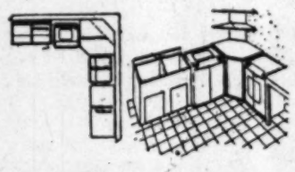
Placing the Equipment



LAYOUT by Whirlpool Equipment firm for installation of washer, dryer and ironer around a corner



A MINIMUM space plan combines kitchen and laundry by placing automatics at one end of room



CORNER grouping that provides shelves for storage needs and necessary space for sorting

WHERE to put the home freezer is the question householders and architects have asked themselves ever since this highly pleasing and economic boon to good living was born. Answers range from an entire room near the kitchen, that might include the automatic washer or sewing needs, as well as the washing machine, to a hallway near the bedrooms and bath.

The choice of location is wide because automatics require little floor space. In the case of the washer, automatics do away with the need for twin laundry tubs as well as the need to allow for overflowing soapsuds and splashing water. When teamed with a dryer, the location choice is even wider because dryers eliminate the trip to the clothesline. A location near the bathroom makes good sense because laundry usually is collected and put away in the bedroom-bath area. Sorting space is always needed.

The accompanying sketches offer suggestions for placing the home laundry in or near kitchens while keeping it apart from food preparation areas.

Keep Your Cake And Eat It, Too

Cakes, iced or un-iced, will keep beautifully in either your home freezer or freezing compartment, even angel food cakes. Freezing causes no noticeable loss of moisture. Thaw frozen cakes without removing the cellophane wrappings; a large cake, iced, may take several hours to thaw at room temperature, but when the cellophane is removed, you will have a quality product.

DEVIL'S FOOD CAKE

2 cups granulated sugar
½ cup cocoa
5 egg yolks
2½ cups sifted cake flour
1/3 teaspoon salt
1 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon soda in 1 tablespoon boiling water
1 teaspoon vanilla
5 egg whites

Cream butter and sugar, add cocoa and beaten egg yolks; add flour, salt and buttermilk alternately. Add vanilla and then soda dissolved in the boiling water. Fold in the beaten egg whites. Bake in two 9-inch round layer cake pans 1½ inches deep. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 45 to 50 minutes.

WHITE CAKE

2¼ cups sugar
3¾ cups sifted cake flour
1½ cups milk
6 egg whites
1½ teaspoons flavoring
4½ teaspoons baking powder

Cream shortening and add sugar gradually. Cream well. Add alternately 3½ cups flour and 1½ cups milk. Add flavoring and beat well. Fold in beaten egg whites. Last fold in ¼ cup of flour sifted with 4½ teaspoons baking powder. Bake in two 7¼-inch by 11-inch layer cake pans, 375 degrees F. for 30 to 35 minutes on third lowest guide.

Answers

Q—How about the freezing of smoked ham and bacon?

A—If ham and bacon are to be kept for several weeks or longer, they will keep better frozen than by any other method. Meats which have a large amount of fat have a tendency to rancidity, thus limiting the storage period.

Because smoked meats also have a tendency to dry out, make sure that ham or bacon are properly wrapped and packaged to prevent undesirable drying during freezing and storage. Package in quantities that will be used at one time and eliminate the necessity of defrosting more than is needed.

Q—Do you allow meats to thaw before cooking?

A—Acceptable cooking results may be obtained either way. If meat is allowed to thaw, cooking time can be judged more accurately; also large roasts and thick steaks cook more uniformly if allowed to thaw. Meat that is to be thawed may be placed on the shelf of your household refrigerator without removing the wrapping.

Q—How long will ground beef keep?

A—Ground beef of good quality unseasoned will keep for one year when stored at a holding temperature of zero Fahrenheit or below. One and two-pound-size packages prove convenient for the average-size family.

Q—Should butter be stored in the original carton?

A—It may be stored in the original carton if it is overwrapped with moisture-proof material. The paper in which butter is wrapped and the carton do not give the butter sufficient protection for freezing and storing at zero Fahrenheit.

Q—How should I wrap cheese for freezing?

A—Cheese should be wrapped in moisture-vaporproof material. It is best to cut the cheese into desired amounts before freezing. In this way you can defrost just the amount you want for serving at one time.

Q—Can tomatoes be frozen?

A—Fresh tomatoes, whole or sliced, are not usually frozen because of their high water content. Stewed tomatoes or tomato juice are very acceptable frozen.

Q—How long will fruits keep in my freezer?

A—Fruits will keep for one year in your freezer when a temperature of zero Fahrenheit or below is maintained. This statement presupposes a quality product, properly prepared, packaged and frozen immediately.

Q—How do you defrost fruits for serving?

A—It is best to place cartons unopened in the household refrigerator for defrosting.

Q—Should frozen fruits be served before they are completely defrosted?

A—Frozen dessert fruits are best in flavor and appearance when they are only partially defrosted.

Q—Should fryers be disjointed or can they be frozen whole?

A—Fryers may be packaged for freezing either whole or disjointed. However, a disjointed fryer requires less storage space in your freezer. Also, if you are preparing dinner in a hurry or on short notice, a disjointed fryer can be fried just as soon as it is defrosted sufficiently to separate the pieces.

Ten Reasons for Owning A Freezer

THE KANSAS STATE College of Agriculture once summed up for Kansans the following advantages of a home freezer:

1—Frozen home-produced foods are more palatable than home-canned or cured products.

2—Preserving food by freezing involves less labor.

3—There is less spoilage of food if it is preserved by freezing.

4—Freezing makes possible an improved diet because it preserves the fresh taste and vitamin content of foods.

5—Food is preserved without being overcooked.

6—Freezing permits wider latitude in selecting the time to slaughter farm animals or to dress poultry because meat can be frozen at any time of year.

7—Home freezers are more convenient than commercial frozen food lockers.

8—Food can be taken conveniently out of freezers in quantities needed.

Servel all Year GAS AIR CONDITIONING

COOLING or HEATING through a single unit!

IN SUMMER

No matter how unbearable the humidity outdoors, how high the temperature — indoors your home will be as cool and fresh as a mountain cabin. You'll enjoy your meals, your recreation, your sleep as never before. The Servel unit circulates properly refrigerated air that's filtered and dehumidified . . . free from dust, insects, and pollen!

IN WINTER

You can ignore bitter winds and sleet beating against your window. Your Servel unit will keep you blissfully, effortlessly, warm and comfortable. No fires to fix, no ashes to take out. Just flick the Selectrol switch, and you enjoy the circulation of filtered-clean, warmed air, with just the right amount of moisture added.

THE YEAR 'ROUND

Through every season your home is clean, safe, healthy. Selective air circulation drives out stale, stagnant air and dust, assures a steady stream of clean, live air without drafts. Windows can be kept closed against outside noises, dirt — prevent damage from unexpected storms. Oversize air filters remove all trace of dust. Cleaning and redecorating costs are reduced.

Chart Indicates Number Of Containers Needed

A DETAILED chart to guide the housewife in determining the number of containers needed for freezing fruits and vegetables in quantities is contained in the booklet, "Round Nested Paper Containers for Home and Locker Freezing," issued by the Field Research Division of the Paper Cup and Container Institute.

The chart lists the approximate number of pint-sized round nested containers needed for 22 products. For instance, to freeze a bushel of sliced apples, from 40 to 48 containers are required, 35 to 40 for a bushel of apricots, 20 to 24 for a bushel of cut asparagus and 30 to 40 for a bushel of snap beans.

Variations are often surprising. Twenty-four quarts of blackberries and raspberries will require 40 to 45 containers. A similar quantity of sliced strawberries can be frozen in 30 to 32. A peck of cranberries requires 16 containers and a bushel of corn (kernel), 16 to 24.

Because of the small loss in cleaning, a bushel of plums requires the most of any fruits—50 to 55 containers. A bushel of greens can be stored away in 12 to 16 and a bushel of peas, in pods, will shell out enough to fill the same number.

Labeling on the container lids is advised, although a pencil or brush pen can be used to letter the waxed sides. Including the date and style of pack, such as "Strawberries, dry sugar, 6-23-49," is suggested. Other tips deal with storing and filling, and explain how the round shape and tapered size permit free air circulation and thus speeds the freezing process. Too, the round, nested containers pack and fill easily, don't leak, and support heavy objects such as frozen meat on their surfaces.

The booklets are available upon request from the Field Research Division, 49 W. 46th st., New York 19, N. Y.

Freeze Eggs Each Summer When Prices Sag

EGGS illustrate the economy of owning a home freezer. The housewife can wait until prices are low, usually in April when production is at its height, then stash away enough to last until the time when prices go up again.

Here are the three freezing methods tested by the homemaking specialists of the General Electric Consumers Institute, which can be used.

Mixing Whole Eggs—Break the eggs into a bowl. Then break the yolks and mix them (together with the whites) with one teaspoon of salt to one cup of eggs. These can be used in scrambled eggs. If you prefer whole eggs which are to be used for custards and other sweetened products, add one tablespoon of sugar, corn syrup or honey to one cup of eggs.

Freeze Egg Whites—An economical note is to freeze whites of eggs now before prices rise in the summer months when angel food cakes head the request list. The whites are separated from the yolks and frozen without mixing—and without salt or sugar.

Leftover Yolks—Leftover yolks can be used right now, or they can be frozen for later in the year use in mayonnaise, custards and baked products. They should be broken and mixed thoroughly with two tablespoons of sugar, honey or corn syrup, or one teaspoon of salt to one cup of yolks.

Packaging—The prepared eggs in liquid form, mixed with the salt or sweetening, should be placed in moisture-vapor-proof containers for freezing, proportioned to the needs of the homemaker. For instance, the whites can be divided into several portions, each enough for one angel food cake. Another container may hold enough whites for a batch of meringues. Still others may be packed with sufficient whole eggs to make two, four, six or more servings of scrambled eggs.

Eggs packaged in this way save the homemaker waste, when it comes to serving large or small groups of people.

Label—The packages should be clearly labeled to show whether salt or sugar was added.

Cooking—When using frozen eggs in cooking, the salt or sugar required in the recipe should be reduced.

It Should Last 10 Years

HOW long will a home freezer last? A conservative answer is 10 years, says Earl McCracken, physicist for the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture. But no one can predict accurately how long a freezer should last because freezers have not been in use enough years to get average-life figures.

Dr. McCracken uses the 10-year figure in computing the costs of operating a freezer at home. But some freezer experts and manufacturers count on 12½, 15 and even more years for the life of freezers.

Home freezers now on the market should be expected to last longer than those made a few years ago because many of the faults of the earlier models are being and have been corrected.

'Papa' of Air-Conditioning Had Tilt With Fractions

By Robert Jordan

WHEN WILLIS H. CARRIER, "the father of air-conditioning, was a youngster in school a few years before the turn of the century, fractions frustrated him.

So his mother—wise soul—sent him to the cellar for some apples. She told him to cut them into halves, quarters and eighths. He learned fractions.

That was in 1885, when Carrier was 9. He moved on to Cornell University subsequently, where the arithmetical rigors of his engineering studies went the way of the fractions. In 1902, a year after his graduation, he came up with an idea that resulted in air conditioning.

MR. CARRIER

Today, Dr. Carrier is the man you can thank, along in August, say, when you gaze out of your air-conditioned home or office at the shimmering heat waves bouncing from the soggy asphalt.

Dr. Carrier's story and that of the young and not-too-well-known industry are virtually the same. Not only did he think up the idea—he's been around ever since developing it.

For all its widespread use, air-conditioning is a scientific boon that is easily taken for granted. "The service it renders is service unseen," explains Cloud Wampler, president of the Carrier Corp.

This service permits gold miners in the Morovello mine, in Brazil, to work 8000 feet below the surface at 90 degrees. Without air conditioning, the rock temperature at that level is 140 degrees.

Or take the stratocruisers flying high in the heavens: air conditioning counteracts the heat which results from the compression of air necessary for pressurized cabins.

Holds 40 Patents

DR. CARRIER holds more than 40 patents in air conditioning and refrigeration. They work "unseen" in more than 200 different industries. That'll give you some idea of what has happened to an idea a young engineer had 48 years ago.

Dr. Carrier was born November 26, 1876, near Angola, N. Y. He was educated at Angola and Buffalo and took a mechanical engineering degree from Cornell. He began his career with the Buffalo Forge Co. A little more than a year later he completed the original design of the world's first scientific air-conditioning system.

After that, in 1904, he patented "an apparatus for treating air"—which permitted drying air with water. Four years later, as a subsidiary of the Buffalo Forge Co., Carrier Air Conditioning Corp. of America was formed.

In 1911, with his work becoming internationally known, Dr. Carrier made public his rational psychometric formulae. It continues today as the basis for all fundamental calculations in the air-conditioning industry.

Carrier Engineering Corp. was formed in 1915 with 38 employes. It became Carrier Corp. 15 years later. More than 4000 persons are employed by it now, reports President Wampler.

They turn out, for instance, things like the Carrier centrifugal compressor, a single unit of which produces a cooling effect equal to the melting of 2,400,000 pounds of ice in 24 hours. Twelve centrifugals are installed at the Pentagon.

Dr. Carrier became chairman emeritus of the corporation in 1948. In less than half a century, machines and systems he designed have been installed around the world in factories, homes, offices and stores; in hospitals, hotels, skyscrapers; in airplanes and mines, and in ships.

He is, in the air-conditioning industry, "the chief."

Nero Used Snow

Man's Effort To Keep Cool A Long Story

MANY TALES have been written about how men in early days sought to protect themselves from the heat of summer.

The Romans are said to have brought snow from the mountains in a crude attempt to cool their homes. Emperor Nero packed his huge wine cellars with snow for chilling purposes.

In the eighth century, Caliph Mahdi of Baghdad reportedly had his summer residence built with double walls between which was packed snow delivered by fast camel trains.

Of course, there were always fans in the hands of slaves. And we are told that the early Egyptians employed ingenious ventilating devices, that the Italians endeavored to pipe cool air from caves and grottoes into their palaces, and that in India, potentates made use of evaporative cooling during periods when the dry monsoons blew for months at a time. Mats, saturated with water, were hung over the windows, and the air blowing through them evaporated the moisture and lowered the temperature of the air.

—From an address by Cloud Wampler delivered during the "1949 Syracuse Dinner" of The Newcomen Society of England.

Home Unit Costs Less to Operate

Cost of operation of a home freezer has been shown to run about half that of renting a commercial freezer plant locker.

In one case cited, the commercial locker cost about 15 cents per cubic foot a month, while the home unit cost 7½ cents a cubic foot a month.

Although this is a one-sided comparison, because it does not include the initial cost of a home freezer, most owners have found extra opportunities for saving with a home unit actually make it cheaper all around.

You Can Do Something About Weather

vided roughly into two groups: room coolers and house coolers. The former are usually attached to the window sill and cool one or more rooms. The house cooler is located in the basement, and is a smaller edition of the units which cool commercial stores, through heating ducts.

Room coolers are usually ½, ¾ or one horsepower units. Some stores give a year's free servicing. Many firms, such as Washington Refrigeration Co., give a 5-year warranty covering the refrigeration system of their York air conditioners.

For those homemakers wishing details as to size: taking the York as an example, the one-half horsepower unit is 26 by 26 by 14½ inches high. It projects from the window sill into the room about 10½ inches.

The three-quarter horsepower unit is 34 inches wide, 26 deep and 14½ high. It projects into the room about 17 inches from the window.

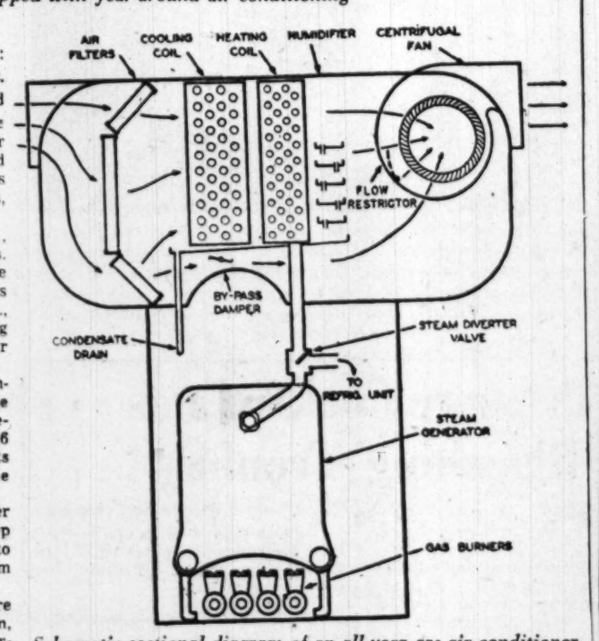
A large unit to power an entire house takes up much more room, of course. The Chrysler Airtemp is nearly always located in the basement near the furnace unit, where it can be connected directly into the duct work. It measures 19 inches deep, 3 feet wide and 5 feet high.

Here are the benefits you can rightfully expect from any air conditioning unit or system, according to local authorities:

1. Cooling, 2. Filtering to remove pollen, dust and lint, 3. Circulating air, 4. Dehumidifying action to keep the air dry and eliminating "sticky" days, 5. Ventilating by drawing fresh air inside.

Some firms sell combination heating and air conditioning units for all year comfort. They work on thermostatic controls. Set the thermostat at the desired figure and forget it.

It is a very elastic rule of thumb that a small one-half horse power unit can cool an area of 285 square feet. Tastet & Heigham, who sell Frigidaire units, say their one horsepower unit can cool an area of about 500 square feet.



Schematic sectional diagram of an all-year gas air conditioner

Operating costs are also variable. One local authority estimated room conditioner operating costs at 1¼ cents per hour for the one-half horsepower unit, and 1¾ cents for the three-quarter horsepower unit. He pointed out that thermostatic controls kept down operating hours to a minimum.

And, he added, home electrical rates are lower here than rates for commercial properties.

Joseph A. Silver, of Wm. Bornstein & Son, Inc., which sell the Chrysler Airtemp line, said the unit could bring down an outside temperature of 95 degrees as much as 15 degrees.

Units operate best, Silver said, when all windows and doors are closed. Installation is fairly simple for most jobs, with two days enough to complete most units.

Air conditioning units, Silver added, can be financed under terms of the Federal Housing Administration's Title One program for small loans up to $2500. In some cases no cash down payment is required.

Costs of operating all year around units, such as Servel All-Year Gas Air Conditioning, was estimated at about one-half the cost of heating a house in winter, by the Washington Gas Light Co.

The Servel provides summer cooling through a method basically the same as used in the Servel gas refrigerator. A generator-absorber combination is substituted for the compressor in refrigerator units. The refrigeration, refrigerant, water, in conjunction with the absorbent, common salt, is actuated by low-pressure steam to cool the circulated air.

The same ducts are used for both cooling and heating operations.

Installation costs for new structures can be at least partially offset in advance planning by savings on other items. For example, window screens serve no useful purpose, fresh air being circulated through the air conditioner, not through open windows.

And since windows need never be opened in homes using all-year units, many modern homebuilders are installing the fixed-sash type of window, which in addition to being less expensive, is insurance against drafts and dust infiltration.

Also, marked economy can be effected by eliminating the screened porch, which loses its importance when the temperature inside the house constantly remains comfortable.

No Monotony

Cook Food For Party, Days Ahead

HOME meals can be cooked for weeks—or even months—in advance with the aid of a home freezer.

During a lifetime the average woman prepares more than 50,000 meals, according to an article in House Beautiful magazine, which states:

"Any escape from this monotony, no matter how slight, has always been seized upon as manna from heaven. Boiled down to a kernal of truth, a freezer lets you get weeks ahead in your cooking. You can prepare the main dish for three or four meals at once, multiplying the ingredients of the recipe by as many meals as you want to scale.

"You can set up production line methods for making tea sandwiches and hors d'oeuvres. You can prepare the food for a party weeks in advance. You can leave home and never be missed in the kitchen. Or you can arrive home at virtually the last moment and assemble a complete meal from the freezer all ready to serve.

"You get out of the freezer exactly what you put into it. If the recipe used is a poor one, and if the cook is a bad one, then you get an indifferent, unappetizing dish. Freezing merely preserves.

If you are a good cook, using good ingredients with care, feeling, and insight, your frozen cooked foods will be exactly that way, too, assuming you use the proper procedures in packaging, freezing and thawing."

3—It must be easily filled.

4—The wrappings must be of good quality. Don't use makeshift materials, such as "gift" cellophane, or household tape. They are unsuitable for the low temperatures.

5—Don't put more into a container than you can use at one time, since food cannot be refrozen.

6—Allow room for expansion when packaging anything with a high water content, like fruits.

7—Choose containers that don't take up much room, if you're short of space. Round containers permit quicker freezing, and allow air to circulate, but waste far more space than the square and rectangular cartons.

On the Market

THESE are some of the best types of packaging materials on the market today:

Plastic containers, with caps that snap over, and preclude the use of heat sealing. These are easily filled, since they are rigid, and can be used over and over again. Good for fruits and vegetables.

For meats, fish, and poultry laminated paper is excellent. This comes lined with moisture-proof cellophane, and has a quality known as "wet strength," which means it won't get soggy.

Great for leftovers, especially hot soups and other cooked foods, are round containers lined with moisture-proof glassine. These don't have to be sealed.

Newest on the market is a miracle plastic wrap, called pliofilm, with a stretch that makes it conform to the contours of fish or fowl. It is ideal for odd-shaped items, and can also be used for small things like extra pork chops or that leftover doughnut.

And to make all packaging easier is an acetate fiber tape which keeps its adhesive quality at low temperatures, and is very useful for sealing loose items.

Small Packages Help Retain Flavor

HERE are some tips from food specialists working in various State experiment stations, designed to help the person freezing precooked food for the first time.

First, start with food of fine quality and never overcook it; remember, it will require reheating before serving. Handling and preparation must be completely sanitary, because cooked food spoils quicker than uncooked foods.

Don't season cooked foods too highly before freezing; they keep their fresh flavor longer when they're unseasoned. Salt and onions gradually lose flavor in storage; pepper, on the other hand, becomes more pungent.

Cool foods promptly after cooking, before packing them for freezing . . . it's helpful to set the container in cold water. Prompt cooling cuts down the chance for growth of spoilage organisms, and also insures faster freezing.

As for packing, the same moisture-vapor-proof containers used for other frozen foods are right for precooked foods. It's well to put only enough for one-time service in a package. Foods in small packages freeze and thaw faster than in large ones; that helps prevent a warmed-over flavor. Make as solid a pack as possible, leaving only enough space at the top to allow the liquid to expand in freezing. Pieces of cooked meat and poultry stay frozen better if you protect them from the air by covering them with gravy or sauce.

Just how and why these two models got into the picture above, there's no way of knowing. Practically nobody is going to notice the freezer, under the circumstances. Why is it being printed? It just so happens that a two-column picture, of exactly these dimensions, was needed for this particular spot

Here's How To Prepare That Poultry

IT'S A comfortable feeling to have chicken in the freezer, ready for an extra-busy day or a company meal. Since freezing is also good economy for poultry flock owners who have freezer storage, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a picture and direction folder on freezing chickens—from young broilers to stewing hens.

Giving special attention to the stewing hens, which are often good prospects for freezing when they are hearty eaters and lazy egg producers, the Department's Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics has developed a practical method of freezing these big-boned birds.

The raw meaty pieces are packaged separately for freezing. Cooked meat cut off the bony backs, wings, necks, and legs too, if desired, is used to make a hearty creamed chicken for the freezer. With just 30 minutes' preparation for the table, it's ready to serve.

The directions, including the creamed chicken recipe, are featured in the new folder, "Chicken in the Freezer," which may be purchased at 5 cents a copy from Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D. C. Send coin, not stamps. (Do not order from the Department of Agriculture.)

Pressure Cooker Ends 'Blanching' Troubles

PLAN to quick-freeze vegetables this season?

Then here's a tip that'll make that chore of preparing them for freezing easier, faster and safer—use your pressure cooker!

Vegetables prepared in a pressure cooker will retain a maximum amount of natural minerals, vitamins and, because of the extra speed of pressure cooking, valuable time and fuel are saved.

Vegetables must be "blanched," or scalded, to decrease the action of enzymes before they can be successfully quick-frozen..

Although these same enzymes—present in all living matter—help in the growth and ripening of vegetables, once a vegetable has reached maturity and been harvested, unless their action is slowed, enzymes cause the loss of color, flavor and vitamins.

Old-fashioned techniques of blanching or precooking vegetables prior to freezing generally call for the use of large quantities of boiling water or scalding steam. Then vegetables are immersed in iced water just before packaging.

More Uniformity

SINCE both operations involve putting the vegetables in direct contact with large amounts of water, excessive "leaching," or watering-off of valuable minerals and vitamins, occurred. Too, timing was difficult to control, and excessive spoilage either through over or undercooking was common.

While use of a pressure cooker will not improve the quality of a vegetable if it is poor to begin with, pressure cooking will eliminate the difficulties in "blanching" and will result in more uniform frozen foods. By using a pressure type cooker, direct contact of the vegetable being prepared for freezing with flavor-cutting water will be minimized, because only live steam is allowed to come in contact with it during cooking.

Proper directions for pressure processing any of the vegetables named below for freezing are as follows: Wash and prepare vegetables by slicing, dicing or cubing. Place two cups of water in the pressure cooker, bring it to a boil. Place vegetables in colander pan, place on cooking rack. Close pressure cooker, exhaust all air and time according to the table below.

"Blanching" completed, reduce pressure in the cooker slowly by opening the petcock gradually until the indicator registers zero. Place vegetables in shallow pans floated on ice water until thoroughly cooled. Package and freeze at once.

Defrost It Once a Year

"If the freezer opens on top, the fan may be placed on the bottom of the compartment and tilted upward slightly to blow against a side wall. Or the fan may be put on the freezer and tilted down to blow into it.

"While ice and frost melt, wipe up the water with cloths and clean the nonrefrigerated surfaces of the freezer. When defrosting is done and the freezer clean, connect the freezer and let it run half an hour or so to lower the temperature somewhat before replacing the food.

"When returning the food to the freezer, take time to make an inventory of the packages. It is a good opportunity to bring older packages to the fore and mark them plainly for first use."

Keep Types Separate

One good way to improve efficiency in the use of a food freezer is to separate different types of food and store them in sections of the unit.

A meal thus can be planned section by section without handling too many packages and without keeping the freezer open more than a few minutes at a time. Naturally, the less the unit is open, the more economical its operation.

Paint Labels In Fast Ink

LABEL your canned goods and packages of food that go into the deep freeze with a Flo-master Fountnbrush. It writes on anything. You'll find this pen greatly improved over earlier makes because chemists have solved the problem of fading inks. Both transparent and semi-opaque inks come in a number of colors: red, orange, yellow, green, blue, purple, brown, black. In addition, the semi-opaque has white and silver. All are permanent and you will need a special cleanser if you want to change markings.

Avoid Bruised, Bitten Vegetables

IN SELECTING vegetables for the freezer, choose only the best, youngest and tenderest. Avoid those which show evidence of insect bites, rust or bruises.

To freeze beans, sort, wash carefully and thoroughly. Remove ends and cut into inch lengths. Frenching is not advised, since the additional cutting causes loss of flavor and food value. Scald beans in boiling water for three minutes. Cool immediately and quickly in iced water or very cold running water. Drain thoroughly. Pack into containers. Heat-seal and freeze at once.

Wax Beans—Proceed as in above, scald just two minutes in boiling water.

Beets—Select young tender beets. Remove tops and scrub well. Cook in boiling salted water until tender. Cool thoroughly, remove skins, slice or dice. Package. Heat-seal, freeze.

Broccoli—Wash thoroughly in cold running water. Let stand 15 minutes in lukewarm water. Wash again in cold running water. Separate head into pieces not thicker than 1 inch and not longer than 5 or 6 inches. Separate into small, medium and large for blanching.

Water blanch by putting broccoli into a basket and holding it in boiling salted water three minutes for small heads, four minutes for medium, five minutes for large. Chill in running cold water four to five minutes. Package, freeze.

Carrots—Select only small, young carrots. Wash and scrape. If very small, freeze whole. Or, slice in ¼-inch slices or in lengthwise strips. Scald in boiling water three minutes. Cool immediately in ice water. Package, seal and freeze.

Peas—Shell out a quantity before starting to blanch; do not wash after peas are shelled. Discard those that are starchy. Water blanch in boiling water, 45 seconds for small peas; 60 seconds for large. Chill in running cold water for three minutes. Package, heat-seal and freeze.

Peppers—Wash peppers, trimming out stems and seeds. They may be frozen in halves, or cut in slices. Blanch in boiling water two minutes for slices, three minutes for halves. Chill in running cold water. Package, heat-seal and freeze.

Summer Squash—Select young squash. Wash carefully and cut in ½-inch slices. Scald in boiling water 3½ minutes. Cool immediately and quickly in iced water or in very cold running water. Drain. Package in moisture proof containers. Heat-seal and freeze.

It Comes Partially Stocked

FREIDA YORK of George's Radio & Television Co., is shown placing a "bonus" in a customer's new freezer. As a special Easter promotion, buyers are receiving the following with each unit purchased: Fordhook limas, regular cut beans, cut corn, mixed vegetables, peas, citrusip, dinner rolls (three packages of each) and raspberries, strawberries, peaches and banana cream pie (one package of each), and one ham.

No Favorites, Soup to Nuts

THEY'RE freezing everything from soup to nuts these days—and that statement can be taken literally.

With the use of home freezers and freezer lockers in both town and country steadily increasing, homemakers are finding that practically everything on the menu can be preserved in this way.

The soup is put away in concentrated form, thinned out later for serving. Good quality stock can be frozen and stored for a year, and soup with cooked vegetables for about a month. Nut meats are packaged without chopping, can be kept for a year in good condition in the freezer.

Between these two on the menu are a host of other foods which are more frequently frozen.

Sizes and Shapes

Shape and size of a home freezer to be bought depends a lot on space in the home. Doors in the average house will accommodate a cabinet 30 inches wide. A cabinet that is too long may be difficult to move around corners or down curved stairs.

Buy the Proper Size

TO GET the best returns for the money invested, it is important to determine the proper size of the freezer your family needs.

Home freezers run anywhere from 4 to 18 cubic feet capacity, but it is possible to buy a chest freezer as small as 2½ cubic feet or a big 60-cubic-foot model.

As a rough guide to the right size, an average of 5 or 6 cubic feet for each person in the family is suggested by the Department of Agriculture. But right size depends a great deal on the way the freezer will be used. A city or suburban family, using it mostly for storing commercially frozen food and ice cream, may need only 1 or 2 cubic feet per person, whereas a farm family, freezing much of its yearly supply of produced food, may need 10 to 12 cubic feet per person. A cubic foot holds about 30 to 35 pounds of food.

It is better to overestimate than to underestimate. The trend of demand in both freezers and refrigerators is toward larger sizes because families are coming to appreciate more and more the advantages of refrigerated and frozen storage for food. Moreover, the larger size freezers cost less per cubic foot than the smaller sizes.

Electric consumption by a home freezer varies with its size, use and location in the house. A 10-cubic foot freezer, under average conditions, requires about 90 kilowatt hours a month. This figure multiplied by the electric rate, gives roughly the monthly cost of electricity for the freezer.

'Blanching' Misnomer

The word "blanching" used in connection with preparing vegetables for freezing merely means scalding or precooking. Vegetables which have been blanched actually retain their color better than if this treatment were not given them, although "blanch" unfortunately implies loss of color.

Thaw Poultry Partly

Cut-up poultry may be thawed by placing in running water, while roasters and turkey must be sufficiently thawed to permit stuffing. Complete thawing is not necessary before the birds go into the oven, however.

Ask Guarantee Against Breakdown

Many home freezer manufacturers offer food protection plans or some kind of reimbursement for food losses sustained when a freezer breaks down for any reason. This is a good fact to keep in mind when choosing a freezer.

New Unit Has Same Effect As Melting 15 Tons of Ice

A NEW LINE of self-contained air-conditioning units for business establishments can provide a cooling effect equal to the melting of 15 tons of ice each 24 hours.

Announcement of the new line was made by Kent Boucher, manager of the Carrier Division of United Clay Products Co.

According to Boucher, Carrier Weathermakers in three, five and 7½ horsepower capacities have been completely redesigned and 10 and 15 horsepower units added. The new units will meet air-conditioning needs in all types of stores, restaurants, markets and office suites, he said.

Carrier has also introduced a new cooling tower, Boucher reported, for use with the Weathermakers. The tower cuts the amount of water needed for this type of air condit oning.

The towers recirculate and cool water that normally would be drained off after absorbing heat while passing through the air-conditioning unit. Almost the only water loss is by evaporation, according to Boucher.

The new units are unusually quiet in operation and have been stepped up in efficiency, he said. Dehumidifying action is speeded up on sultry days by a device called the Humitrol. "A 15-horsepower unit will pull as much as 32 gallons of water out of the air on a normally muggy day in an area of 4000 square feet," Boucher reported.

How Long to Store It

	Months		Months
Fruits	12	Cheese	3-4
Vegetables	12	Cream	4-6
Beef	10-12	Eggs	6-8
Veal	10-12	Bread, baked	12
Lamb	10-12	Bread, unbaked	½-2
Pork	3-6	Cakes, baked	4-8
Poultry	6-8	Cakes, unbaked	2-3
Fatty fish	3	Pies	2-6
Lean fish	6	Cookies, baked	12
Seafood	4-6	Cookies, unbaked	6-9
